U.S. Given Assurance British Fleet Will Never Surrender

23 Nazi Raiders Shot Down in Early Phase of Fighting

Attack Beaten off After One Hour Of Heavy Fighting

London, Sept. 3 (CP)—Two German attempts to smash through London's air defences failed today against the combined fire of British Fighter planes and anti-aircraft guns.

The second attempt kept London under air alarm for one hour and ten minutes from 2.50 p.m. to 4 p.m. (9:50 to 11 a.m. E.S.T.).

British and German planes fought spectacularly over the Thames Estuary, waterway to London, marking the first anniversary of Britain's declaration of war one of the conflict's biggest air battles.

Observers said about 300 raiders were beaten off by British Fighters and ground defences.

An Air Ministry announcement said 23 German planes had been destroyed during the day. British losses were 15 aircraft, eight of the pilots of which were known to be safe.

At least seven German raiders were reported shot down in the early phases of today's air fighting, three over the English Channel, three others in an attack on the Thames estuary and another near a southeast coast town.

The main German attacks apparently were directed again chiefly at airdromes in southeastern England, which have been attacked repeatedly since the Germans first broke through to the London area in force on Aug. 18 to bomb Croydon.

Meanwhile the Admiralty announced that a Norwegian torpedo-boat cooperating with British naval forces had shot down a German dive bomber which attacked the torpedo-boat and a nearby merchantship.

Fighting Lasts An Hour.

In the earlier repulse of the German mass attack on the southeast coast, fighting lasted more than an hour before the Germans scattered

Why The Weather?

Weight of the air! The ancients had no idea that gases could be weighed with scales, although an Athenian recognized that it was the weight of the air that raised water in the common pump. The weight of the atmosphere at sea level holds up 29.92 inches of mercury in a barometer, which means a column of water over 33 feet high. At the top of Mount Everest the mercurial column is only eleven inches. In the stratosphere ascent of Captains Stevens and Anderson in the balloon, Explorer II, an elevation of 72,391 feet was attained and the barometer read about 1 24 inches. One hundred cubic feet of air at that height would weigh one-fourth of a pound, while at sea level it would weigh eight pounds.

Fifth Columnists Suspected in Helping Raiders

London, Sept. 3—(CP Cable) — Fifth columnists are suspected of signalling raiders in different parts of Britain.

A trio of women believed to have signalled from the rooftop of a house in Willesden, a London borough, are detained by police.

Vigilant air raid wardens in a northwest England town discovered a number of oblong shaped bits of polished metal with strong reflective powers lying in grass on an open space.

Experts surmised that the mirrors were deliberately placed to indicate the proximity of a military objective when flares were dropped.

MANY TOURISTS SEEN AT C.N.E.

Largest Labor Day Crowd in Eleven Years Noted on Monday

Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP)—Officials of the Canadian National Exhibition announced today that 234,000 persons, including hundreds of United States tourists, jammed into the Fair Grounds yesterday for the largest Labor Day attendance in eleven years.

Thousands of automobiles carrying entertainment seekers poured in a record-breaking stream about the grounds and presented officials and police with the biggest Labor Day traffic jam in the 62-year history of the Exposition. Extra police were called out to handle the crowds and the cars. Highways about Toronto were jammed last night with out-of-town residents driving home and thousands of others driving into Toronto after week-ends at cottages and vacation resorts.

Yesterday's attendance compared with 192,000 last year. Total attendance since the Fair started August 25th has been 1,144,000, just 42,000 less than last year's attendance to this date. The Fair closes this Saturday.

Pro-Japanese Newsman Killed by Chinese

Shanghai, Sept. 3—(AP)— Liu Han-Ha, a nationalized Japanese who recently was named President of a pro-Japanese Chinese language newspaper, was shot and killed by two Chinese gunmen today in a restaurant in the International Settlement. The assassins escaped before police could reach the scene.

The newspaper executive whose post Liu was expected to assume shortly was assassinated on June 26. He was known as a follower of Wang Ching-Wei, head of the Japanese-sponsored Chinese regime at Nanking.

Scene of the shooting was the British defence sector, taken over by the Shanghai volunteer corps temporarily since the withdrawal of British troops.

"Tide Flowing Towards Victory" Times Says in Counting Assets

Predicts Germany and Italy Will Increase Pressure on All Three Fronts in Near Future

DORNIERS TRAPPED

London, Sept. 3 (CP)—A change in the course of the war within the first few weeks of its second year, which opened today, is regarded as likely by observers watching struggles apparently coming to a head simultaneously in Britain, the Balkans and the Mediterranean.

They predicted Germany and Italy would increase pressure on all three fronts and then swing their weight quickly into which ever showed the least resistance.

Britons were confident, however, their air force would gain the upper hand. The London Press unanimously took this view today in summarizing the war's first year.

The tide is "already flowing towards victory," said The Times, which counted among Britain's assets that "sympathy for our cause has been widening in America" where there is "a progressive realization that the ideas we are defending" are ideas on which "their republic, and all the policies of human civilization have been built."

CANADA MAY MAN SOME DESTROYERS TAKEN IN DEAL

Minister for Naval Services Refuses to Discuss Recent Agreement

BASES INSPECTED

Bases in Newfoundland Valued at $16,000,000 Now Guarded by Canadian Troops

Ottawa, Sept. 3 (CP)—News of the United States Government's decision to send Great Britain 50 destroyers under a reciprocal arrangement which gives the United States defence bases in Newfoundland and the West Indies, was received here without official comment.

Copies of President Roosevelt's message to Congress announcing the arrangement were in the hands of the External Affairs Department some time in advance of the release from Washington but officials there said they would not comment at the moment.

Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services, now enroute to Vancouver, said some days ago that Canada would be in a position to man some of the United States destroyers if negotiations for their acquisition proved successful.

Refused Comment

At the same time the Minister was asked if there was any likelihood of some of the United States destroyers becoming attached to the Canadian navy but he refused to comment.

It is believed possible the United States craft may be delivered in Canadian waters to be manned by personnel coming out from England, as well as by what navy crews may be available in Canada.

The entire transaction is one concerning only the Governments of the United States and Great Britain although the Canadian Government has been kept constantly informed

None of the bases concerned, as mentioned in the President's message, are in Canada but land and sea air bases in Newfoundland valued at $16,000,000 have been under protection of Canadian troops since early in the war.

Other bases to be leased by the United States are all British possessions over which Canada has no jurisdiction, although Canadians have been assisting in protection of Bermuda.

Acquisition of a United States base in Newfoundland has been expected for some weeks. Air Minister Power recently announced that $1,000,000 was being spent on facilities for a much larger force than now is in Newfoundland.

Last week five service bombers of the Canada-United States Joint Defence Board, representing the air and navy arms of the two countries, made a flying trip to Newfoundland in the course of an inspection tour on which they will base recommendations for joint defence of North America.

United States Acquires Naval and Air Bases In British Possessions

President Roosevelt Announces Agreement Between Two Countries Stating Bases at Newfoundland and Bermuda Are Gifts From Great Britain—Bases to be Leased From Britain Are Islands of Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad and Antigua, British Guiana.

Washington, Sept. 3—(AP)—President Roosevelt notified Congress today of an agreement between the United States and Great Britain under which the American Government will lease naval and air bases in British possessions in the North and South Atlantic and transfer 50 over-age destroyers to Britain.

The United States will acquire naval and air bases in Newfoundland and in the islands of Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad, and Antigua, and in British Guiana.

"The right to bases in Newfoundland and Bermuda are gifts—generously given and gladly received," the President said in a special message.

"The other bases mentioned have been acquired in exchange for 50 of our over-age destroyers."

SEARCH PRESSED FOR BAND OF 36 ARMED CONVICTS

One Guard Killed and Two Girls and Boy Kidnapped by Desperate Gang in Arkansas

SURROUNDED IN WOODS

Cummins Prison Farm, Ark., Sept. 3 (AP)—Grim posses in widely separated sections of Arkansas and Louisiana pressed a hot chase today for scattered members of a band of 36 convicts who killed a guard and wounded another in a Labor Day escape from the Arkansas penitentiary here.

Two of the escapees, both ringleaders, were captured after a 30-minute gun battle at Garland City in extreme southwestern Arkansas early today. No one was injured.

Another band of five armed convicts, cornered along a highway near Columbia, La., at about the same time killed Frank Gartman a posseman, while using three youthful hostages as shields.

The convicts, surrounded in a clump of trees two miles northeast of Columbia, still had with them two girls and a boy whom they abducted yesterday when they took the youths' automobile at Rayville La.

Gartman, Columbia automobile dealer, was shot and killed when, as a citizen-deputy he approached the parked automobile of the convicts.

The abducted youths were Anna Laura Diamond, daughter of the Rayville Marshal, Voncicle Williams and Jerry Harnigle, all about 16 or 17 years old.

Most of the escapees were believed on foot in the dense woods and bottomlands surrounding this sprawling prison camp where the merit system, using trusty convicts for armed guards, has long been in force.

The break, biggest in Arkansas penal history, was led by four of these prison guards and four prisoners from the ranks. The break started in a pea field, far from the main prison camp, while a picking crew of 134 men and 10 guards relaxed after the noon meal.

The four renegade trusties began disarming their fellow guards quietly, but violence broke when Frank Conley, 34, a rank man serving 21 years for robbery and kidnapping, attacked Troy Wade, a shotgun armed guard, with a knife.

When Claude Martin 41, another guard, started to lift his rifle, Conley seized Wade's gun and shot Martin with both barrels, prison authorities said.

As Martin fell face downward, they added Percy Loftin, 25, a rifle-armed guard serving life plus 52 years for murder kidnapping and robbery, shot him in the back. Martin died instantly. Wade was only slightly wounded by the knife attack.

SURVIVES FOUR ACCIDENTS

Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP).—Survivor of at least four serious accidents in as many years, Roy Ley, 27, Toronto, was still able to smile as he described a coal dust explosion at a dry cleaning plant which caused him painful facial and arm burns today.

Three years ago he fell four storeys down an elevator shaft. Five years ago he was crushed by a truck, and two weeks ago fell from a ladder.

OUTSTANDING MEN TO AID CANADA'S NEW WAR LOAN

National Committee of 200 Prominent Leaders Will Assist in Floating of 2nd War Loan

$300,000,000 OBJECTIVE

Ottawa, Sept. 3—(CP)—A national committee of 200 outstanding Canadians, including labor leaders and bank presidents, is sponsoring Canada's second war loan which will be opened for subscription next Monday.

Terms and amount of the new loan will be announced late Thursday night but it is understood the objective will be between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000. The first war loan, issued last January, was for $200,000,000 but applications then greatly exceeded the subscriptions accepted.

Heading the campaign is Finance Minister Ilsley who will serve as chairman of the national committee. He is assisted by five former finance ministers and the fine provincial treasurer who will head the provincial committees, personnel of which was announced last night by Mr. Ilsley.

The five are Rt. Hon. Sir Thomas White, Hon. Sir Henry Drayton, Hon. C. A. Dunning, Hon. E. N. Rhodes and Hon. J. L. Ralston, now Minister of National Defence. Mr. Dunning is also chairman of the national subscription committee which will deal particularly with large subscriptions.

BRITAIN SPENT $2,000,000,000 IN U.S. IN FIRST YEAR

10 PLANES A DAY

Washington, Sept. 3—(AP)—Britain has ordered a $2,000,000,000 bill of goods in the United States since she declared war on Hitler a year ago today.

British purchasing agents, who gave this figure, estimated that another $2,000,000,000 in orders would be forthcoming in the second year ahead.

Britain has bought nearly everything from fire hose to airplanes. The list runs into hundreds of items, but with the air war growing more intense, the emphasis has been constantly on planes. About $1,200,000,000 of the first year's contracts were for aircraft.

MILITARY LEADERS SEND WARNING TO BUCHAREST

Thousands Kneel in Public Square Pledging Death to Traitors Who Acquiesced in Agreement

STATE OF UNREST

German Motorized Divisions to Protect Rumania's South Bucovina Border

Bucharest, Sept. 3 (AP). — German motorized divisions will take over on Sept. 15 protection of Rumania's south Bucovina border, newly formed by Rumania's cession of North Bucovina to Soviet Russia, informed sources said today.

This first line of defence against the possibility of any further Russian penetration in that area, they said, will be centred at Vatra Donei, with Rumania's own forces dropping back to form a second line in the vicinity of Piatra Meant.

The reported date for German forces to take over is two days after Hungarian occupation of northern Transylvania, ceded by Rumania under the axis' dictate, is slated to be completed.

Both Rumanian government and semi-official German sources said strong Nazi forces would be supplemented by some Italians as a token of axis collaboration in the guarantees given King Carol's country in the Vienna arbitration last week.

Trouble Continues in Transylvania.

Troubled conditions in northern Transylvania continued with clashes for possession of communications, railway stations and barracks reported in some places between armed Hungarian groups and Rumanian gendarmes and police.

From border towns came reports of sporadic armed clashes with many injuries and some deaths.

NINE ARE ARRESTED

Toronto, Sept. 3—(CP) — Eight men and one woman were arrested in Toronto during the holiday week-end on charges in connection with the National Registration. Police yesterday started a thorough check-up, and visited pool rooms and other places where all present were asked to show their registration cards.

Among those arrested, who will appear in court later, were two naturalized Germans.

Mr. Average John Bull Confident Gov't. Will Stand Up to Hitler

Citizens Want to See British Troops Marching Down Unter Den Linden

NO GRUMBLING

London, Sept. 3.— (CP)—Mr. Average John Bull, the little man who pays for wars and fights them, has had a year of it and in spite of loss of sleep, bombings the black-out, food rations and high taxes is not dissatisfied with himself.

As he sees it, he has three reasons not to feel downhearted.

First, he gets a sincere thrill out of the thought that John Bull alone, of all Hitler's antagonists, has lasted, and he is confident he will outlast Hitler, too.

Second, he knows he has a government that will "stand up to" Hitler. Winston Churchill, the Prime Minister and his war cabinet, including the working-class Ministers of Labor and of Supply Ernest Bevin and Herbert Morrison, are known to be implacable foes of Nazism.

Third, despite curtailment of many hard-won liberties many a Briton thinks his country will be a better place to live in after the war is over, and that it will lead to reforms in the social structure.

But talk of Europe's political reorganization, some time in the dim future, bores him just now. He wants to see "our boys marching down that Unter Den Linden".

Henry fought through the last war from Mons to the victory. He has a son in today's army, a lance corporal in an infantry battalion that lost heavily in Flanders.

Henry, himself, is an air raid warden. After nine hours at his desk in the "city", London's financial district, he puts on his tin hat and gas mask and patrols his district.

If he gets three hours sleep these night, he's lucky.

His wife, Marian, is a telephone operator in the Auxiliary Fire Service. Her hours are midnight to 8 a.m. She gets home in time to cook breakfast and send Henry to work, then goes out to shop.

Henry has the average Londoner's "mustn't grumble" attitude about food. He admits it's tough, however, to get enough eggs and bacon in the morning. He misses his peacetime cups of tea which he didn't have to count. Now he has four.

Henry's salary hasn't been cut, but two wartime governmental budgets have taken big bites out of it. He says that's all right with him, so long as everyone is doing his share.

Announcement is Made Today of British Intentions

Washington Makes Public Statement Of British Premier

Washington, Sept. 3 — (AP)—Great Britain has given the United States definite assurance of its intentions "never to surrender or sink the British fleet in the event of the waters surrounding the British Isles becoming untenable for His Majesty's ships."

The U.S. State Department made this known today by making public an exchange of correspondence between State Secretary Cordell Hull and Lord Lothian, British ambassador.

The announcement was made public after the White House announced an arrangement for the acquisition of air and naval base sites from Great Britain and the transfer of 50 over-age destroyers.

Inquiry Made by Hull

Lord Lothian informed the United States Government that any conjecture about fleet destruction seemed "more likely to concern the German fleet or what is left of it than the British fleet".

The State Department was told the British fleet in the last resort would "be sent overseas for defence of other parts of the Empire".

In his letter Mr. Hull wrote.—"The Prime Minister of Great Britain is reported to have stated on June 4, 1940, to Parliament in effect that if during the course of the present war in which Great Britain and the British Commonwealth are engaged the waters surrounding the British Isles should become untenable for British Ships of War, the British fleet would in no event be surrendered or sunk but would be sent overseas for the defence of other parts of the Empire.

"The government of the United States would respectfully inquire whether the foregoing statement represents the settled policy of the British Government".

In his reply, dated yesterday, Lord Lothian said "this statement certainly does represent the settled policy of His Majesty's government".

The Ambassador added: "These hypothetical contingencies seem more likely to concern the German fleet or what is left of it than the British fleet".

SOLDIERS CONTINUE TO IMPROVE

Pembroke, Ont., Sept. 3—(CP)—Sgt. J. R. Donnell of Chateauguay, Que., Bdr. A. R. E. Gardiner of East Greenfield, Que. and Gnr. J. P. McMillan, injured last Thursday in a premature shell explosion at the nearby Petawawa military camp, continue to improve, hospital authorities said today.

They were among nine soldiers injured in the explosion, which also took the lives of two others. The others injured have left hospital.

German Airman Contributes to Spitfire Fund

London, Sept. 3 (CP)—A small contribution to a Spitfire fund was placed in a fund collection box by a German airman who was brought down in a battle over Kent, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported Monday.

The train in which the German prisoner was travelling under armed escort, stopped at a station and on the platform was a Spitfire collection box. The prisoner, after questioning his escort as to what and why the box was there, took a five mark note from his wallet and placed it in the box through the open window of the train.

LONDON PAPERS VIEW THE FUTURE WITH CONFIDENCE

OTHER COMMENT

London, Sept. 3 (CP Cable)—Britain's morning newspapers, taking the first anniversary of the war as the keynote of their editorial comment, viewed the future with confidence today but recalled the dark days of the French collapse.

The News Chronicle, looking back across recent weeks, said:—

"The people of Britain, deserted by France, found themselves by July, to their indignant astonishment, faced for a few desperate days with the possibility of defeat.

"The discovery turned the tide, however, and the supreme will of the people, under the inspired leadership of the Prime Minister, wrenched strength out of the weakness and preparedness out of the chaos."

The Regular Baptist Sunday School had their picnic to the Outlet on Labor Day. The Sunday School members appreciated very much the untiring efforts of Mrs. J. Hanna and Mrs. Baker and all those who assisted, especially Mr. Zebedee, who donated a truck.

FORCE OF IMPACT BENDS STANDARD

Blinded by the powerful headlights of oncoming motor vehicles, an automobile driven by Cecil Macklin of Stirling, collided with a Department of Highways sign on the four-lane highway near the eastern entrance to the city last night. The force of the impact bent the metal standard and the highway sign narrowly missed crashing through the car windshield. Mr. Macklin personally drove to the city police station and reported the accident. "The headlights of an approaching motor vehicle were so bright I slowed down as I was being blinded. It is fortunate I did slow down as I did not see the highway sign standard," Mr. Macklin reported to Traffic Officer Doug. Ellis. The radiator, headlight and bumper of the motor car were damaged, while the highway standard was broken off by the force of the impact. (Incidentally the standard carried a caution and safety highway sign.)

BODY IS FOUND FLOATING IN BAY

Benjamin Simpson, Missing Since Last Thursday, Discovered by Fire Chief and His Assistant

Missing from his home since Thursday, the body of Benjamin Simpson, 65, Bay Street, Belleville, was found floating in the bay by members of a searching party which had combed the shoreline waters for the past three days.

The body was discovered by Fire Chief William Lynch and Fireman Frank Post, about three hundred yards directly south of the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge and one hundred feet west of Victoria Park. The discovery was reported to police, who notified Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson. There will be no inquest.

The deceased man was last seen on Thursday crossing the bridge. From that time he had not been home and anxious relatives notified authorities. City police and firemen organized searching parties and dragged the waters of the bay without success until ten o'clock yesterday morning.

District N. P. A. M. Units Entrain for Petawawa Camp For Two Weeks of Training

1,200 Officers and Men in Full Marching Kit Viewed by Many on Sunday

VERY EFFICIENT

Twelve hundred district non-permanent active militiamen left their familiar walks of life on Monday, and clad in the khaki habiliments of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank); the 34th Battery R.C.A., and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, bade a temporary farewell to home-life and relatives to entrain for Petawawa, where they will spend the next two weeks in military training as set down by the Department of National War Services.

Bugle calls shattered the misty stillness of a typical September morning. The roll of drums and the throaty blare of a military band, echoed and re-echoed in empty streets at an early hour. Then, as though a fairy wand had been waved over the scene people appeared from nowhere. Within a half-hour, after a corps of buglers had sounded the "fall in", spectator-lined pavements echoed cheers as the smartly efficient companies of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) swung from the Armories parade ground to Pinnacle Street and from there to the Canadian Pacific Railway station.

A few minutes later members of the 34th Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, swung down Church Street to the station where they, too, entrained for the large Eastern Ontario training centre.

Military Precision

Belleville's civilian volunteers of the non-permanent active militia were a living exemplification of the adaptability of young Canadians to military training and discipline. The black-bereted Argylls, looking deadly efficient in battle-dress with rifles at the slope and packs slung on brawny backs, "snapped" to attention with all the smartness of a world-war veteran. They moved off with a military precision that bespoke enthusiasm in their work, and marched to their destination with not an eye turned to the right or left.

Led by their commanding officer, Lieut. Colonel A. B. Gribbie, the regiment swung down Pinnacle Street followed by a large crowd of friends, relatives and the curious. At the station they rapidly entrained on waiting troop trains, although embarkation was hampered somewhat by friends and relatives anxious to say a last good-bye.

Scarcely had the train disappeared, and the crowd dispersed than the cheering shouting advance guard of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment rolled down Pinnacle Street in large trucks.

From Madoc, Marmora and other northern points, the khaki-clad militiamen came, a happy whooping throng to meet their comrades from Trenton, Wellington and Picton. Entraining at the C.N.R. station, the regiment in a dozen railway cars rolled down Pinnacle Street to the C.P.R. tracks, to the accompaniment of another large crowd of spectators.

Like their comrades of the Argylls, the H. and P. E.'s showed evidence of training. They too were smart, efficient and immaculate in their khaki battle-dress with forage caps of the same color.

It was a cross-section of the business, professional and industrial life of the city, that moved out en masse from familiar places of business and employment to the grim realities of a military training camp. A county judge strode along the route of march, ahead of him a truck driver. A hospital superintendent marched smartly in front of a window-washer, a clerk and a carpenter. A bank manager kept in step with a junior clerk. Salesmen, business executives, laborers, bookkeepers were welded into an efficient whole by the magic of military training and discipline.

For two weeks they will live in an aura of real army life. They will arise with "reveille" and sleep with the echoes of "Lights Out" ringing in their ears. They will drill and march under the capable eyes of a corps of competent instructors. And the result will be efficient regiments of civilian soldiers ready for any emergency.

BUCK, DOE SEEN NEAR MOIRA LAKE

Said by veteran hunters to be a sign of an early winter, a handsome buck and doe deer were seen yesterday contentedly grazing in a pasture field about one and one-half miles south of Moira Lake.

The animals appeared to be well-fed, and showed little alarm at traffic driving along the highway. The buck was of a handsome reddish color with its horns still in the "velvet."

Other travellers returning from the north country reported the presence of wild ducks in the regions of some of the northern lakes.

EDGAR FOSTER HOOKS 22-POUND 'LUNGE

Local Isaak Waltons took advantage of the last "long weekend" before the official closing of the fishing season, and rivers, lakes and bays had their quota of fish-seeking enthusiasts. A number of good catches were reported principally among which were a fine 22 pound "mushkie" hauled in by Edgar Foster of this city from the waters of the bay near Massassaga Point.

West Lake and the Trent River gave up good hauls of bass and pickerel, but fishermen reported the waters of Lake Ontario near Waupoos and Black Creek, usually the haunt of schools of small-mouth bass, were anything but productive of good fishing.

MOST ONTARIO SCHOOLS OPEN ON SCHEDULE

Students Who Are Engaged in War Efforts Will be Given Special Tuition Later

MUCH OPPOSITION

(By the Canadian Press)

In all but a few scattered sections Ontario's schools re-opened today on schedule despite the plea early in August of Premier Hepburn for a later opening so that boys and girls might help with farm work or sell War Savings Stamps.

The provision stands generally, however that students who wish to engage in these phases of the war effort may delay their return and arrangements will be made by school officials whereby such students will miss no tuition.

Ottawa, Sarnia and Galt education authorities have decided not to open their schools until Sept. 16. At Windsor and the adjoining town of Riverside, separate schools will remain closed until Sept. 16, but public and secondary schools open today.

Students of Stratford's Collegiate-Vocational Institute and public schools will be enrolled and registered Sept. 16, the day school opens. The Cobourg Collegiate Board announced the school will re-open Sept. 9 but students are to enroll Sept. 6. Those wishing to work at the harvest or go to camp with units of the non-permanent active militia will be granted leave of absence.

Brantford's public schools and Collegiate are scheduled to open Sept. 9. Mr. Hepburn has announced that the Provincial Normal Schools and the Ontario College of Education will not open until Oct. 1.

Duck Shooting Out of Season Brings Charge

What resembled an organized blitzkrieg on wild ducks resulted in charges being preferred upon William Farrell, of Hillier, last week following an investigation looking into the matter of so much shooting in the vicinity of Pleasant Bay, investigations being made by Game Warden Herb McCabe. Farrell was found to be in the possession of six wild ducks, Inspector McCabe revealed today when the latter made it known that charges of taking migratory birds out of season, to wit the shooting of wild ducks, contrary to the Ontario Game and Fishery Act. The matter was enlarged until Sept. 17th at Picton.

Inspector McCabe also revealed that charges of angling without a licence had been preferred against several American anglers, who had been apprehended angling off Point Traverse recently. "These American fishermen from across Lake Ontario sailing into Canadian waters, take as many fish as they can load into their boats. They are nothing short of poachers. I am not referring to the conventional tourist from south of the border, who comes to Canada and angles, but rather those who live just across the lake and who make a practice of sailing into Canadian waters without so much as touching our shores," revealed Inspector McCabe today as he added that fines had been levied in two such cases and warnings issued.

POLICE COURT

Hyman J. Brown and Joseph Iseman, both of Toronto, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in local police court today charged with vagrancy. The pair was taken into custody at the Belleville Fair on Saturday and today remanded in custody for week.

"Could we get bail? I've work to go to," pleaded Brown.

"There were reports of pickpockets being active at the Fair and these men are being held for further investigation," revealed Chief Kidd as he urged no bail be set at this time. His Worship remanded the pair in custody.

Three inebriates appeared on charges of imbibing too freely and admitted the charges today. None of the accused men were able to produce sufficient money to pay their fines and they were given the conventional jail term in default.

Chief Biddle of Picton reported the theft of a 1929 model Pontiac over the holiday. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 817-X-3.

Two bicycles, which were stolen in Belleville over the week-end were subsequently found abandoned by the police. Joy-riders are believed to have been responsible in both cases.

TWELVE PERMITS TOTAL $11,715

Three of the Permits for Construction of New Residences

Twelve building permits, totalling $11,715 were issued in the city of Belleville during the month of August, it was learned at the city engineer's office this morning. Of the twelve issued three were for the construction of new residences and one for a warehouse while the balance were issued for alterations to dwellings or for construction of garages and other small buildings.

A permit issued to Samuel Hibbard for construction of a residence at 268 Bridge Street E., at a cost of $3,500 proved the biggest item on the month's construction program with the other two permits being issued to J. B. Bradshaw for a dwelling on Parker Street at an estimated cost of $2,000, and to Harold Quincey for a residence at 371 Coleman Street at a cost of $1,600.

Construction of a new warehouse by the Belleville Metal and Waste Company on the site of the one which burned on South John Street early last spring was the only other major construction planned for the month. Alterations to dwellings and the construction of garages accounted for the balance of the month's building list.

Many Visitors View Night-Blooming Cereus

Proud owner of a night blooming cereus, of rare beauty and charm, Mrs. M. A. Phillips, 32 Pine Street, has had the pleasure of seeing the plant which she has treasured for fifteen years blossom for the first time. The blossoms in this case were not confined to one or two, as six blooms have reached maturity and six buds are developing. On Sunday, two blooms unfolded at the same time, an unusual occurrence for this plant which, once in seven years is transformed from an ordinary-looking plant of the cactus variety to one of incredible loveliness by the exotic blossoms it produces.

The waxen beauty of the flower and its unusual fragrance linger for only a day. At midnight the blossom is at perfection. Slowly then, it starts to droop, and in a few hours, it fades and hangs limp from its stem.

Visitors who were privileged to see this flower at the home of Mrs. Phillips were fascinated by its history and appearance. This particular plant has grown to a splendid height. The flowers grow from one of the cactus-like 'pricks' on the side of the long leaf, and appear as a tight tube of green, until the day when the flower begins to open and reveal its amazing beauty.

Veteran's Home Guard Expresses Appreciation For Electric Iron, Radio

Members of the Belleville platoon of the Veterans' Home Guard now on duty at Fort Henry, near Kingston, who launched an appeal for a radio and an electric iron recently will be able to listen to their favorite air programs, and press their clothes in modern comfort.

For two of Belleville's outstanding business firms came to the aid of the "old swaddies" and saw that their needs were filled. The Bowra Electric Company, Front Street, presented the boys with a radio with the Hydro Electric Commission forwarding the electric iron.

A representative of the Belleville members of the guard in the city on leave over the weekend expressed the appreciation of the entire company for the fine gesture made by the Belleville firms in presenting them with the much-needed articles.

Clergyman Volunteers For Munition Work

While ministers of the gospel are usually associated with the country's war effort in the role of chaplains with His Majesty's armed forces, there is one "gentleman of the cloth" who is exchanging his pulpit for the lathe in a war munitions plant.

He is the Rev. Richard Upton, minister of the Gleither, Alta., United Church, whose application for a position as an armourer artificer was received today by Employment Officials here.

Mr. Upton is a veteran of the last war, serving four years as an artificer in a machine-gun battalion with the Imperial Army. Prior to his turning to the pulpit, he was engaged with the Armstrong-Siddeley Company famous armament manufacturers of Coventry, England. He came to Canada several years ago, and joined the ministry. Today, however, he is answering the country's call for skilled mechanics and in the near future will don the mchinist's overalls in a new yet familiar environment.

H.M.C.S. NAPANEE CORVETTE-TYPE VESSEL LAUNCHED

Kingston, Scene of Launching, Boat Being Christened by Mrs. Angus Macdonald

ANOTHER KEEL LAID

Kingston, Sept. 3.—In this quiet city where shipyards had been almost dormant since the last war, where Saturday afternoon they laid the keel of a new war vessel minutes after her predecessor slipped down the ways, scores of workmen cheered the exciting drama of a "side launching".

It was the launching of a new corvette-type vessel "Napanee", another in the Royal Canadian Navy's swiftly expanding fleet.

It was a proud moment for Mrs. Angus Macdonald, wife of Canada's minister of naval affairs, as she swung the champagne bottle to christen the first warship launched in her husband's new federal constituency. It was a proud moment also, for the navy, government and shipbuilding officials when they watched Mr. Macdonald take a sledgehammer and drive the first rivet in the keel of a new corvette, laid on the spot where the "Napanee" had been built. Present to assist in both ceremonies were Commander A. C. M. Davy, the navy's director of shipbuilding, and Lieut. John Farrow, controller of naval information.

Workmen Proud

But proudest of all were the grimy workmen who built the "Napanee", and who today set themselves a record time for their second ship. "Out before the freeze-up" they wagered visitors. "Out and serving on the Atlantic!"

For these men today climaxed not only months of intensive effort in building the ship, but a week of precise effort for the side launching—determined in advance to the split second For them it entailed hours of precise, arduous labour, and carefully co-ordinated plans.

Long before, for instance, they had ordered special 53-foot lengths of No. 1 B.C. fir from the Pacific coast. They ordered 700 pounds of tallow to grease the ways, and mixed it Saturday to a consistency determined by the temperature. They ordered 3,000 wedges for "ramming up"; built "butterboards" and "cradles" and constructed "triggers" of blue oak, Canada's strongest practical wood.

Swing Axes As One

Just before the launch their sledgehammers beat a tattoo like the rattle of machine-gun fire as they drove wedges to ram the ship up on its sliding ways. Immediately before she went down four men stood with axes at four holding ropes, and to ensure she went down evenly swung their axes as one to release her.

When she went down the ways, gathering a speed of 30 miles an hour in her short plunge of 35 feet at a drop of an inch and five-eighths in every foot, another four workmen had a thrilling ride high in her wheelhouse enclosure. Their duty was to tie her in to the dock. But come with the naval officer-in-charge to see the inside story of the "Napanee" launching.

Until launching preparations begin she sits on "keel blocks", heavy blocks of wood directly under her keel. At the sides she is supported by timbers, called "shores". Under her are first placed the ways; "cradles" are built up between the ways and the bottom of the ship; wedges are used to tighten the cradles until the weight of the vessel rests on the ways, and then the shores fall away and the keel blocks are knocked out.

The cradles are built on "sliding ways", popularly called "butterboards". When the ship goes down, it takes with it the hundreds of pieces of wood that make up the butterboard and the cradles, and the ship is held firm on them until she drops her 32 inches to the water.

"Triggers" Hold Ship

Just before the launch four "triggers" are built. For a few breath-taking seconds these stout blue oak timbers hold the ship after she has been freed from all other support, and is straining on the ways. They will not hold her long; they are supported by block-and-tackle and the supporting ropes are at breaking strain. The timbers are so arranged that when their supporting rope is freed they fly away under 11 tons of pressure, into prepared traps in the ground, as the ship breaks free.

The purpose of the triggers is to hold the ship long enough to even her up with four great 50-ton jacks if she slips forward a few inches at either end. She must go down evenly.

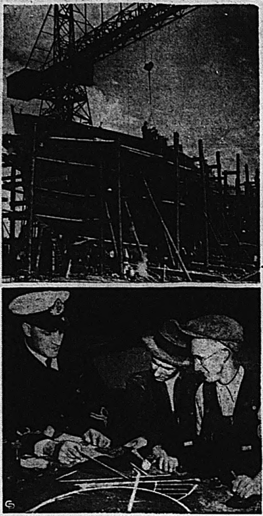
Back along the ropes holding the triggers are four men—one for each trigger—who have the most ticklish job of the launching. A "butcher's block" is laid under each of the ropes; these four men stand with broad axes, ready to strike simultaneously and release all four triggers at once, so that the ship will go down evenly. If one misses, the ship may not go down evenly, may even jam and overturn.

Early Saturday there was a constant tapping as the wedges in the cradles were driven in. It increased in a rising crescendo until just before the launching, when there was a mad tattoo of sound....then silence. Even on the official platform there was comparative silence—no bands or music, because the workmen below must be able to hear each other. By then the launching was far under way; it would have been impossible to stop the ship from going in.

In that short pause, just while the engineers check whether the ship has moved a quarter of an inch at either end and in the shift to the butterboards, there took place on the platform the impressive ceremony of blessing her. Then Mrs. Macdonald swung the champagne bottle....the ship first moved slowly, then fairly leaped away on the greased ways, her hundreds of tons hurtling down the dozen yards to the water. On top the four workmen in the wheelhouse enclosure hung on for dear life....then the ship hit the water and threw spray twice her height, rolled to a 45-degree angle and rocked madly in the basin.

Then the workmen threw their caps in the air and cheered themselves hoarse....and overhead, the great travelling crane gently dropped the keel plate for another corvette.

NAVAL CRAFT LAUNCHED AT KINGSTON



The latest war vessel to hit the water at Canadian shipyards, the Corvette-type vessel Napanee is shown (top) on the way at Kingston, Ont., a few minutes before she slipped into the water in a "side-launching." The new vessel was christened by Mrs. Angus Macdonald, wife of Canada's minister of naval affairs. At all Canadian shipyards that are building naval vessels, experts of the R.C.N. are on hand to give advice and supervise the work. Lieut. James Child, shipbuilding engineer, is shown (bottom) discussing a fine point of construction with Assistant Superintendent Dugald MacCorquodale (centre) and John Grieg, shipfitter.

SON IS KILLED BY NAZI SHELL

Mr. Peter Brawley, Marmora Township, Receives News of His Son's Death From Admiralty

Marmora (Special)—Mr. Peter Brawley of Marmora Township received the sad news last week of the death of his son, Charles, who was a fireman on the S. S. "King Alfred", as that steamer was struck in the engine room by a German shell on August 4th, with the loss of seven other lives. The communication was received from F. N. Matthews, secretary of Dodd, Thomson and Company, of Cardiff, South Wales, the owners of the lost ship. Charles Brawley will be remembered as a popular youth of Marmora Village some years ago before his return to the Homeland and it was with widespread regret that news was received of his having been a casualty in this war.

Threat of Invasion Has Not Passed Says Authony Eden

London, Sept. 3 (CP).—War Secretary Anthony Eden, in an anniversary message to the nation today, said "it would be most foolish to suppose that, because autumn approaches, the threat of invasion is already passed."

Addressing the National Defence Public Interest Committee at a luncheon, he continued:

"The contrary is the fact. There is no shred of evidence to show that Hitler has abandoned his declared intention to seek to subdue this country by invasion."

However, with the battle of Britain still beating "about our ears", August was "for us in many respects the best months of this fighting year":

"There is plenty of evidence to cause us to be especially watchful during these next few weeks," he said.

"Vigilance is as compelling a duty today as it has been at any time in these last three months. To watch and ward is our instruction, not as troops that hold passively a defensive line but as an army waiting to spring should the foe come within

Canada's War Chiefs

Col. The Hon. J. L. Ralston

Minister National Defence

COL. THE HON. J. L. RALSTON

Minister of National Defence

By C. R. BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
(Copyright, 1940, by The Canadian Press)

For the second time in a brilliant legal, military and political career James Layton Ralston of Amherst, N.S., finds himself guiding the destinies of Canada's armed forces from the Woods Building in Ottawa, the nerve centre of the Dominion's defence activities.

A quiet, unobtrusive man of medium height and stocky build Col. Ralston has stepped into the gigantic task of swiftly transforming a peace-loving people into a war machine.

Imperturbable, methodical and painstaking, with the qualities which carried him quickly to the top rank in the legal profession and won him high honors in the battlefield, Ralston has assumed his new task with humility and determination.

His appointment last July 5, to succeed his fellow townsman, the late Hon. Norman Rogers, was acclaimed by press and public throughout Canada.

For a time the Conservative opposition in parliament during the session recently adjourned, clamored for the retirement of Prime Minister Mackenzie King to make way for Col. Ralston as leader of the government.

Ralston remained the same grave, serious administrator, free and easy with his associates and as much at home in a gathering of war veterans as in the sanctity of the privy council chamber.

The pale and often wearied expression of Ralston's features belies the strength and endurance of his brain and rugged frame. He works long hours and always has done so, in war, in politics and in his legal activities.

Ralston is not much interested in games or outdoor pursuits for pleasure these days. He has little use for the stiff formalities of the uniformed services but realises their necessity at times and can be as dignified as any "brass hat" when it is required of him.

As defence minister in the Mackenzie King government from 1926 to 1930 Ralston was instrumental in organizing civilian flying clubs throughout Canada. Now he sees the benefits from those efforts to make Canada air conscious.

Today Ralston flies a great deal and on his travels necessitated by the work of organizing an army, whether he goes by car, train or plane, he usually takes a bulky portfolio of work or important staff associates with whom he may confer on pressing problems.

Ralston is happy with his associates in the defence department. Air Minister Power and Navy Minister Macdonald are both his comrades of the first great war. They call each other "Layton", Angus L." and "Chubby".

Career In Maritimes.

Ralston was born Sept. 27, 1881, in Amherst, N.S., where his immediate predecessor, Norman Rogers, was born fifteen years later. He was educated at Dalhousie University, Halifax and admitted to the Nova Scotia bar in 1903.

In 1916 he went overseas with the 85th Nova Scotia Highland Battalion as major and served continuously in France from Feb. 10, 1917 to the armistice.

His war career brought him the Distinguished Service Order and he was twice mentioned in despatches and was made a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Ralston was elected to the Nova Scotia legislature in 1911 and again in 1916 but was defeated in 1920 and 1925. In 1926 he was made defence minister and was given an acclamation in Yarmouth, after suffering defeat in the Dominion election of that year

When the King government was defeated in 1930 Ralston entered law practice in Montreal. He retained his seat in parliament and acted as opposition financial critic.

When the Dominion elections were called in 1935 Ralston decided to remain out of politics. He did until the war started last September when he placed himself at the disposal of the government in whatever capacity he could be used but expressed a preference for service overseas.

He was called at once to Ottawa to succeed the finance minister, Charles Dunning, whose resignation on account of illness had been in Mr. King's hands since July, 1939.

Prince County, Prince Edward Island, gave Ralston an acclamation in January last and a great majority in the Dominion elections of March 26.

He remained as finance minister until the budget had been presented June 24, but was already slated for the defence portfolio.

Col Ralston was married in 1907 to Nettie Winnifred, daughter of John McLeod of Amherst, and he has one son, Stuart.

JAMES E. GOULD TORONTO, KILLED, SEVERAL INJURED

Thrown From His Car After Allegedly Being Struck by Motorcycle East of Brighton

N. HOUSER HURT

Trenton, Sept. 3 — James E. Gould, 31 Oak Street, Toronto, was instantly killed and two others were seriously injured in an accident two miles east of Brighton, early Sunday morning on Highway 2, when a motor cycle collided with the rear of a truck.

Mrs. H. Erwin, 274 Boon Avenue, Toronto, suffered a fractured arm and her son Ronald suffered a fractured thumb and lacerations. Both were passengers in a sidecar of a motorcycle driven by Mr. Erwin. They were admitted to the Belleville General Hospital, where their condition is reported as favorable.

According to Traffic Officer D. Wilson of Colborne, who investigated the accident, the motorcycle collided with the rear of the truck, which is alleged to have been driven by Mr. Gould. The impact caused the front left hand door to open and fling the driven to the pavement. The motorcycle was thrown to the left side of the road and Mr. Erwin was tossed forty feet into the ditch but escaped with only minor injuries.

An inquest will be held at Brighton, according to Coroner Dr. H. C. Rundell. Constable F. Atkinson, Brighton, assisted Traffic Officer Wilson.

Trenton, Sept., 9—Nelson Houser, 90 McGill Street, Trenton, was critically injured and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital Saturday evening following an accident on Front Street. Mr. Houser is suffering from a fractured skull and concussion.

The injured man was thrown from his parked car when another car collided with the rear of the car, causing the door of the car to open. Both cars were badly damaged.

Constables J. Taylor and F. Lozo investigated the accident.

Trenton, Sept. 3—Pilot Officer William N. Mackinnon and his wife were seriously injured and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital following an accident two miles east of here early Sunday morning. P. O. Mackinnon suffered three fractured ribs, internal injuries while his wife escaped with minor lacerations and shock.

The car was proceeding easterly when it went out of control on a curve at Bayside, colliding with a guard rail fence, breaking off three posts. The car continued turning over in a deep ditch and was completely demolished.

Traffic Officer J. Hatch investigated the accident.

BRITISH REPORT 16 VESSELS LOST

13 Are of British Register—Total Tonnage Amounts to 79,750 Tons

London, Sept. 3—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that 16 merchant ships, 13 of them British, were destroyed by "enemy action" during the week ended August 25-26. They totalled 79,750 tons.

This total compared with an average weekly loss of 52,540 tons since the start of the war, the Admiralty said, but was below the average of 88,700 tons since May 27, when Germany intensified her war on shipping.

German losses total approximately 923,000 tons and Italian losses 273,000 tons since the outbreak of war, the Admiralty asserted.

"Enemy" claims to have sunk 183,964 tons of shipping during the week under review were declared to be "considerably over twice the actual recorded losses".

In a review of the first year of war at sea, a naval spokesman said enough action had been seen to prove that the chances of a successful air attack against an efficient fleet, either at sea or in harbor, are small.

"We have found our ships better in construction and operation than pre-war estimates", he said. "They have proved their value in every test".

The pre-war conception of defence against air attack has been shown to be "not very wrong", he added, "though we have to invest millions of pounds on theoretical construction for aerial defence".

The spokesman asserted war experience showed that "all naval defences" can be defended. As an example, he said, since the Orkneys Base at Scapa Flow was well armed against an aerial onslaught, it had not been molested.

On the "positive side" of the year's ledger, he also listed the items of British defeat of the magnetic mine, and continued control of the seas, including the Mediterranean.

MAE WAS A HOT-WEATHER OFFENDER

SCIENTIFIC FACTS ABOUT 'B.O.'

The adult skin has 2 to 3 million sweat glands which act as a cooling system, giving off from 1 to 3 pints of perspiration daily—even when we are sitting still. If perspiration stopped, we would die from hyperpyrexia (heat stroke).

Because much of the water in perspiration evaporates, we do not see or feel it. Summer heat, nervous excitement, heavy clothes or warm rooms quickly decompose this sweat deposit—turn it stale—cause offensive "B.O." (Body Odor).

MAE not only knew how to dance—she knew how to dress well, too. But what she did not know—or thought didn't matter—was that anybody who is careless can become a HOT-WEATHER OFFENDER.

All of us must perspire to live—just as we must breathe. Hot, sticky weather increases perspiration—and what is worse, it speeds up decomposition. Left on the body, sweat deposits go stale—decompose.

"B.O." can ruin romance, business and social chances. Check it before it starts by using Lifebuoy regularly. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive deodorizing ingredient not found in other leading toilet soaps. Used in your daily bath, Lifebuoy stops "B.O."—its rich, purifying lather washes away stale sweat deposits—protects you from offending others. It is also kind to the skin—20% milder than many so-called "beauty" and "baby" soaps, by actual test.

"HAVE A GOOD TIME ?"— HOW COULD I, WHEN NOBODY ASKED ME TO DANCE ?
WELL, MAE, IT'S TIME SOMEBODY TOLD YOU! YOU NEED LIFEBUOY THIS STICKY WEATHER

AT THE BELLE

"The Mortal Storm"

The stellar aggregation of Margaret Sullivan, James Stewart, Robert Young and Frank Morgan head the distinguished cast of "The Mortal Storm" film adaptation of the powerful Phyllis Bottome best-seller story of a family caught in the upheaval of a political storm, which will be the headline attraction starting next at the Belle Theatre.

Filmed under the direction of Frank Borzage, responsible for many of the screen's greatest successes, "The Mortal Storm" unfolds the timely and heart-stirring narrative of a family "somewhere in Europe," happy, contented, tolerant, then—suddenly awakening to find itself in the throes of a new order of things resulting from political oppression.

The family divides against itself. The sons become involved in the hatreds and passions of the political movement. The daughter breaks her engagement to the man who has loved her for years. The father is taken to a concentration camp. Dramatic moment after dramatic moment punctuate the story which rises to a powerful climax in the love of the daughter for a man of her own ideals, and their attempt to escape the prison walls of hatred and intolerance around them.

Miss Sullivan, James Stewart and Frank Morgan, the triumphant triumvirate of "The Shop Around the Corner," leave comedy behind to portray roles of stark dramatic intensity in "The Mortal Storm," with Miss Sullivan playing the daughter, Stewart the man with whom she ultimately attempts an escape, and Morgan the father of the tragic family. Young has the difficult role of the political fanatic, and important supporting roles are filled by Robert Stack, Bonita Granville, Irene Rich, William T. Orr, Maria Ouspenskaya and Gene Reynolds.

"Squadron 992"

On the same program the latest multiple-reel film of the popular Canada Carries On series this one entitled "Squadron 992", the thrilling Pictorial story—Britain's Air Defences—new links in the chain of her aerial armour, men from the Dominions train to defend the Mother Country.

"Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," showing at the Belle Theatre weaves a typical Hardy Family tale of the comedy, romance and drama to be found in the average American family and this time does it against the glamorous background of New York City. The picture involves Mickey Rooney, as Andy Hardy, in an hilarious attempt to crash the acquaintance of a dazzling Manhattan debutante with whose photograph he has become smitten back in Carvel. Lewis Stone as Judge Hardy, gives one of his best performances as the small-town jurist who defeats the best legal brains in New York in a case involving the financial welfare of the Carvel Orphanage. Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker and Sara Haden complete the "family" and Judy Garland scores as a sweet subdeb.

FRIGHTENED TO STUTTERING

State College, Pa., Sept. 3 (AP).—Evidence that stuttering in younger children only becomes serious after their elders discover the defect was reported to the American Speech Correction Association by Wendell Johnson, University of Iowa. He gave examples of children who really were not stuttering, but just repeating syllables smoothly, easily, maybe for fun. When worrying grown-ups said it was bad, the habit fixed itself on frightened child minds.

James Stewart and Margaret Sullavan are the Romantic twosome in "The Mortal Storm," a story of love and sacrifice. Not war! Next at the Belle.

OFF TO CAMP

Belleville's Non-Permanent Active Militia units, the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment under the command of Lt. Col. A. B. Gribble and the 34th Battery, R.C.A., under command of Capt. Hare, left on Monday for two weeks course of training at Petawawa Camp. The members of the unit are made up of professional and business men along with men from the trades and they are doing their share along with thousands of others throughout the country to defend Canada from the intolerable menace of aggression. Few of them have had previous military experience and it will certainly be a different manner of living for most of them to live in barracks or under tents and undergo rigid military discipline for two weeks. However, not only will they be doing their "bit" for their country but they will benefit physically from the training and regular hours and when they return they will have a better understanding of what a soldier's life is like as well as the fact that they will be well prepared to carry on under any emergency for which they may be called.

For those of us who stay at home we should realize that most of the volunteers have accepted their country's call at considerable personal sacrifice to do their share and if we have problems that require the attention of any one of these men then we should be willing to wait until their return rather than turn to some one else. In that way we will be helping those who help us.

ONE YEAR OF WAR

One year ago today Britain and France declared war on Germany for attack on Poland. The two great democracies stood by their pledge to Poland in an effort to call a halt, in as far as they were able, to further aggressions of the Nazi dictator and his group of unprincipled satellites. There was to be no more "Munichs" now for the leaders of the two Allied nations were sadly disillusioned men who had suffered great embarrassment by the broken promises of Hitler.

War was declared despite the knowledge that the enemy was better prepared for conflict and that no deed would be too low and base but what it would be used by him in an effort to achieve victory.

The history of the past year makes rather sad reading for all of us because so many small nations have been invaded and conquered along with the swift collapse of France. Their peoples have, in many cases, been subjected to unspeakable indignities and freedom is unknown in the lands under the German heel. Their only hope now is in Britain winning the war she is fighting so gallantly.

As one looks back over more than a year it is difficult to believe that anyone could have thought there was a way of escape out of the war, led as Germany was by Hitler and the Nazis inevitably to war through aggression piled upon aggression. If the war had not broken out when it did it had to come, for right had to take up arms to hold back the brutal aggressor. Hitler and his group had looked forward to the day when war would be necessary to bolster up his gangster methods. Hitler's military machine, mechanized as much as German science and means and totalitarianism could make it, was ready.

Hitler wanted power, he wanted to exercise his spite and vengeance, and that meant war for no power could accept any agreement or promise from the Nazi state. Hitler is the intithesis of everything that is precious in democracy and liberty, he is the tyrant with enough ignorance of the laws of the world and of life and morality, not to realize that he dooms himself.

Hitler meant Hitlerism for the world or war. Britain and France knew what Hitlerism meant and on the ghastly demonstration of Hitler's invasion of Poland they declared war on Germany in defence of the principles of liberty and justice. There was no way out for these sane nations, Britain and France. Hitler meant war or slavery, and the darkest cloud of night that could have settled on the world for generations if he could have won.

SCHOOL YEAR OF GREAT POSSIBILITIES

Back to school again have come thousands of boys and girls after the summer vacation. They show in their healthy bodies and minds the improvement which comes from contact with nature in the open spaces and in the health-giving rays of the sun.

They know how to play. That is an asset which they can never lose. It is one of the finest developments of child training that the play instinct is developed for play as they know it leads to the development of character and noble manhood and womanhood.

They live in an age on which rests the gravest responsibility. They have heard much of the talk of war, have read of it and have heard of it by broadcast. Fortunately the very young do not realize the full import of these days but the implications will be realized by them as they grow up—towards adulthood.

It is in this generation of the young that so much interest is taken—it is these children who will be the inheritors or heirs that the present world bequeathes them. Britain and Canada and the other Dominions are determined that it will be the precious liberty of democracy in which they will grow up.

To many a school in Canada at this time come British evacuee children for the duration of the war. They will, while preserving the precious family ties with England, Scotland and Wales, form new ties in Canada with Canadian boys and girls and with Canadian adults. This influence should affect in a very real way the lives of the children born in Canada and of the British children.

Here Canadian children will see examples of the race whom they love through their English history, the people of the British Isles. They will see in their young British friends the likeness of the boys and girls of old who grew up in Britain to become the defenders of that land and to lend their name to history. They will realize that these child friends of theirs are very like these who grew up to make Britain what she is, that they are of the same race as produced the great thinkers, poets, statesmen, scientists and philanthropists and men and women of the people who have helped to make Britain great.

The young British children will see Canada as she is. They will see how the spirit of the British and French settlers of Canada is one of the greatest impulses toward the building of a great nation. Canadian history is to be aptly learned here for Canadian pioneering is a story of romance which will delight the young Britishers, and they will be delighted by what they see of present-day Canada.

That this year will be one of the richest in their lives through the unusual conditions which prevail is expected.

The Voice of Britain Is Reflected By Her Great Poets

By "An Average Man" in The Navy (London)

We shall get used to living in a fortress. After all, when you turn over in your mind all the things to which we are already quite used there comes an assurance that there is hardly anything with which familiarity will not breed tolerance.

I should hate to under-estimate at all the tragic sufferings of the people of France, fleeing in wretchedness and despair before the ruthless enemy whose onslaught their valiant armies have been unable to stem. I do not pretend at all that familiarity could breed tolerance of that sort of thing, although I hope and believe that we should somehow summon forces with which to endure. Because it is more than ever true that only those who endure to the end can be saved.

I may be an optimist, and I rather hope I am, for it is a good thing to be. But with an absolute conviction that sea power remains the decisive factor in war, I am in no paroxysms about invasion, in the meaning which I have always attached to the word. Heaven forbid that I should discredit in any way the theory that we shall be raided severely from the air and by minor excursions across the sea, or that I should minimize the gravity and the peril to key points and communications and all other things on which the organized life of a country depends, especially in war time. But so far as I can understand, these perils chiefly have a great nuisance value.

As to air raids, I am (at the moment and touch wood!) in an attitude of "wait and see". I am already sufficiently aware of their nuisance value after enforced vigils which have made the conduct of ordinary affairs a quite serious burden. And I have no doubt that like any other human being of any nationality, friendly or enemy, I shall be very much frightened when I encounter the rough side of them. But, after all, so were the people of Spain, and so were the people of China. Yet they stuck it out, and I do not thing that in this fortress we shall fail at all in what the Prime Minister has called, "our finest hour".

There is a grand spirit in this country, and when you come across it in others it makes you realize how arrogantly proud you are to be English. I have lately spent some vigilant and wakeful hours in company with a now unaccustomed rifle and my fellow privates in the L.D.V. My companions on different occasions have been people on whom I have never set eyes before, and they have represented a great variety of kind and character and age and class and occupation. But there has been one common denominator—a fierce and flaming obstinacy in the will to fight on, however heavy the cost, to the end of victory.

And many of these have been men wracked by anxiety about the fate of their own sons fighting at the front, about what may have to be suffered by their wives and their homes, while in more than one case the man who has talked to me as frankly and sincerely as men will talk to each other in this sort of situation has just had a son killed in action.

I know, of course, that it may be said the middle-aged and elderly men having nearly always served in the last war and some in the war before that, who have joined the L.D.V. are rather a particular cross-section of public opinion. Yet I do not believe they are. I believe that what they say is the veritable voice of England—especially as they say it with that sense of humor which is one of the secret weapons of England.

Indeed, there is always this England—by which, of course (as I must always be careful to explain), I mean every individual county in England and the whole of Wales and Scotland and the whole of Northern Ireland, and I hope some part of Eire, and every British Dominion and colony and all the people who happen to live temporarily in other countries and every one who is covered by that not so alluring word "Briton".

I do not know how many people may be like me. But I dare say there are quite a lot of us who, besides distracting our minds in one way or another (especially while just waiting and wondering where or when bombs are going to fall) find some of the things that have been written about England drifting through our minds as beads may be told on a rosary. There are the obvious things: "This precious stone set in the silver sea"—"If I should die, think only this of me"—"The flag that braved a thousand years"—"With a cheerful spirit, I, Sir Richard Grenville, die", and so forth, and so on. If the books are there in your library, it is a happy thing to read these great passages again because they are among the greatest passages of English prose and verse than which there are no words more fit for great events, and because when you do read them, or when you try to remember them textually without reading them, you are apt to find either that you know them very indifferently by heart or that you really do not know them at all.

I am not suggesting for a moment that any of my readers do not know them as well as they think they do. I only know that I do not myself. So here and now are just a few of what seem to me the greatest of these passages in verse:

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn;
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return.

Ever the faith endures
England, my England:—
"Take and break us; we are yours,
England, my own!
Life is good, and joy runs high
Between English earth and sky;
Death is death; but we shall die
To the Song on your bugles blown, England."

This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-Paradise;
This fortress, built by nature for herself,
Against infection, and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world;
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive as a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands;
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England.

"Once more unto the breach, dear friends, once more,
Or close the wall up with our English dead!

We must be free or die, who speak the tongue
That Shakespeare spake; the faith and morals hold
Which Milton held.

We shall never arrive at a stage in which we recite these kind of things loudly or even quote them in private, because we have very proper inhibitions which prevent us from doing that sort of thing. But they do inspire us all the same. I am sure that almost everyone would find it very difficult to read these sort of words aloud without that lump in the throat which immediately reduces the ordinary Englishman to a commonplace abruptness lest he should do some frightfully continental thing, such as bursting into tears in the contemplation of a perfectly pure ideal.

I do not know how many of you have had the job or privilege of reading lessons in church. I have myself. And I am not the least ashamed to say that I have quite often found it difficult not to be actually intoxicated with the sheer beauty of what I was reading. It is not only a superabundance of strong drink that goes to one's head.

Anyone, of course, can be intoxicated or infatuated by beauty—the beauty of England which, unlike the cultivated face of a pretty woman, is well described as "terribly lovely". Or just the wonder and the wild desire of dawn. It has needed another war to find me out and about at dawn once more. And the earliest voice of birds. In a seaside suburban street the other day this interrupted my ridiculous private rehearsal of ill-remembered exercises with a musket. It was a magic enchantment. I did not know there were singing birds in the town. How was I to know that every little tree along a little street maintained its own celebrant of sunrise?

'Twelve O'Clock, And All's Well'

(From "The Constitution", Atlanta, Ga.)

There must be today, millions of spirits that walk, bravely, across the length and breadth of beleaguered Britain. The spirits of those men of the ancient race who gave to her the greatness that is knowing miraculous resurgence as, once more, the fate of human liberty is laid upon her hands and hearts and courage.

It is good to think that, among those spirits, walk the ancient watchmen of the night, carrying their lanterns to light the dark hours and crying, as they walk, "Twelve o'clock and all's well." All's well with Britain, as her sons and daughters stand, undaunted, a final rampart to the ruthless foe.

All's well because the tongue of Chaucer, of Shakespeare, of Milton, of Keats, of Shelley, of Kipling, of Tennyson, of Barrie, of the King James translation of the Scriptures, can never be the tongue of an enslaved race.

All's well because the blood of Probisher, of Drake, of Raleigh, of Cromwell, of Wellington, of Nelson, of the millions of fighting men who have died to keep Britain free, can never course through the veins of an enslaved people.

All's well because the passion for human liberty and human rights that inspired the men of Runnymede, that set aflame the hearts of men who dared all that tyranny should be crushed, that forced British democracy ever to march on, side by side and step by step with the growth of empire, can never be quenched under the oppression of any master.

All's well in Britain because the common people are aroused, because from the ordinary, average people, from whom England's greatest have ever come, there still arises that determination, that bulldog stubbornness, that unconquerable spirit which cannot live enslaved.

The wisest seers among men cannot say what yet is to come. But this all men may know: There is a very lovely heart of civilization and of freedom threatened by an obscene force, an indecent return to savagery sparked by unmoral ambition. The shadow today lies over an ancient and a noble land. It darkens the graves of poets and philosophers and martyrs. It hangs, threatening, over the very birthplace of human liberty and human progress.

The vultures soar over England's green fields and stately homes, they swoop upon the humble cots and quiet hills.

We on this side can know little of the one factor that must, in the final accounting, decide the issue. That is, the spirit of a people awakened and determined. There must be a marvellous story, being told on the pages of history, in Britain today. The spectacle of a people arising as one, to defend to death the land they hold so dear, must be a tremendous thing to watch.

Even Hitler has been awed. What other interpretation can be put upon his petulant and ridiculous complaint that "home guards" can be only violators of the code of war, to be shot against a wall when captured? The world has never witnessed such absurd effrontery as an appeal, by this man, to any code of war. He, and Germany, of all races, have most ruthlessly and heartlessly scorned the codes of war, of honor, of humanity, of human decency, wherever it served their foul purpose.

Hitler cannot conquer Britain. We who know the history and the spirit and the meaning of British civilization, we who know the courage that arms her people, we who know the love of country that fills their souls, know that no invader can stay alive on English soil so long as one Englishman remains alive to strike a blow for freedom.

There can be but one outcome when the British people have arisen, moved by a single impulse, to defend

This royal throne of kings, this sceptred isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise;
This fortress, built by Nature for herself,
Against infection and the hand of war,
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall
Or as a moat defensive to a house—
Against the envy of less happier lands—
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm,
This England.

The vultures gather, but still the spirit of the ancient watchman walks in England and still his brave voice reassures,

"Twelve o'clock, and all's well!"

OLD LADY SCORNS SHELTER

Dover, England, Sept. 3 (CP).—A little old lady who scorns shelter is the air raid mascot of rope walk, Dover's front line in Nazi aerial assaults.

"Nothing can happen to us while she's here," her neighbors say.

"I'm well over 70," she says. "I want to see the fun—all of it. My time will come when it must."

TO BUILD 50 NAVAL VESSELS

Melbourne, Sept. 3 (CP-Reuters).—Prime Minister Menzies announced today that 50 naval vessels are to be built in Australia "to defend shipping from submarines, aircraft and mines". It is planned to complete the ships by next year. Seven shipyards now engaged in naval construction are to be augmented by others. The new craft are to be of Australian design, manned by Australians and named after Australian towns.

3RD-47TH FIELD BATTERY VISITS BELLEVILLE FAIR

Fine Artillery Unit Marches Through City to Grounds — Many Local Men in Ranks

GUESTS OF DIRECTORS

Saturday afternoon crowds that thronged Front Street, paused abruptly in their shopping as tall bronzed gunners of the 3rd-47th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, some three hundred strong, swung down the main thoroughfare to the roll of drums.

Unheralded and unsung, the crack artillery unit, comprised of three troops from Belleville, Cobourg and Napanee, entered the city at its eastern precincts by truck shortly after one o'clock.

Disembarking, the troops formed up in column of route formation and to the roll of two drums swung down East Bridge Street behind Commanding Officer Major W. H. Van Steenburgh, formerly of this city. In their heavy khaki battledress, the gunners, tanned to a deep brown by their outdoor training, marched in ranks of three while admiring crowds quickly gathered along the route of march.

The parade swung smartly at Church Street and followed that thoroughfare to Victoria Avenue, thence to Front Street to Bridge and from that point to the Fair Grounds where they elicited rounds of applause from afternoon exhibition patrons.

Many familiar faces were seen in the ranks of "B" Troop. Besides the commanding officer, such well-known residents as Captain Ralph Bird, Lieut. Allen Sprague, Troop Sergeant-Major Cecil Holway, Corporal Don Thomas, Lieut. Fred Symons, Lieut. Everett Fairman and others.

The battery was dismissed at the Fair Grounds and "took in" the Exhibition as the guests of the directors of the Fair Board, later embarking on trucks that took them to their barracks at an eastern training centre.

Ralph Allison Happy Winner of Car At Closing Ceremonies of the Fair

Dundas St. Carpenter Says He is Glad to Have a New Car to Replace His Old One

5,000 IN ATTENDANCE

There is at least one person in the five thousand people who thronged the Fair Grounds on Saturday night who believed there is a Santa Claus. He is Ralph Allison, of 90 Dundas Street, who could scarcely believe his good fortune when the stub drawn from the ticket container corresponded with one of the few he held in his hand and automatically made him the proud owner of a brand new automobile. Both cars given by the Fair Directors were won by residents of the city, Mr. Len. Fozard, East Bridge Street, being the fortunate winner of the one drawn for on Friday night.

Allison grinned from ear to ear when he learned of his luck. Apparently he owned what he termed an ancient "jalopy" with which he conducted his carpentry trade, and to quote him: "This car will come in mighty handy as my old one has seen better days. It is a most welcome gift and I am surely happy about the whole thing." And as five thousand disappointed but good-natured patrons of the fair declared inwardly: "Why shouldn't he be?"

Saturday culminated the three-day exhibition of the Belleville Agricultural Society and although Friday's inclement weather reduced the box-office receipts to a large extent, the exhibition was generally well attended. Saturday's crowd was the largest of the three-day exhibit, and officials and directors of the board are grateful to the fine response made by the fair-going public especially in view of the fact that cancellation of government grants forced them to curtail certain attractions.

The Saturday night crowd was the typical good-natured one synonymous with provincial exhibitions. It availed itself of the Midway attractions and business and industrial exhibits and paid tribute to Hastings County agriculture by thronging the livestock sheds where one of the largest exhibits in this phase of farming was on display. It applauded with a generous measure the excellent entertainment provided by Billy Garden's Canadian Vaudeville Exchange and in general enjoyed itself to the limit despite the fact that all could not win one automobile.

An added attraction was given afternoon patrons when the rugged bronzed gunners of the 3-47th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, some three hundred strong, under the command of Major W. Van Steenburgh, formerly of this city, paraded in full battle dress through the grounds. A large number of Belleville residents are members of the battery and the smart efficient troops received rousing cheers as they swung along in full view of the crowd.

"TIDE FLOWING

Must Act Quickly

Observers hold that if Germany fails to dent Britain's air defence before mid-September, she will almost certainly be too late to try any invasion this year.

This would still leave her some chance, however, to consolidate her war of threats in the Balkans, where Rumania is regarded as menaced with the possibility of German occupation. It was along this route that the empire-planners of old imperial Germany envisioned a Berlin-Bagdad realm, freeing the Reich from dependence upon ocean trade.

On the third front, the Mediterranean, Italian pressure on Greece and apparent imminence of an Italian offensive from Libya against Egypt fit into the opportunist strategy of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Flexibility Spoil Raids.

On the home front the flexibility of British air defence and hard-hitting British fighter attacks have spoiled German mass raids. One instance of this flexibility is the sudden shifting of anti-aircraft batteries whenever the Germans appear to think they have found a safe "alleyway".

A newly-placed battery yesterday caught a group of Dorniers off guard and bounced them against a swarm of Hurricane and Spitfire fighters. Anti-aircraft guns along the Thames estuary put up a virtual wall of shells to keep out the invaders.

London newspapers in viewing the future with confidence today recalled the dark days of the French collapse.

The Times said the nation's manpower was not seriously depleted by casualties the first year and material resources were substantially intact but "on the other hand we have suffered a worse series of strategic disasters than the most pessimistic imagination could have contemplated a year ago."

Defeat Starred Britain

"In this tale of disaster there came a moment—let it now be acknowledged for it is past and will not recur—when imminent defeat stared the British Empire in the face," said the Times. "That was the time when a retreating army stood at bay in the channel ports and the informed judgment of the high command estimated that not more than 30,000 would then escape the enemy's clutches."

Prime Minister Churchill said that 335,000 men, including some French, were removed safely.

The Times said that since then, however, the whole aspect and temper of the war had changed.

"The people of Britain," aid the paper, "deserted by France found themselves by July to their indignant astonishment faced for a few desperate days with the possibility of defeat. The discovery turned the tide, however, and the supreme will of the people under the leadership of the premier has wrenched strength from weakness and preparedness from chaos."

Several Young Men Requested to Report To Munition Plants

Numerous details, the aftermath of the national registration of residents of this city will be cleaned up Wednesday and the office in Shire Hall expected to be closed, registration officials announced today.

Registration facilities for those, who through force of circumstances were not able to register during the allotted period, are now available at the various post offices of the county, and at no other place, it was stated.

Numerous instances of lost registration cards have been reported to officials since the end of the registration period, but all duplicates must be secured from the Department of National Registration at Ottawa.

Tuesday will see the large stacks of cards forwarded to their destinations with those of single men between the ages of 19 and 45 sent to Kingston and the remainder to Ottawa.

Wheels of national and district registration bureaus are working already as is evidenced in letters received by a number of local young men working in "unessential occupations." These the most of whom gave their occupations as mechanics, have been requested to report to munitions plants and machine shops within this district.

The War Today

Britain ended the first year of the war today, viewing the past with satisfaction and the future with sober confidence while wild battles raged through her skies and her air forces struck back at the enemy.

London had its air raid alarms today and the people hardly noticed, going on with their work in strange contrast to their reactions that beautiful Sunday morning a year ago a few minutes after Neville Chamberlain, tired and sad over his efforts to halt the invasion of Poland, announced that a state of war existed between Britain and Germany.

That day when the sirens sounded most of those who were not on air raid precautions, police or fire duty went obediently to shelters and stood around feeling silly while nothing happened.

Today in the midst of the war's biggest air battles those who were in immediate danger zones took shelter, those at vantage points watched, and those out of the danger area worked.

Britons, watching the days slip by during which Hitler might most advantageously make an attempt to invade their island, were cautioned by War Secretary Anthony Eden that it would be foolish to conclude that the coming of autumn removes the danger of invasion.

While the exchange of air raids continued it was announced in Bucharest that German mechanized troops would move into southern Bucovina Sept. 15 to face Russian troops along the newly-delineated Russo-Rumanian frontier.

How friendly was Germany's intention in sending the troops was seen in her threat to occupy all Rumania if the Rumanians did not stop demonstrating against the action of Germany and Italy in giving Hungary the northern part of Transylvania.

Rumanians in Transylvania were reported rushing preparations to defend the Hungarian frontier, despite government orders to the contrary, complicating an already explosive situation.

Prolongation of the dispute and demonstrations might well serve Germany's purpose by giving Hitler an excuse to move into Rumania, acquiring a valuable wheat, oil and timber producing country and providing some exercise for his idle Blitz troops who might become a bit restless over their failure to "sail against England" in the words of their pet song.

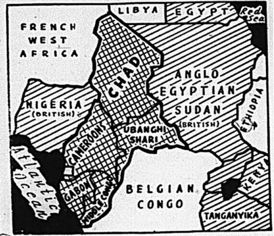
The excuse, of course, would be that the Rumanian Government was unable to maintain internal order.

How Russia viewed the German actions was not disclosed, but it was not believed the Kremlin would see with any great favor further eastward expansion of Germany in the direction of the Black Sea which has generally been considered Russian.

Russia herself, actually, has been suspected in the past of having designs on Turkey with the idea of obtaining control of the Dardanelles, gateway to the Black Sea through which no ship may pass but on Turkey's sufferance.

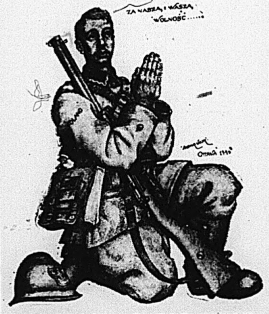
There was the possibility of a Russo-German saw-off as in the case of the division of Poland. If such an agreement obtained Hitler undoubtedly would gain a considerable diplomatic victory, consolidating a valuable source of supplies and gaining some ground in his desperate fight against the British blockade.

FRENCH AFRICAN COLONIES JOIN BRITAIN



French Equatorial Africa and French Cameroons have joined the French Territory of Chad in repudiating the Vichy government of France and announced their intention of fighting with Britain under the leadership of General de Gaulle. This development forms a bulwark completely across Africa, linking the Atlantic, the Mediterranean and the Red Sea, cutting off any connection between Italian troops in Libya and the East Coast.

Poland Still Our Ally



ZA NASZA I WASZA WOLNOSC.....

"The end of the first year of war finds the remnant of the brave Polish army fighting side by side with the British forces in Great Britain."—This moving tribute to his native Poland, contributed by the Polish-artist, Arthur Czyk, now exiled in Canada, typifies the unyielding, undaunted spirit of Poland, strong in faith and arms and still sounding the battle cry of Poland, "Za Nazza i Wasza, Wolnosc" (For our and your freedom).

Streamlined Armor Advocated by Doctors

Chicago, Sept. 3.— (AP)— The well-dressed British soldier will wear streamlined armour if Britain's doctors have their way.

The belief that a modification of medieval armour has a place in modern warfare was expressed at a meeting of Royal Academy of Medicine Surgeons reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

They noted that the Germans were reported to be using body armour.

Suggestions included larger helmets, visors, gauntlets, curtains of chain mail attached to the back of helmets, and steel or compressed fibre plates for chest protectors.

The old objection to armour—that it would overload the soldier—was regarded as no longer applying, because of the extensive mechanization of army movements and the development of lighter protective materials.

Specimens of compressed fibre, exhibited were said to have "the same tensile power as aluminum but half its weight" and to be adequate protection against shrapnel.

UNEMPLOYED FIGURE LOWER

London, Sept. 3 (CP).—Britain's unemployed have dropped below 800,000, according to latest Ministry of Labor figures. On Aug. 12 the total was 799,452, a drop of 27,814 compared with the previous month.

RUMANIA LOSES MORE TERRITORY AT VIENNA CONFERENCE

Rumania lost one-half of the province of Transylvania to Hungary at the Conference of Vienna at which she was directed by Germany and Italy to turn over the territory to Hungary in return for axis power protection of her remaining boundaries. Faced with an "or else" ultimatum, Rumania also was forced to agree that German soldiers should occupy Rumania's eastern frontier and stand face to face with restless Soviet troops. Seated around the conference table are (left to right): Premier Paul Teleki of Hungary, Foreign Minister Count Ciano of Italy, Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop of Germany, Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu of Rumania and his aide, Valerian Pop.

ONE INJURED

Tweed — (Special)—Several motor accidents occurred in Tweed and vicinity during the week-end and a number of arrests were made by Chief Hayes.

Maurice LaCroix, Ottawa, was arrested, charged with leaving the scene of an accident. LaCroix allegedly was the driver of a car which collided with a car driven by a Cornwall resident. Later on the same night another hit-and-run case was reported to Constable Hayes and on Sunday noon he took into custody James Burd, Marlbank, who will be charged with failing to return to the scene of an accident. All these cases were investigated by Chief Hayes who laid the charges. The accused will appear before Magistrate J. H. Lloyd in County Police Court.

Film Costume Designer Faces Many Problems

Costume design is a fascinating business, especially in Hollywood, according to Robert Kalloch, brilliant designer for Columbia Studios who finds excitement in the unexpected and constant re-arrangement of production schedules, the change in members of casts, the complete disregard of seasons, and the startling ease with which he is shunted not only on a Cook's tour of the world, but through time as well.

In the morning, Kalloch declared, he may be doing research on costumes of early American times; and in the afternoon, sketching gowns for a famous star whose next role places her in a quick succession of fashionable backgrounds, calling for an equally quick succession of fashionable costumes. In her film, his star may be in a smart New York Hotel one winter afternoon, and two days later attending the races at Buenos Aires. The designer must check climate. If the scenario shows her flying from New York with only one piece of luggage, her wardrobe must look as though it might have emerged from that piece of luggage.

Youthful sophistication was called for in designing the 18 costume changes worn by lovely Loretta Young in her newest film, Columbia's "He Stayed for Breakfast," now at the McCarthy Theatre with Melvyn Douglas also starred. Kalloch regarded himself as singularly fortunate; "He Stayed for Breakfast" is a romantic comedy set in Paris and Miss Young plays the estranged wife of a prominent financier. His task simply called for the creation of ultra-fashionable costumes. But those costumes had to be consistent, and consistency is not the least of the considerations permanently listed as "things to remember" when a new film is in production.

1. The personality of the star.
2. The good and bad points of her figure.
3. Her height and coloring.
4. The character she is to portray.
5. The backgrounds in which she appears.
6. The amount of money which she presumably would have spent to buy the costumes she wears.
7. The season when the action takes place in which she wears the costume.
8. The photographic values of the fabrics chosen — with texture and color being given equal consideration.
9. The personal likes of the actress who wears the costume, the director at the helm of the production and the photographer who supervises the camera work.

Each of these points has a direct relationship to one or more of the others. The star may have a personal idiosyncrasy against a certain color or fabric. The designer's work is greatly simplified if he knows this idiosyncrasy and selects a color and fabric with the same photographic value. Photographers prefer almost any color to black which absorbs vast amounts of light and when it comes to hats their decision is often final. The camera has a critical eye, and a hat which looks fine to the eye, may be banned as unflattering and even ridiculous when viewed by the camera lens.

Hollywood and its stellar feminine personalities exercise unquestionable influence on fashion the world over—and in the final analysis the designer can receive no greater commendation than the public acceptance of his creations as worn by the stars.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday September 3
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to the lunar as well as mutual aspects of major planets, this is likely to be a day of excitement, agitation, commotion and surprises. Some occurrence, seemingly springing from nowhere, may descend with all the force and far-reaching effect on the future and its fortunes. Strange persons and unique situations may give the element of drama and novelty to the life. All departments of living are involved with unexpected change, new surroundings and fresh objectives. Others contribute, probably in curious ways, to make it a stirring and adventurous era.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of great surprises and out-of-the-ordinary experiences, with romance and adventure entering the life and having much influence on the future fortunes. This may all be somewhat sensational and thrilling, with a devastating change including new environs and contacts, with strangers figuring conspicuously. Probably a fresh start, although it is advisable to study these sudden opportunities well and not be carried away by excitement, selfish advice or impetuosity. Also be careful with funds, credits and tangible assets of every kind.

A child born on this day may be exceedingly versatile and creative, probably in art, music or drama. It will be romantic, adventurous and have many social graces.

For Wednesday, September 4

AN INTERESTING and progressive state of affairs is the augury for this day, according to the predominant planetary aspects. The mentality will be highly stimulated to see quick ways and means for putting important movements into operation. High pressure plans and programs are more than likely to have appeal to big business heads, with funds for promoting clever propositions available. Some small changes may be necessary. It is admonished to be cautious with strangers. In the private life romance looms.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a very lively, progressive and happy year, with important developments in both private and business life. The mind will be particularly astute and keyed up to propositions of magnitude. High-pressure salesmanship is bound to enlist ready support of capital for promotion, with the hearty co-operation of those in power and position.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Reader's Happy New Idea: An Expectant-Mother's Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

In your opinion, would it be proper to give a "Mother's Shower" for an expectant mother? By this I mean, to have the guests bring night-gowns, bed jackets and so forth for the mother, rather than gifts for the baby?

M. J.

I think this is an inspired idea for a shower! However, I suggest that you make a list to be talked over by the prospective guests and a particul item chosen by each guest, so that there will not be too many duplications of obvious gifts. Bedroom slippers might be one item, and a folding mirror for the bedside table, and a decorative box filled with cleansing tissues. And don't forget the fragrant and refreshing world of beauty products . . eau de cologne, lotions, creams, bathsalts, soaps, powders, and so forth!

Some Wedding Proprieties

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am to be married soon, with an informal Roman Catholic Church wedding. My relatives, my fiance's sister (his other relatives live far away from here), and a few close friends will be the only ones present at the wedding. I haven't witnessed a wedding since I have been grown-up, and I wish you would answer a few questions for me.

1.—We are planning a double ring ceremony. Is this correct? What is the procedure?

2—Is it necessary to send invitations?

3.—Would simple tailored clothes be proper?

4.—Would it be correct for my parents to give a wedding breakfast in a restaurant? If it's to be in the evening, would a dinner given in a restaurant be correct? If so, do these places decorate the table, or is that left for my parents to do?

Wondering

1.—Yes, if the bridegroom wishes to wear a wedding ring, the double ring ceremony is thoroughly correct. The priest who is to perform the ceremony, will explain the double ring procedure.

2.—Your invitations, in this case, could properly and most conveniently be given by word of mouth. However. . . . and this is most important . . . even if it is probable that your fiance's family cannot be present at the wedding, it would be gracious for your mother (or you) to write them, inviting them. Then you have made the necessary gesture of grace and hospitality, and they will know that you and your family are well-bred people. It is understanding gestures like this that form a fine background for good in-law relationships!

3.—Yes, a simple dress or suit would be proper for you to wear at your informal wedding.

4.—Yes, it is correct for your parents to give either a wedding breakfast or dinner in a restaurant if this cannot conveniently be given in your home. Undoubtedly you could find a hotel in your lovely city that would have a small private dining-room. You and your mother should consult with the maitre d'hotel and he will carry out appropriate suggestions as to the menu, table decorations and all other details.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Stop Thinking of Misfortunes the Future May Bring

"The unexpected happens", said Disraeli, but does it? Isn't it the thing we've dwelt upon, decided it's bound to come our way no matter whether it's for our good or evil, that finally comes to pass?

In the years I've done this column, I've had innumerable letters from people telling me that they've made up their minds to certain happenings, and the thing came about, as irrevocably as death and taxes.

Some of the things this frame of mind has brought about is marriage to a certain individual. A typical letter stands out:

"He didn't seem particularly interested in me when we met, nor did I go after him like a collie rounding up a sheep". (needless to say this letter came from the great open spaces where they have ranges and sheep). "But I just decided he was my fate. And he is my fate". Again I've had letters from people who have dwelt upon misfortunes, hypnotized themselves into thinking they could not be sidestepped, and this attitude brought the dread happenings about.

"I always felt I was going to lose my husband by an accident", one woman wrote. "I worried over this day and night. He was killed by an automobile just outside our gate".

"I always saw myself a dependent in the house of my daughter-in-law, who never liked me", writes another. "And I never liked her, but when I lost the insurance money my husband had left me in the stock market, I was forced to go and live with her".

This sort of thing, in psychology, has the rather unwieldly name "precipitating the image". It's a mighty dangerous pastime, unless you dwell upon the things that is for your good, your happiness or your peace of mind. Cast out the thoughts of unhappiness, bad luck or death, if you want to live.

Consider the case of Carson C. Surles of Dunn, North Carolina, an account of whose death was published in a recent newspaper dispatch. For twenty-five years, Mr. Surles had kept a rendezvous with death. He was only 34 when he began this vigil, but he decided that he was going to die in July 1940, and die he did.

Throughout the last week of his life, Mr. Surles visited his relatives and friends and bade them goodbye. He invited them to his funeral, which he said would occur on the date he had been keeping with death for the last twenty-five years. He went to the cemetery, scraped the weeds from his grave and put everything in order.

He said goodbye to his employers, resigned his job, said he must go home and get ready. He became ill, apparently without cause, and died at 2.20 in the afternoon he had indicated. The doctor who attended the dying man said he could find no cause for death, and that the thought of suicide was impossible.

Draw your own conclusions, and not only decline to make a rendezvous with death, but with any misfortune.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Treating The Nervous Patient

A young man of 25 consulted a physician because of an irritable stomach, diarrhoea, partial loss of memory, in ability to concentrate, frequent passing or urine, and sleeplessness. He explained that he had visited two other physicians who could find no organic trouble one had advised him to take a trip or vacation and the other had told him to "forget it".

The physician, after an hour of patient questioning and examination, told him that just as the other physicians had not found any organic disease, he also was unable to find any.

"However", said the physician, "There is no question but that you have the symptoms of which you complain— indigestion, insomnia, forgetfulness and others—but they are not caused by any disease but because your mind is upset; you are trying to work out some problem. If you had told these other physicians that you were trying to work out a solution to your problem, you would not have found it necessary to consult me".

The patient thereupon told him his problem but the physician advised him to settle it one way or the other—a straight yes or no — and his symptoms would likely disappear.

With sudden determination, the patient dressed himself and went out of the physician's office with springy foot. Just whether his plan for solving his difficulty was best is not my point. The fact that his mind was made up removed the constant tension of mind and body, and his symptoms disappeared. The main point about the successful treatment of this case was that the physician did two things. First, he made a thorough examination so that the patient was convinced that no organic trouble existed, and, second, he was patient enough to listen to the patient's long story.

These same suggestions are made by Dr. Edward Weiss, Philadelphia in the Pennsylvania Medical Journal, who states that the examination gives the nervous patient reassurance and is the first step in the right direction. Further, it is a good rule for the physician to listen rather than talk. Often just the talking out of the problem with the physician will relieve the symptoms and frequently a small adjustment will accomplish real help.

Robin Hood Club Concludes Season Of Summer Reading

The Robin Hood Club, for summer reading in the Boys' and Girls' Department at Corby Public Library, has concluded its program. The eighty members who enrolled were required to read a prescribed number of books which took them into lands of imaginary adventure, of fairy lore, or of everyday life to which the author's touch had brought a new meaning and interest. As books in the various classes were completed the reader found an arrow with his or her name on it placed on the large score card. Each set of books brought the arrows nearer the centre. The following boys and girls concluded the season with a perfect score: Renelda Ayling, James Bassingthwaighte, Campbell Cameron, Billy Dack, Colin Edie, Shirley Fradette, Georgina Fox, James Mumby, Beverley McCabe, Margaret Philbin, Thelma Sonnenberg, Audrey Stewart Mauren Upper, Douglas Walmsley, John Welch, Maida Woodley.

Doing the Chores

Not many homes today have much left of those duties around the place that fell to the lot of the children —the chores. I know most of the older readers of this column will recall perfectly well what I mean. There was the woodbox to fill, the grass to cut, the hedge to trim, the snow to shovel, the horse to take care of, very often the cow to milk. Of course, I'm speaking now of the average home in village, town and city for I know that on the farms there is still plenty for all there to do.

What brings this matter to mind now, is a home I was in recently. In that home there are two boys and a girl. They range from ten to fifteen years, and the way these children pitch in and help around the home seems remarkable to me.

As a result of their organization and industry the home is run without outside help, and it runs as smoothly as a home with a couple of servants. Each week the family, all five of them, huddle and draw up a schedule of the work to be done. Each member is given certain tasks to do. Each week the schedule changes so that the same child doesn't have the same work to do. That breaks up monotony. There are beds to make, floors to sweep, and of course, dishes to wash and dry.

My father was a doctor, and as the oldest boy in the family, it was always my duty to take care of his horse. I didn't mind because nearly every boy in the village where I lived had the same chores to perform. I think it was a great thing that we did have that work, for it showed us that home wasn't just a place to hang your hat, or come to at mealtime. Such work gives a child responsibility he enjoys, and starts him off toward acquiring a taste for work.

Now, unfortunately, there are few or no home chores for many children. They don't even begin to learn to work until they are out of school. Instead of work- practise, many schools have all sorts of new and modern activities that seem to teach how to evade work. In their homes, labor saving devices and hired help do the chores.

Of course, I don't mean to inveigh against labor saving devices and hired help. But, I fear that in most homes, this work that the children now escape, isn't replaced by anything else that does for them what the chores did for their fathers and mothers.

Color Fear Is Beauty Chaser

Why not be decorative and appealing?

By HELEN FOLLETT

Considering that our job is to help women to become radiant and attractive, we do wish that drab-looking ladies would help along the good work, not wear dismal colors and look all washed up. Perhaps they suffer from color fear, which is a common complaint. Perhaps they fancy that gay appearance isn't quite respectable. In either case, there isn't much to be done about them.

It's a treat to the eye to see a lovely girl whose get-up is accented with vivid colors—a red purse a hat that is a bit striking, a smart belt of bright hues. Makes this sad world gayer. Woman is something of a spectacle anyway, so why not be a decorative and appealing one?

Good Taste in Colors

Colors must be harmonious. To get perfect effects a woman must be blessed with good taste and the seeing eye. Lipstick and nail polish must match, never clash with the color of the frock or hat. If the same shade appears in costume jewelry or hair ornament, so much the better. These effects are interesting. Get your color cue from make-up, carry it through in the wardrobe. Be sparing with vivid tints. But don't be afraid of them.

The right colors flatter the hair, the eyes and the complexion. They give roundness to the figure if it is too slim, slimmer it down if measurements are above normal.

Don't be casual when selecting shoes. Don't think of appearance without regard to comfort. The human pedal varies in contour to a remarkable degree. There are high and low arches, narrow and wide feet, short and long toes. Unless one finds precisely and exactly the correct last the health of the feet will be impaired, tendons strained and a host of foot ills may come along to torment one.

Perhaps some day, we shall have prescription shoes, as we have prescriptions for eyeglasses. Then we'll all be happy walkers. Hurty feet are responsible for poor posture, snappy nerves, wrinkles and grouches.

3 NEW PLANTS COST $17,500,000 SAYS C.D. HOWE

Will be in Operation in 1941 Employing "a Personnel of Many Thousands"

ONE CHEMICAL PLANT

Ottawa, Sept. 3 (CP)—Munitions Minister Howe announced today that three new plants, costing in all some $17,500,000 will be added immediately to Canada's rapidly expanding program of industrial development to meet wartime demand for guns and chemicals.

The plants will be in operation in 1941, employing "a personnel of many thousands" the Minister said. They include an $8,000,000 chemical plant, a $7,000,000 gun plant and a rifle plant costing $2,500,000.

The chemical plant, a part of Canada's explosives program, will be located in Alberta and the other two plants will be in Central Canada. Definite locations are not announced.

The chemical plant will manufacture more than 200 tons daily of ammonium nitrate, using as a raw material the natural gas available in Alberta. The project involves also, the construction of special tank cars to handle the finished product and options have been taken on much of the machinery for the new plant and the necessary properties have been acquired.

Employees Available in Districts

Mr. Howe said the particular type of skilled men required in the rifle and gun plants are available in the area where the plants are to be located.

Guns to be produced are rapid-action anti-aircraft artillery and the gun plant will be located beside the existing facilities which are already producing the barrels of these guns. Annual output of the plant will have a value of from forty million to sixty million dollars.

Construction work has already begun on the rifle plant which is being built and will be operated by Small Arms Limited, a recently-created government company which will employ upyards of 500 men in this plant.

The directorate of Small Arms Limited follows:

Nazis Suffer 12 Days of Heavy Plane Losses

(By the Canadian Press)

British fighter planes and anti-aircraft shot down 23 German raiders today (Tuesday). A table of German and British losses, made up of today's figures and those of previous days on which 50 or more German planes were destroyed, follows:

	German	British
Aug. 8	61	18
Aug. 11	66	26
Aug. 12	62	13
Aug. 13	78	13
Aug. 15	180	34
Aug. 16	75	22
Aug. 18	152	22
Aug. 24	50	49
Aug. 25	55	13
Aug. 30	62	25
Aug. 31	88	37
Sept. 2	42	20

On the missing days, from Aug. 3 on, the Germans attacked in smaller groups with anywhere from three to 50 Nazi craft being destroyed daily. Since June 18 more than 1,500 Nazi machines have been destroyed and probably another 750 "will never fly again."

French Prisoners Being Transferred To German Camps

Les Verrieries French-Swiss Border, Sept. 3—(AP)—The Germans are transferring French prisoners of war from concentration centres in Northern France to camps inside Germany, reliable sources reported today.

These sources also said the German military authorities had told French Vice-Premier Pierre Laval they would consider permitting the French Government to return to Paris in exchange for German control of all French frontiers and Mediterranean ports at present not occupied by German forces.

The number of prisoners involved in the transfer, said to be based on a growing German conviction that the war will continue at least through the winter, was placed at 880,000.

Destroyers Released to Britain Ready to Leave Within a Week

All Use Same Sized Torpedo Tubes as in Use on British Naval Vessels

COMPLETED IN 1922

Washington, Sept. 3.— (CP) — More than 100 of the United States' 123 over-age destroyers have been recommissioned and a naval authority said on August 20 that at least fifty could be made ready to leave for Great Britain within a week. They would need only to take on fuel, supplies and ammunition. Most of them are understood to be at Philadelphia.

All the destroyers have four-inch guns and 21-inch torpedo tubes, the same size as those the British navy uses. They are all above the 16-year over-age limit, having been completed in 1922.

Lord Lothian in his note said all the bases and facilities in the agreement would be leased for 99 years, free from all rent and charges other than such compensation to be mutually agreed on to be paid by the United States "to compensate the owners of private property for loss of expropriation or damage".

The leases would apply to the eastern side of the Bahamas, the Southern Coast of Jamaica, the Western Coast of St. Lucia, the West Coast of Trinidad in the Gulf of Paria, in the Island of Antigua and in British Guiana within 50 miles of Georgetown.

Attorney General Robert Jackson in his opinion informed the President:—

"(A) That the proposed arrangement may be concluded as an executive agreement, effective without awaiting ratification.

"(B) That there is presidential power to transfer title and possession of the proposed considerations upon certification by appropriate staff officers".

A reference by Jackson to "the applicable provisions of the neutrality act as to delivery" was taken to mean that British seamen would have to navigate the boats across the Atlantic.

Facts Speak for Themselves Says Prime Minister King

Ottawa, Sept. 3—(CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King said: "The facts eloquently speak for themselves of Anglo - American friendship," when asked to comment on President Roosevelt's message sent Congress today advising of the decision to exchange 50 United States destroyers with the British Government for defence bases on Empire soil in North and Central America.

Canadian Government officials, working in close co-operation with the United States on defence matters, were advised in advance of the outcome of negotiations over the destroyers and defence bases.

It is believed the negotiations were completely in line with Canadian defence policy. Mr. King would make no other comment.

Prime Minister And His Cabinet Attend Service

London, Sept. 3 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill and his Cabinet Ministers attended in Westminster Abbey a service commemorating the first anniversary of the war while London was under an air raid alarm.

The late afternoon sun slanted through the tall windows and in the distance could be heard the faint booming of anti-aircraft guns.

The all-clear signal sounded shortly before the service ended.

The heavy thudding of bombs heard across the English Channel from the southeast coast this afternoon indicated that the Royal Air Force was striking back at the Germans, trying to smash the big guns which have been firing on the English coast from Nazi-occupied France.

City Schools Are Reopened With Increased Attendance

Registration of Pupils and Assignment to Classes Occupy All Day

SAME CURRICULUM

School halls and classrooms in the various city schools resounded with the shouts and laughter of children this morning as after an absence of two months from their studies, the pupils forgot about holidaying and returned to the serious business of beginning classes for the fall term.

The registration of pupils and their assignment to their classes was a full morning's job with most of the city schools as the teachers prepared for the fall classes. This afternoon book shops and other places of business were a busy place as children flocked into the stores to acquire the necessary readers and text books.

With the opening of schools this year it is evident that a greater effort will be made toward preparing the children more and more to take their places in a war-time civilization. Prominently forecast is the soldiers-of-the-soil program which was found so successful during the last war when pupils were permitted to leave school during the springtime to assist with farm work. It is expected that this plan which greatly assisted in sowing and seeding processes will be employed again this coming year, if the war should continue until the spring.

Curriculum Unchanged

While the curriculum in the city public schools will remain much the same, it is understood that increased emphasis will be paid to the instruction of agriculture in rural areas. In technical schools, every co-operation has been promised in connection with the youth training program in order to speed up the industrial output for war purposes, through supplying an increased number of skilled labourers.

Registration in some of the public schools was not completed at early afternoon today, but at Queen Victoria School it was expected that close to five hundred pupils would register. Here there were 42 beginners with 20 scholars coming in from schools outside the district. At Queen Mary there were 24 beginners with 21 scholars from outside schools. Two of these were war guests from the United Kingdom, it was learned. There were 35 beginners at Queen Alexandra School and 25 scholars registered from outside schools. At St. Michael's Separate School 412 pupils registered in the elementary classes including 49 beginners, while 115 registered in the high school.

Other schools in the city could not be contacted to ascertain the correct numbers of pupils registering, but all schools reporting stated that registration would continue for a week or more as pupils kept coming in for a week or ten days after classes started.

CANADIAN TROOPS GREAT CURIOSITY IN ICELAND

Quartering of British Defence Forces in Iceland Has Brought Large Sums of Money to Country

(By Francis Stevens)

Reykjavik, Iceland, Sept. 3 (CP)—There is every reason to believe that Icelanders wish British and Canadian troops guarding this country to remain for the duration of the war. Recent events have shocked many Icelanders into realizing that a German victory would mean the death of freedom.

Repeatedly Icelanders say they vastly prefer British occupation to German occupation and actually the quartering of British defence forces in Iceland has brought large sums of money to the country and provided a great deal of employment.

The British pay cash for everything and interfere as little as possible with the normal life of the nation.

Any doubts that may have existed among some elements of the population that Britain was not prepared to exert the utmost power to prevent Nazi capture of this strategic and geographical outpost of Canada were dispelled Saturday by a thrilling Royal Air Force demonstration.

The planes flew over Reykjavik and, some people said, the demonstration was perhaps a little too exciting.

The fliers flew in formation and singly. They dived and swooped low over buildings and performed all manner of aerial acrobatics.

It was a demonstration of British airmanship calculated to go a long way toward counteracting effects of German broadcast propaganda.

At headquarters of the Canadian troops a Canadian Icelander who was born in Selkirk, Man., is the official interpretor and has plenty to keep him busy.

The Canadians generally like Icelanders, especially the children. The youngsters quickly learned to say "hello" to the men in khaki and in a country where an army heretofore was unknown the troops are a great curiosity.

WOMAN FINDS OVERTURNED CAR AT FRONT DOOR

Automobile Rolls Over at Milltown and Comes to Stop at Front Steps of Residence

Hearing a noise outside her home early last evening, Mrs. Alice Little of Milltown, opened the front door of her home to be greeted with a sight she will long remember. An over-turned automobile was lying a few feet from the Little front verandah with all four wheels in the air. Hastening to the assistance of the occupants Mrs. Little was surprised to find none had received serious injury.

James Hilds, of Niagara Falls, and who was accompanied by his wife and stepson, Charles Cavanaugh, was driving an automobile westerly on highway No. 2 and when he broke over the knoll at Milltown. Mr. Hilds observed a herd of cows being driven across the highway. Mr. Hilds immediately applied the brakes of the vehicle, but apparently applied them to strenuously as the car swerved sharply to the left and then rolled over in the opposite direction coming to a full stop on its top directly in front of the Little home. Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch investigated and was told that no serious injuries had resulted, despite the fact the vehicle rolled over twice and struck a tree before coming to a full stop on its top.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH

Ran Back Into Blazing Farm Home After Being Taken Out by Mother

Alexander, Man., Sept. 3 (CP)—Two children, Ronald Robinson, four, and his sister, Muriel, 10, were burned to death early today when they ran back into their blazing farm home near here after being taken to safety by their mother.

Alexander Robinson, father of the victims, left the house early to go to a threshing outfit. Mrs. Robinson was awakened by the crackling of fire, and hurriedly left the building together with her four children.

For some unknown reason, the little boy ran back into the flames and his sister followed him. Mrs. Robinson said she tried in vain to get the children to come out again.

Alexander is 150 miles west of Winnipeg.

CITY ENDANGERED BY FLOODED LAKE

Traffic beween the east and west sides of Millville, located in south-central New Jersey about 60 miles from Philadelphia, was cut off before midnight when the Maurice River washed out both approaches of the Sharpe Street concrete bridge and swept away the east approach of a steel "truntable" crossing.

Warnings were sent from Millville 28 miles down the tide-water Maurice River to Delaware Bay urging lowland residents to abandon their homes.

KING DECORATES FIVE CANADIANS

Four Naval Men and a Squadron Leader Given Awards for Valor

(By Sam Robertson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 3.—(CP Cable)—The King decorated five Canadians for bravery at a Royal investiture held in Buckingham Palace during an air raid this morning.

Four of them were naval men and the other a squadron leader of the Royal Air Force. They stood along with a number of other members of His Majesty's forces while the King pinned on their breasts awards for valor.

The naval officers, all acting sub-lieutenants, distinguished themselves during the historic evacuation of Allied troops from the hell pocket of Dunkerque. For their meritorious services each one got the Distinguished Service Cross.

They were R. W. Timbrell of Vancouver and the Royal Canadian Navy; James W. Golby of Victoria, David Killam of Vancouver and Leslie R. McLernon of Montreal, all of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve.

The King pinned the Distinguished Flying Cross on the tunic of Sqdn.-Ldr. A. C. Brown of Winnipeg, a veteran of the R.A.F.

Woman in Hospital Result of Accident

Mrs. Lila Poff, Coe Hill, sustained head lacerations and internal injuries when the station wagon in which she was riding was in a head-on collision with a larger truck two miles south of Frankford, shortly after midnight last night. Mrs. Poff was removed to the Belleville General Hospital, where X-rays were taken.

Mrs. Poff was riding in a station wagon driven by her husband, George Poff, also of Coe Hill. The truck which was proceeding in an opposite direction, was driven by Frank Whitton of Trenton. Both vehicles collided with a heavy impact that hurled Mrs. Poff against the windshield and later saw her knocked out of the cab in which she was riding. Dr. McMullen of Frankford, attended the injured woman at the scene, while Dr. G. H. Stobie is in attendance to the injuries at the hospital. Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch investigated and charges are pending.

American League is Heading For its Wildest Windup in Many Years of its History

New York Yankees in Second Place and Only 3½ Games From the Top

INDIANS LOSE TWO

Cleveland Beaten Twice by St. Louis, While Tigers Taken Twice by Chicago

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The American League is heading for its wildest windup in modern history. The big Labor Day blow off, which incidentally brought out 264,000 fans, just about raised everybody's temperature to the boiling point.

Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers dropped doubleheaders while New York Yankees split with Philadelphia Athletics before 69,940 fans at Yankee Stadium.

The world champions thus moved into second place by a slender percentage margin, .5634 to .5625, over the Tigers while the lead of the Indians over each is 3 1-2 games.

The Yankees, with Lefty Marius Russo pitching five-hit ball, had no trouble taking the opener from the A's 6-3. They simply couldn't do anything with the "slider" of Johnny Babich in the nightcap and were shutout 3-0 on five hits. The outcome gave them a record of 14 victories in 16 games during their home stand.

Cleveland's collapse was another scalp to the credit of St. Louis Browns. The unpredictable Vernon Kennedy held the Indians to seven hits in the opener and rapped out three himself to lead the Browns to a 2-1 triumph.

Tigers Meet Same Fate as Indians

The Tigers met the same fate at Chicago, smashing to pieces on the hurling of Bill Dietrich and Johnny Rigney. Julius Solters broke up the first game with a single in the eighth for a 2-1 decision. Rigney shut them out 4-0 in the second game with just two hits.

The most astounding pitching duel of the day was a 13-inning struggle between old Lefty Grove of Boston Red Sox and young Sid Hudson of Washington Senators. Youth finally prevailed when rookie Jack Sanford singled across a run in the 13th to win 1-0 for Washington. Grove allowed but eight hits. The Senators also won the second game 5-4 in six innings.

Paul Derringer got his 18th victory by holding St. Louis Cardinals to five hits as Cincinnati Reds captured the first game of their doubleheader 2-1. The Cards managed to hang onto third place by taking the nightcap 7-4.

Boston Bees squeezed out a 7-8 verdict over Brooklyn Dodgers in an 11-inning first game with Al Javery scattering three hits in 10 2-3 innings of relief pitching. Brooklyn bagged the second game 6-2 behind Curt Davis, who homered for two of his runs.

Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Chicago Cubs 5-2 for Rip Sewell's 13th triumph, but dropped the nightcap 7-1. The Phillies won 11-2 and 6-3 from New York Giants.

Yesterday's Stars

Vernon Kennedy and Elden Auker, Browns: Former beat Indians in first game with seven-hit pitching and made three hits himself; latter held American League leaders to five safeties in nightcap.

Bill Dietrich and John Rigney, White Sox: Combined with two fine pitching performances to whip Tigers in doubleheader.

Marius Russo, Yankees, and John Babich, Athletics: They divided doubleheader with two five-hit pitching jobs.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 3—(AP)—One of the reasons Johnny Rucker is burning up the Giant outfield is that pretty "Dickie" Stock of Mobile, (a daughter of Milt, the old big leaguer) is in the grandstand regularly. . . . Plenty of dough being bet around town that Bob Pastor licks Billy Conn Friday night.

Chattanooga fans are threatening to lynch owner Joe Engel if he doesn't bring Hazen (Ki Ki) Cuyler back to manage the Lookouts next season. . . . Jesse Owens, the old track flash, is barnstorming around the country, appearing in exhibitions and lecturing to youngsters in track and field clinics —Headline in a Chicago paper: "Dykes Fined $50 For—You Know What."

Shorts: The gallery at the P.G.A. final yesterday got a laff when a program vendor went around hollering: "You can't tell Snead from Nelson without a program." . . . Beg Pardon Dept.: It was Buster Maynard and not George (old faithful) Perrell who was voted the most popular member of the Richmond Colts. . . . One of the scribes at Forest Hills referred to Sarah Palfrey as "the former Boston beauty." Well, she was toting around plenty of looks, oomph and glammer the last time we saw her, Butch.

Al Javery, Bees, and Curt Davis, Dodgers: Former allowed only three hits in 10 2-3 innings of relief work to win first game; latter kept eight scattered and hit a homer with one on in nightcap.

ROCHESTER WINGS PRACTICALLY WIN INT. LOOP RACE

Defeat Leafs in Double Bill and Now Hold 5½-Game Lead Over Bears

BEARS SPLIT

Third and Fifth Spots in League Race Still Very Much in Doubt

(By The Associated Press)

Although the Newark-Rochester race looked very hot a short time ago, it now appears that the only places to be decided in the last two weeks of the International League pennant race are third and fifth.

Rochester's Red Wings just about clinched the championship when they won both ends of their Labor Day doubleheader from the last-place Toronto Leafs while Newark Bears broke even with Jersey City. That increased the Wings' lead to 5 1-2 games.

Rochester gave a real exhibition of championship ball in its two victories. The first game score was 9-0 as Mike Ryba blanked the Leafs with four hits for his 22nd victory. The Leafs belted Preacher Roe out to score five runs in the first inning of the second game but Rochester tied it up in the second and went on to win 11-6.

Newark edged out Jersey City 4-3 in the opener when Tommy Holmes singled in George Scharein from second in the ninth inning. But old Bill Harris handcuffed the Bears with five hits in the nightcap.

Montreal's two victories were the most remarkable of the day because they so nearly duplicated Buffalo's two triumphs over the Royals Sunday. On both occasions the first game went 12 innings and the second was a shutout. Yesterday the Royals won 4-3 and 3-0, the second on a one-hitter by Max Macon. Sunday's scores were 3-2 and 1-0 with Floyd Giebell hurling a two-hit shutout.

Baltimore and Syracuse just took turns overpowering each other and the biggest blow of the day was Bill Nagel's 36th homer of the season for the Orioles. Baltimore won the first game 11-10. Lloyd Dietz checked the Oriole sluggers with seven hits in the nightcap and Syracuse won 9-4. Roy Johnson hit four consecutive home runs for the Chiefs.

BYRON NELSON DEFEATS SNEAD

P. G. A. Title Holder for This Year Wins Match by One Hole

Hersey, Pa., Sept. 3—(AP)—Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., today joined the select handful of professional golfers who have won both the medal and the match play championships of the United States and once again the triumph was at the expense of Sam Snead, the luckless.

Nelson, open king in 1939, won the P.G.A. title for the first time yesterday. He defeated Snead, recent champion-open winner, by one hole in a rousing 36-hole final that wound up in a blaze of brilliant shots.

Sammy threw a final round 68, five under par, at Nelson and it didn't do him any good.

Nelson simply outplayed Snead at the important time. He had the championship almost on ice for a time, hovering around a two or three hole advantage, and then in the home stretch got caught in Snead's final and gallant try.

Nelson squared the match and on the 34th scored a birdie three.

Snead, on in two, rapped a 25-footer into the cup and it bounced out, hanging on the lip. That was the break of the match.

BOMBERS LOSE 2 STRAIGHT GAMES

Dominion Champions in Football Find Going Tough in Western Union

Regina, Sept. 3 — (CP)—Two successive defeats, Coach Reg Threlfall hopes, has startled his Winnipeg Blue Bombers sufficiently to produce the zip and team play expected of Dominion football champions. Bombers will get the opportunity to wipe out the thumpings from Calgary and Regina when they meet Roughriders in the third scheduled game of this season's western interprovincial rugby league here Friday night.

After suffering a 12-1 walloping at Calgary last Friday night, Bombers came to Regina Labor Day to bow 3-1 before the surprising Roughriders. Dean Griffing's new Roughriders display was marked by the tackling of Ken Preston, formerly of Queen's University, Kingston and punting of the veteran Jimmy Lander whose kicks averaged 61 yards to the 38-yard average of Greg Kabat and Art Stevenson who kicked for the Bombers.

C. CLAPP'S RINK WINS CORBIN CUP IN TOURNAMENT

Trebles Competition at Local Greens Attracts Eleven Outside Entries

22 RINKS COMPETE

Campbellford Rink Wins Ackerman Trophy from Kingston Trio

Competition of the keenest order marked the annual men's trebles sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club here on Labor Day, when 22 rinks from all parts of Eastern Ontario vied for the Corbin and Ackerman trophies and the many valuable prizes, which were tendered by the host club.

Rolling the hottest bowls of the current season Clarence Clapp's Belleville rink, composed of Mr. Clapp, skip, Irvine Hefkey and Doug Row were literally tops all through the tournament, which was proven in the fact they defeated Charlie Heagle's Kingston rink 23 to 4 in the final match for the Corbin Cup and the tournament top honors. The 1939 winners of the annual open men's trebles staged by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club, Ted Green and Chas. Topping of Kingston, were eliminated in the Primary round and defeated by the Campbellford rink in the consolation round for the Ackerman trophy.

Twenty-two rinks from all parts of Eastern Ontario competed at the Belleville Bowling Club's annual men's trebles yesterday Kingston having five teams, Campbellford two, Stirling two, while Deseronto and Hastings were represented with one team each leaving the remaining eleven from Belleville.

In the Primary Belleville and Kingston met in the finals with the local rink of Clapp, Hefkey and Row laying down some perfect bowls to win 23 to 4. In the consolation round the rink of Locke, Wiggins and Archer, of Campbellford, defeated Green, Topping and McCullough of Kingston, while in the Hard Luck series the Hastings rink of Matheson, Williams and Hagerman defeated the Belleville rink of H. Bryant, C. McGuire and C. Bonisteel.

Aside from the annual trophies, many valuable prizes were provided the respective winners, silverware, fine Kenwood blankets and other useful articles were provided by Games Chairman Cliff Argue and his able body of co-workers, who made the annual Labor Day men's trebles of 1940 a highly successful lawn bowling tournament with which to climax the open bowling season.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Man Who Talked Too Much"

There's pulse-pounding excitement packed into every minute of the Capitol Theatre's current attraction, "The Man Who Talked Too Much," Warner Bros.' fast-moving, exciting film which opened there last night with George Brent and Virginia Bruce in the co-starring roles.

The vital Frank J. Collins play has been given a well-rounded production with an outstanding cast in support of Brent and Miss Bruce. Excellent performances are given by lovely Brenda Marshall, Richard Barthelmess in an important screen comeback, and William Lundigan, promising young player. Vincent Sherman directed and Walter DeLeon and Earl Baldwin wrote the screen play.

District Attorney Stephen Forbes played by George Brent, is a glib-tongued orator with an impressive list of convictions. It is when an innocent boy is added to his list, and the guilty person confesses too late to save him, that Steve washes his hands of the work and says, "I would rather see 100 guilty men go free than to see one innocent man die."

His understanding secretary Joan Reed, played by Virginia Bruce, goes with him to his new office on the wrong side of the tracks. Business is bad and eventually he ties up with J. B. Roscoe, portrayed by Richard Barthelmess, an underworld character. Business booms and the office expands to include a new secretary, Celia Farrady, Brenda Marshall's role, and Steve's brother John, played by William Lundigan, fresh out of law school.

John realizes that his brother isn't running an honest law firm and decides to do something drastic. He opens Steve's vault to Federal authorities, turning over incriminating evidence against Roscoe. But this boomerangs when Roscoe frames an airtight murder charge against the boy. This challenge brings Steve back to his old self as he uses all his ingenuity to exonerate John and clear himself with Virginia.

The added special attraction is "The Farmer's Daughter." One of the screen's gayest story ideas, embellished with the antics of Martha Raye and Charlie Ruggles, and further aided and abetted by a top-notch cast is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, "The Farmer's Daughter."

Martha Raye holds down the title role, but there's no holding down Martha. She's in there swinging with both arms and a set of famed vocal chords that get over two grand numbers.

SHELL "OILERS" EVEN SERIES WITH KINGSTON SQUAD

PLAY AT NAPANEE

Third and Final Game of Series Will be Played at Napanee Tuesday Night

Shell "Oilers" forced a third and final game at Napanee this evening by evening their series with the Kingston Tanners on Saturday night, when the local "Oilers" downed the Limestone City nine 11 to 8 to even the intermediate O. A. S.A. round play-off at one game each.

Extra base hits told the tale as the Oilers counted seven singles of this type off the deliveries of "Cowboy" Smith, Kingstone's ace hurler, three of which were circuit blows. Belleville opened by souring four runs in the initial frame as the first five local batters hit safely, Ronsky opening with a triple and Sero hitting a home run. Kingston scored a brace of counters in the third and Belleville got a cheap run in the fourth but the Tanners forged to the fore by scoring five runs in the fifth, as See opened with a homer. Two walks, a single by Boneham filled the bases and Ball clouted a second home run of the inning off Bawden. A single by Cole, a home delivered by Bawden with two on gave the homesters three in their half of the fifth and from that point the homesters were never headed as Bawden and company played sterling defensive ball from then in to win.

Cole Paces Hitters

Art Cole with a home run, double and single paced the locals on the attack as Ronsky not only fielded splendidly but drove out two timely triples, Henn and Bawden also had two hits each while Smith lead the visitors with a triple, double and single, See and Ball hitting homers to lead the Tanners on the attack.

Bawden was in rare form on the Belleville mound, striking out eleven Kingston batters to Smith's two, although Bawden walked six to Smith's four. A third and final game of the series will be played in Napanee this evening, with the winner meeting Oshawa.

It may just possibly so happen that tonight's girls' benefit softball game will be the last game of the season, although the city championship has yet to be declared between the "Oilers" and "Cementmen". This evening at Coleman Flats the champion Zellers nine will meet an all-star team selected from the remaining five clubs in the girls' loop in a benefit game for the Belleville branch of the Canadian Red Cross. Leo Barrett has selected a formidable band of feminine "mushballers" to battle Chuck Barnett's league champions and it will definitely be the final appearance of girls softball in Belleville this season. They'll push off about 6:30 p.m. and the cause is one that should bring a goodly number of sport fans out, if only to help the Red Cross. The girls' league felt they should assist in our country's war effort and all receipts will be turned over to the Red Cross, the league assuming any minor expenses that may be entailed.

It took them two games to accomplish it, but the Shell "Oilers" did manage to down the Kingston Tanners and "Cowboy" Smith here Saturday forcing a third and final tussle to be played at Napanee this evening. The Oilers had their batting togs on Saturday night clipping Smith for thirteen hits, including three homers, two triples and two doubles. The Tanners just couldn't get Art Cole out, the elongated first baseman getting a home run, double and single and scoring four runs in five trips to the plate. Johnnie Bawden helped his own cause with a circuit blow, but it was his pitching that featured, as Bawden struck out eleven Kingston batters while the "Cowboy" only whiffed two local batters. The Tanners kicked in with three costly errors in a hard-hitting struggle. Both teams will be shorthanded this evening in the third game, but it appears as though the Oilers will lose more players on account of military camp, than will Kingston. It looks as though the Cementmen just can't beat Wooler, as the latter eliminated Bubby Gaulin's charges again this year.

"Baseball catchers once played without the protection of gloves, masks, chest protectors or shinguards," Parker points out. "The first catcher to get sensible and use a padded glove required moral courage aplenty to brave the taunts of his fellow players that he was a sissy. But he could thumb his nose at them with unbroken digits.

"The chest protector didn't arrive until many ribs had been fractured and many catchers knocked out by solar plexus blows, delivered by foul tips. Now any catcher who would go behind the plate without a single item of his armor would be looked upon as a trouble-borrowing simpleton. Thus has the silly bravado of the early days of baseball been replaced gradually by common sense. In view of this, it is amazing, therefore, that the same senseless objection to protecting the batter is now being raised as was voiced when the catcher was the target for most of the injuries.

"Ball players are still as stupidly opposed to protecting themselves lest their manliness be questioned as they were when the catcher who could break a couple of fingers, a rib or two and a schnozzle for the dear old team, considered himself hot stuff instead of just the plain damphool that he really was.

"Meantime, players continue to be hit on the head and seriously injured. It is one of the paradoxes of baseball, in itself one of the most progressive of games, that those connected with it have always been opposed to any change from the old order."

Clarence Clapp's trio of local lawn bowlers were really hot yesterday when they made a run away of the annual Belleville men's trebles held here on Labor Day. The local rink consisted of C. Clapp, skip, "Irvey" Hefkey and Doug Row. When any lawn bowling team beats Charlie Heagle's Kingston rink 23 to 4 they must be torrid and that was the score yesterday when the local rink won the Corbin Cup and top-flight honors at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club's annual men's open trebles. Twenty-two rinks from all parts of Eastern Ontario competed at lawn bowling here yesterday, the tourney lasting until the wee small hours this morning before all of the day's honors were won. Game Chairman Cliff Argue and his able body of workers provided some really worthwhile prizes, that attracted a large field of lawn bowlers. It marked the final major bowling event of the season, which is now practically over for another year.

Do you remember when—George Young, who gained international fame when he swam the treacherous Catalina Channel in 1927, won the Canadian National Exhibition 15-mile swim at Toronto nine years ago today. It was the only year the Toronto born swimmer finished in the money.

Chicago beat the Tigers twice and the lowly Browns whipped the Indians two, as the Yankees were splitting yesterday so as the result of winning three out of four over the holiday we now find the Yankees in second place in the American League and only 3½ games out of first place. That dual loss by Cleveland to the Browns must have proven a rude jolt, but it is the onrush of the Yankees that really should be startling, as the "men of McCarthy" had won eight straight before bowing to Johnny Babich and the A's yesterday. Baseball fans aren't even so much as giving the National League a tumble these days with the American League providing the only September battle in years.

SPORT SPICE — "Yammy" Jamieson's Kingston juniors lost 1 to 0 to Toronto on Saturday, but back at home yesterday the Limestone City kids evened the series with a 13 to 5 win, which would indicate the Kingston juniors are equally as good as any junior ball outfit in the province. ......Employing a little caution the Kingston kids should advance to the provincial finals at least....Looks as though "Slammin' Sammy" Snead just can't win a P.G.A. title....Last year he blew the pro golf title, but yesterday it was Byron Nelson, who upset Snead and won the P.G.A. title one up....The winning of the Canadian football title last season by the Winnipeg Blue Bombers didn't command any respect of other Western grid squads however....Already this season the Dominion champs (or are they chumps?) have lost two starts. Calgary beat the Blue Bombers 12 to 1 last Friday and yesterday Regina Roughriders beat 'em 3-1, both games being Western Conference scheduled matches......They tried "midnight baseball" at the Maple Leaf Stadium after midnight Sunday...Derbys beat the Grads 6-2 in a T.A.B.A. game, perhaps the first baseball game ever to be commenced a few seconds after a day was born....What next?

FLYING OFFICER KILLED AT BARRIE

M. L. Stephens, 24, Was to Have Received Wings at Ceremony This Week

Barrie, Ont., Sept. 3 (CP).—Flying Officer Maxwell Lloyd Stephen, 24, who was to formally receive his wings at a graduation ceremony at Camp Borden this week, was killed yesterday when the Royal Canadian Air Force plane in which he was flying solo, crashed at Big Bay Point on Lake Simcoe.

Eye witnesses said the plane narrowly missed a clump of trees and a cottage before it plummetted to the ground and took fire. The body of Stephen, who joined the R.C.A.F. in Moncton, N.B., last November, remained strapped in the seat which was thrown 40 feet from the wreckage. Cause of the crash is not known.

Scene of the crash is fifteen miles east of Camp Borden and fifty miles north of Toronto.

SMALL CHANCE OF BEING KILLED

London, Sept. 3.—(CP)—A Briton's chances of being killed by German air bombs in the period from June 20 to Aug. 20 were around one in 3,000,000 in any 24 hours, Lord Croft, Undersecretary of State for War, said in a statement today.

UNITED STATES' ARMAMENTS PLANTS WORKING ON 24-HOUR SCHEDULE

Determined to bolster their defences against any possible attack, the United States great re-armament drive is gaining momentum. At the Watervliet arsenal huge 16-inch and 14-inch cannons for the army and navy are being turned out. A workman is shown peering through the barrel of a big 16-incher (upper left), while some idea of the size of these guns may be obtained (upper right) as an inspector crawls through the barrel. A general view of the shop where these guns are manufactured is shown (lower left.) Two hundred 37mm. anti-tank guns such as shown (lower right) roll out of this arsenal each month.

1,967 German Planes Shot Down Over Britain in First Year of War

London, Sept. 3 (CP)—Britain opened the second year of the war today by sending long-range bombers to the attack upon the continent and by fending off German blows at London and most of the rest of England.

A strong formation of Royal Air Force bombers was seen last night to strike heavily at the Boulonge region along the coast of German-held France. Shortly after the bombers headed out across the channel deep explosions were heard coming from Boulonge.

(Berne, Switzerland, had three air raid alarms during the night, indicating British planes again were on raiding flights to Italy and possibly southern Germany).

Bombing attacks on Germany, Italy, Holland and France, including one on a Nazi submarine and speedboat base at Lorient, on the German-held French Coast, were announced by the Air Ministry. Munich, National Socialism's "Sacred City," was bombed for the first time.

The Ministry said that German Aircraft factories at Munich and Stuttgart were attacked, as were munitions factories at Leipzig and Bitterfeld and shipping in the port of Emden.

700 Planes in Attack.

German bombers held London under alarm for four hours and 21 minutes, the all-clear sounding at 2:55 a.m. It was London's 36th alarm of the war and it capped a day of bitter daylight fighting in which a total of about 700 German planes attacked Britain.

Little activity was observed in the night attack on the London area. One raider dropped about fifteen bombs and another unloaded two scream bombs, damaging houses but causing no casualties.

The Germans attacked elsewhere, particularly in the industrial midlands, where they struck for the 11th successive night. Several persons were killed by a direct hit on an air raid shelter.

The government in its first communique of the day said the "general damage was slight" from the night raids and the number of casualties "is remarkably small".

The air ministry said of yesterday's daylight raids that 300 planes—bombers and fighters—were used in the last attack alone. It reported 42 German planes were brought down yesterday while the R.A.F. lost thirteen. The pilots of seven of the latter landed safely.

With these late bags, Britain closed the first year of the war with a total of 1,967 German planes shot down over the British Isles—1,771 shot down by British fighter planes and 196 downed by anti-aircraft guns.

The Air Ministry reported approximately 1,500 of the German planes were destroyed since the daily air attacks began on Britain June 18.

Showing the acceleration of the air war, the ministry said pilots of the fighter command flew 200,000 miles in September, 1939, and a peak of 4,500,000 miles in August, 1940. The year's total was set at 17,000,00 miles—"or 700 times around the world."

August also accounted for approximately one-half of the whole year's total of German planes shot down by fighter planes—967, the ministry said.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma was darning holes out of stockings, saying, Dont you think we ought to be more serious, Willyum? I mean with the world the way it is, and all? she said.

I was never more serious in my life pop said. I paid 20 cents for this cigar and I'm straining every nerve and bending every sinew to get the last molecule of sattisfaction out of it, he said, and ma said, I mean dont you think we ought to make a fixed point of talking about more serious subjects? Now for instants all this fuss about the gold standard and America having so much gold it's just going to be too bad instead of too wonderful. Can you explain that to me in a little more of a nutshell, Willyum? she said.

It's a complicated business, but I suppose there's a simple way of looking at it, pop said. It's like any other rare possession that seems valuable to you until you try to sell it. Now with the United States, gold is a rare possession because they've got practically the world's whole supply of it. Well now just suppose this war goes the wrong way and over there in Europe they decide that gold may be all right to put in teeth but when it comes to currency, they'll use beans, he said, and ma said, Beans, that reminds me, speaking of currency. The grocer owes me a rebate on that last pound of butter he sent, it tasted more like cheese. And there's another intristing subject, Willyum it's the refugee problem. What about all those poor refugees, Willyum? she said.

I dont know about all of them, but I can speak with authority about one, pop said. He's going to seek temporary shelter in Peet's Bowling Parlars he said.

Meaning himself.

Communal Feeding A Possibility

London, Sept. 3 (CP).—The Food Ministry Monday named a director-general for communal feeding in Britain, moving a step forward toward the much-discussed plans by which government-controlled "mass production" dining halls will be established.

The director-general is W. B. Chrimes, managing director of a big chain of provision stores. Mr. Chrimes will be in charge of the large-scale plans being drawn up to save fuel and food by feeding thousands of war workers.

Catering facilities available in each area of Britain have been surveyed by the Food Ministry, which is also working on extension of provision canteens for factory workers. The ministry likewise is examining the practicability of providing increased canteen facilities for other classes of consumers.

Labor quarters are particularly enthusiastic over the communal feeding project. They see in it a solution to their protest against "luxury dining out" by persons who can pay the price in time of war stress.

First experiments in communal feeding, tried on a small scale earlier this summer, attracted wide attention and indicated that cooking of food in large quantities over communal stoves cut down considerably on fuel costs while avoiding considerable waste.

One welfare institute served 2,300 meals, cooked on one stove instead of some 1,000 stoves as would have been the case had the participating families had meals at home. Fuel bill for the week was £2. The meals were served at about 11 pence each (22 cents).

BELLEVILLE BOY EARNS BICYCLE

'Johnny wanted a bicycle more than anything in the World. But his Dad rightly believed a boy should earn his fun. It certainly didn't look promising for Johnny.

But that night Johnny said "How about giving me a contract to keep the family's shoes shined, Dad? I'll shine your shoes three times a week for a quarter. Same for Mom and Sis, too. I'll soon have enough to buy a bicycle—and you'll get better shines, too, because I'll use Nugget Shoe Polish—the polish that preserves as well as shines."

Free Argentine Beef Arrives in Britain

London, Sept. 3 (CP)—The first supply of beef which Argentine livestock producers are providing free to the British forces, arrived in England Monday, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported.

The beef, worth 20,000 pounds, amounts to 500 tons and represents 2,000 head of steer. It is planned to send similar gifts throughout the war.

The sum of 50,000 has so far been collected for this purpose and arrangements are being made at present to transport a further 1,000 tons to Britain.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Tweed — Mr. W. D. Courtney, caretaker of Tweed Consolidated School, suffered a fracture of a bone in his left heel while cleaning windows at the school on Wednesday. He was standing on a window sill on the outside of the building, fortunately on the ground-floor, when in some manner he lost his grip, falling some ten feet to the cement sidewalk below. He will be laid up for some days.

Corn on the cob is off the menu of the average family in Tweed this year as a result of the depredations of the European corn-borer. Many patches of corn planted by local and district growers are a total loss owing to this pest. Captain Banar of the Salvation Army Corps, planning a farewell to Lieut. McLaren, drove several miles the other day for the purpose of securing corn for a corn roast. He was unsuccessful in his quest and weiners were substituted for the corn.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 3.—(AP)—The recovery trail turned a bit rough in today's stock market after Steels had led a mild early push. Near the fourth hour gains running to a point or so were substantially reduced or transformed into fractional declines.

Traders generally came back from their holiday with the hope September would witness a definite break in the market lethargy. Buying here and there was attributed to the belief Britain is giving the Nazis more than Hitler had bargained for.

Attracting support were U.S. Steel, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Wright Aeronautical, Dow Chemical, Johns-Manville Great Northern and International Paper Pfd. Inclined to waver occasionally were Bethlehem, International Nickel, Westinghouse, Santa Fe and Montgomery Ward.

Hiram Walker, in the Canadian Group, advanced 1-2 point while Canadian Pacific held unchanged. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, gained 5-8 of a point.

Can Close Agreement Says President

The President enclosed an opinion by Attorney-General Robert Jackson dated Aug. 27, 1940, "regarding my authority to consummate this arrangement."

The Senate was not in session today, so the message went only to the House of Representatives, meeting to debate the Senate-approved Conscription Bill.

Mr. Roosevelt said the arrangement with Britain was effected in an exchange of notes between Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, and State Secretary Cordell Hull Sept. 2nd.

It "is not inconsistent in any sense with our status of peace," he declared.

"Still less is it a threat against any nation," he continued. "It is an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defence in the face of grave danger.

Essential For Safety.

"Preparation for defence is an inalienable prerogative of a sovereign state. Under present circumstances this exercise of sovereign right is essential to the maintenance of our peace and safety. This is the most important action in the reinforcement of our national defence that has been taken since the Louisiana purchase. Then as now, considerations of safety from overseas attack were fundamental."

The value to the western hemisphere of these outposts of security "is beyond calculation", the President stated.

"Their need has long been recognized by our country," he said., "and especially by those primarily charged with the duty of charting and organizing our own naval and military defence.

"They are essential to the protection of the Panama Canal, Central America, the northern portion of South America, the Antilles, Canada, Mexico, and our own eastern and gulf seaboards. Their consequent importance in hemispheric defence is obvious. For these reasons I have taken advantage of the present opportunity to acquire them."

Text of Statement.

"To the Congress of the United States:

"I transmit herewith for the information of the Congress notes exchanged between the British Ambassador at Washington and the Secretary of State on Sept. 2, 1940, under which this government has acquired the right to lease naval and air bases in Newfoundland, and in the islands of Bermura, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad, and Antigua, and in British Guiana; also a copy of an opinion of the Attorney General dated Aug. 27, 1940, regarding my authority to consummate this arrangement.

Right To Bases Gift.

"The right to bases in Newfoundland are gifts, generously given and gladly received. The other bases mentioned have been acquired in exchange for fifty of our over-age destroyers.

"This is not inconsistent in any sense with our status of peace. Still less is it a threat against an nation. It is an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defence in the face of grace danger.

London Pleased

London, Sept. 3—(CP)—Foreign office officials broke into broad grins and greeted news of the Anglo-American exchange of air and naval bases for over-age destroyers today "with the greatest possible satisfaction."

PREMIER KING TERMS DANGER REAL TO AMERICAS

Economic Peril is Faced Even if Continent Free, Says Prime Minister

LABOR PRAISED

Ottawa, Sept. 3 (CP).—Liberation of Europe from "the night of Nazism" will depend upon the strength and will "not of one democracy but of all the democracies that have survived", Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared in a broadcast address on Sunday night.

"If we lack the vision to see the peril and the strength to meet it, we on the North American Continent, like the nations of Europe, may come to disaster," the Prime Minister said.

Mr. King spoke in the "Let's Face the Facts" series over a coast-to-coast network of Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and combined his address with a Labor Day message to workers.

Commenting with satisfaction on the co-operation on North American defence, now under way between Canada and the United States, Mr. King said defence of the continent would not be enough.

Sees Economic Pressure.

Even if the continent is not invaded the continued domination of Europe by totalitarian states would, by economic pressure, force New World democracies to regimentation and make them "hewers of wood and drawers of water for the new economic masters of the world."

While paying high tribute to those who daily offer their lives in defence of democracy, on the land, the sea and in the air, Mr. King praised labor as "the partner and ally", working long hours and giving freely of their skill and strength to produce those essentials required by the fighting forces. To the labor organizations Mr. King expressed his gratitude in being asked to deliver a Labor Day message.

"From my early years I have been deeply interested in the problems of labor," he said. (He was Minister of Labor and was largely responsible for creating the department forty years ago.)

"One reason, I believe, is that labor's main concern along the path of life has been a continuous struggle against adversity and poverty.

Means Humanity Itself

"Labor, too represents so overwhelming a proportion of mankind that it is almost synonomous with humanity itself. To improve conditions of labor is to better the human lot on this earth."

Mr. King discussed the war in relation to labor, what it would mean to labor if the war were lost and what victory would mean to the working class. He reviewed the events of the first year of the war during which "freedom fleeing from many lands has followed peace into exile".

The year just ended was "one of the blackest years in human history", Mr. King said. He recalled his message to the people a year ago when Canada freely entered the conflict. At that time he warned that the fortune and freedom of every Canadian was bound up in the struggle and called upon his fellow citizens to unite in a national effort.

"The world knows how nobly and with what unanimity the people of Canada answered that appeal", he said.

Today the British Empire stood alone as champions of the rights of free men, aided by the loyal remnants of forces of those countries which have fallen under German domination.

"Lighthouse of Democracy"

It was significant, Mr. King said, that tomorrow's celebration of Labor Day—a day set apart by Parliament "to honor the place Labor has gained and holds in our national life"—could be celebrated peacefully in Canada after a year of war.

"Every Labor Day is a lighthouse of democracy. As its rays revolve we see beneath them the freedom and well-being which we have achieved. As its light flashes tonight we catch a glimpse of the land of our dreams . . . .

"We believe in the right of men to enjoy the fruits of their honest labor. We believe in the sanctity of humanity and in man's progressive capacity to take upon himself more of the attributes of divinity. . . .

"Within the space of a single year we nave witnessed the extinction of democracy on the Continent of Europe. Beyond the confines of the British Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America, democracy scarcely survives in the world today."

Whether Labor Day a year hence would see a free Europe "or the night of Nazism casting its gloom in deepening shadows over this North American Continent" will depend, the Prime minister said, "upon the strength, the will and the untiring work not only of one democracy but of all the democracies that have survived."

Fear Would Oust Freedom

Lacking the vision to see the peril and the strength to meet it, the North American Continent, like the Continent of Europe, might come to disaster in one of two ways, he said.

"This continent might be dominated through actual invasion and conquest. On the other hand, if we fail to carry on the struggle in Europe until tyranny is destroyed, disaster will follow no less surely, even though not one Nazi soldier were to land upon our shores.

"The triumph of the Nazis in Europe would involve, for the peoples of this continent, a substitution of fear for freedom and of economic domination for social progress. It would spell the doom of democracy in the New World."

Germany has acquired vast new resources in her career of conquest, the Prime Minister said, and this was a fact that had to be faced. With the conquered areas, Germany now had a capacity for producing 42,000,000 tons of steel annually, as compared with a British capacity for 17,000,000 tons and the United States, 51,000,000 tons.

In addition, Germany had acquired additional capacity enormously increasing her power to produce all types of war equipment.

"Great Britain, Canada and other nations of the Commonwealth now fight some 120,000,000 Germans and Italians who have acquired resources and control factories far in excess of the resources of their own lands," he said.

As a result of conquest, Germany has "masses of impoverished men and women numbering more than 80,000,000 forced by dire need to work for the lowest possible wage."

Cites Churchill Statement

It was recognition of these facts that recently prompted Prime Minister Churchill to say that the British Empire and the United States would have to be "mixed up together in some of their affairs for mutual and general advantage," Mr. King said.

He commented on the recent creation of a joint Canada-Uniten States permanent defense board as a "practical" recognition of the principle laid down by Mr. Churchill when the British Prime Minister, on August 20th last, announced the readiness of Britain to lease suitable sites to the United States for defense bases.

The drone of many engines, bursts of machine-gun fire and the sight of falling planes told the story to watchers on the ground.

In one coastal district six airmen were seen drifting down, by parachute several miles from the scene of the main battle, apparently having jumped from disabled planes.

Shortly after the London area had its 37th raid alarm of the war, the invaders, a large force of bombers accompanied by scores of fighters, came roaring over the coast.

The British fighters rose to intercept them, and the battle was on.

Many German planes were believed to have been sent crashing to earth.

One of Largest Attacks

The roar of exploding bombs came like thunder for several minutes as the battle shaped into one of the largest of the war.

The Germans apparently were thoroughly beaten as, after the hour's fighting, they jettisoned their bombs and turned homeward with British fighters in pursuit.

When the British fighters returned to their bases, some of them did their "victory roll".

London was under alarm for one hour and 12 minutes beginning at 10:22 a.m. (5:22 a.m. E.D.T.) the sirens sounded almost within a half hour of the hour a year ago when Neville Chamberlain, then Prime Minister, announced in a sad voice Britain was declaring war upon Germany. Two days earlier Germany had invaded Poland.

It was London's 33rd raid since Aug. 18, when Croydon Airdrome was bombed in a big mass raid, and the seventh in the last three days.

The southeast coast battle, the biggest that particular vicinity had experienced, developed when a large force of German bombers accompanied by scores of Messerschmitt fighters, encountered a strong flight of British fighter planes.

Attack Formations

The British attacked the German formations, which came in over the southeast coast, just as they reached an inland town.

While civilians scampered for shelters, the British fliers scattered the German bombing formation and engaged the Messerschmitts. One British fighter eluded a German plane by diving from 20,000 feet—a height of almost four miles—to just above the town's railroad station.

The plane pulled out at 500 feet just as watchers felt certain he would crash. Circling just over the housetops, he climbed back to attack.

A bomber, pouring smoke, crashed in a vertical dive. One airman was seen to bail out and float to earth by parachute miles away.

The first German fighter which was downed went spinning to the earth from about 20,000 feet altitude. Before it struck, its gasoline tanks appeared to explode.

In another air activity earlier in southeast England, a raider dropped incendiary bombs on a plant, starting a fire which was visible for miles. No workers were on duty

Court Ceremony During Raid

The warning came on a day much like that of a year ago, but London today bristled with more fortifications.

The sandbags, after a year's exposure to weather, and the foliage after a summer's drought gave the old town a more mellow atmosphere. The population, inured to day and night raids, heard the warning almost with boredom.

Most firms kept going without a change of pace as home guards on roofstops kept a sharp lookout for raiders to sound local alarms when it became prudent to take shelter.

When sirens wailed half an hour before the time for the start of the Royal ceremony, officers and others to be decorated already were arriving at the palace with their relatives. His Majesty personally ordered that the program was not to be interrupted.

One representative of each of the services received the V.C.

Lt.-Cmdr. Richard Stannard of His Majesty's trawler Arab was awarded the bronze cross for attempting to put out an ammunition dump fire at Namsos, one of the landing points of the British Expeditionary Force to Norway last spring.

Second Lieut. Richard Annand of the Durham Light Infantry won the cross for valor under fire. Among his exploits, he disregarded his own wounds to trundle his wounded batman to safety in a wheelbarrow.

Flt.-Lt. Roderick Learoyd was the Air Force's V.C. winner. He bombed a vital link in the Dortmund-Ems canal in the face of point blank anti-aircraft fire from German batteries.

Canadians Congratulated.

The King congratulated each one of the Canadians and spoke to them briefly of their stay in this country and inquired about their length of service.

In addition to their work at Dunkerque most of the Canadians decorated also participated in the widespread demolition carried out at French ports before the British withdrawal.

Lieut. Golby helped wreck the massive dock at Le Havre which cradled the Normandie during her construction. That, he said, was "my outstanding piece of necessary destruction". Two floating drydocks used in naval construction also were dynamited by the sturdy British Columbian.

"The French didn't like to see us playing hob with their belongings," he explained. "But we couldn't see them fall into enemy hands."

BRITAIN SPENT

Probably not more than $500,000,000 of the first year's contracts have yet been filled, however. In many cases new factories—a number of them paid for by Britain—had to be built before a start could be made on the orders. In some cases items had to be standardized with United States needs so that a single factory could handle both and so delay ensued.

To Step Up Production

Indications are that Britain and the Empire are getting about 10 new military planes a day off United States assembly lines. By next summer they seem to have hopes for about 70 a day. Expressions of doubt that the war will last that long are laughed at.

To pay the cash required by the Neutrality Law for their purchases, Britain has been sending gold here at the rate of about $100,000,000 a week. It comes fresh from the mines of South Africa and Australia, from the bank vaults of London, but most often from Canada where much was either stored before the war or landed by convoy afterwards.

To transact this great purchasing business Britain has a rapidly growing staff totalling more than 1,000 persons, mostly in New York. The bulk of them are Canadians or other British subjects, but many are Americans, even in high positions.

Arthur B. Purvis of Montreal is their boss. An Englishman with 25 years' experience in Canada and the United States he handles a staff of knights and brigadiers with a brisk good humor that has made him a popular and respected figure in both New York and Washington — between which he commutes by plane or train two or three times a week.

GETS NEW POST

Commander W. B. Creery, R.C.N., officer commanding H.M.C.S. Fraser from the first day of the war until it was sunk during rescue operations off Bordeaux, France, has been appointed senior naval officer at Gaspe and commanding officer of all auxiliary vessels based there.

LONDON PAPERS

The Times said that the nation's manpower is not seriously depleted by casualties in the first year and the material resources are substantially intact.

But, it added, "on the other hand we have suffered a worse series of strategic disaster than the most pessimistic imagination could have contemplated a year ago."

The Times listed Britain's allies, struck down, one by one.

"In this tale of disaster there came a moment—let it now be acknowledged for it is past and will not recur—when imminent defeat stared the British empire in the face," said the Times. "That was the time when the retreating army stood at bay in the Channel ports and the informed judgment of the high command estimated that no more than 30,000 then would escape the enemy's clutches."

Since then, the newspaper said, the whole aspect and temper of the war has been changed by two great events—the superb fight against odds at Dunkerque and the air battle fought over England in the early days of August when British fighters inflicted a decisive defeat on greatly superior numbers.

The Daily Telegraph, under the heading "Dictators' Doom" said that "no rulers of nations before them have had such success in arraying the world against the spirit of barbaric tyranny" as Hitler and Mussolini. Referring to Prime Minister Mackenzie King's Sunday evening address, the Telegraph said Mr. King "put the case in memorable words. Just as the one object and effort to the Roman Republic was that Carthage must be destroyed, so free men of the western hemisphere are aware that all mankind will not be safe while the dictators are not crushed."

The newspaper felt that his theme was appropriate to Labor Day.

The Daily Express, recalling the trek to air raid shelters a year ago today when the first alarm sounded, said Britons had been taught that the wail of the siren meant destruction. But now they know that it is also a summons to fight the enemy by working. The paper recalled the successful muster of the Home Guard to throw off any invader and added: "The urgency of those days has faded." It called on the authorities to use the guard as part of a great defensive force.

MILITARY

Gen. Ian Antonescu has been made commander-in-chief of Transylvanian units and released from the monastery where he was confined after organizing armed opposition to the government after the Russian occupation of Bessarabia.

It was uncertain, however, whether he would side with Gen. Ion Dargolina, who sent word to Bucharest that he and his men would resist to the end although Rumanian troops are under orders to withdraw in preparation for Hungary's entrance into Transylvania Thursday.

A similar message came from Gen. Mihai Corniciu, former minister of war, who also is stationed on the Transylvania frontier.

At Cluj, ancient capital of Transylvania, the Rumanian peasant leader Julius Maniu, ardent opponent of the cession agreement dictated at Vienna last week by Germany and Italy, was reported to be rallying his followers for armed resistance to the Hungarians.

At Brasov, scene of some of the most violent weekend disorders, thousands of persons knelt in the public square and took an oath pledging "death to the traitors" who acquiesced in the agreement.

Hastily organized armed Transylvanians seized communications, transportation services and strategic military posts at Sighet, Stau Mare and other towns in the affected territory.

Troops Still Patrol Streets

Bucharest appeared calmer after the week-end of disturbances but troops still patrolled the streets and kept a close guard on King Carol's Palace.

The Government, apparently spurred by a semi-official German threat to occupy all of Rumania with Nazi troops unless anti-axis agitation is curbed, announced 281 "alarmists" had been sentenced to concentration camps. The roundup was continuing.

Unconfirmed reports said two units of Nazi motorized troops all ready were poised at the frontier near Sighet.

Ion Lugajanu, parliament member, former Minister to Rome and editor of a leading Bucharest newspaper, was released yesterday after being held in jail overnight. His newspaper, defying government censorship, published a long account of Sunday's disorders, in which German, Italian and Hungarian property was destroyed and scores of persons were injured.

There were reports meanwhile that Russia had sent a note to Berlin asking clarification of a German guarantee to protect Rumania against further territorial encroachments, made to Vienna in return for Rumania's agreement to cede northern Transylvania to Hungary.

The note was said to have been the subject of a conference which the German Minister to Rumania, Wilhelm Fabricius, held yesterday with the new Russian Minister to Bucharest, Arkedy I. Levrentieff.

HANSON ASSERTS AID TO BRITAIN MOST IMPORTANT

Conservative Leader Says Canada's First-Line Defence Lies in British Navy and Air Force

RAPS DEFENCE TALKS

Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP)—A warning by Hon. R. B. Hanson that Canada's first-line of defence lies in the strength of Great Britain's navy and air force—"and as yet there are no others"—was before Canadians today.

Addressing a Labor-Day Directors' luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition, the Federal Conservative leader said that current discussions on joint Canada-United States defence of North America "are being held in the light of an urgent actuality. So far and up to date the practical effect on the fortunes of the war is merely that of window dressing."

These discussions were far less important than marshalling Canada's power for the defence of England," he said.

"Try, as some men may, to avoid the acknowledgement of the crucial fact, the defence of this North American continent lies in Britain, on the North Sea, and in the air over Britain and over the sea.

"There and there only is our first line of defence and there is no other. The Royal navy and the Royal Air Force are our defenders and as yet there are no others. They and they only are our defenders and to our shame be it said we have never contributed a single dollar or a single man towards their support, strength and efficiency."

No Commitments Made

Mr. Hanson believed that "our good neighbors to the south are becoming aware" of the fact that the British navy and the Royal Air Force are the only defenders of the North American continent. "In any event I am glad to think that those of them who know and appreciate the bald facts and who realize the actualities are giving whole-hearted support to that truth."

Referring to the meeting of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt at Ogdensburg, N.Y., Mr. Hanson said he learned at Ottawa that no commitments have been made on the part of either nation and that the British Government was informed, if not consulted, and is in agreement with the holding of joint defence talks.

He said he also learned at Ottawa that the conference was held at the request of President Roosevelt and not by Canada. "If I apprehend the situation correctly it (the conference) was designed, in part at least, to assist Mr. Roosevelt in his present condition," he said. "Now I do not wish to imply that the movement has not a larger and more noble purpose. Without question it has, but it is to serve the other purpose as well."

The Conservative leader said that if England wins the war the problem for Canada and the United States will be solved "For Britain is our defender—not the United States. If Britain fails—then we shall ask ourselves very pointedly, what then? We are told that under the Monroe Doctrine the United States will defend us. Well, perhaps. If she can defend herself, certainly. . . ."

Inspector Pays Visit to Station

South Bay, Sept. 3.—Mr. H. S. Williams, departmental inspector of fresh water radio beacons and coast stations, paid his first visit to the Main Duck island station, and informed this correspondent that the Duck light and radio beacon is one of the most up-to-date and best on Great Lake waters.

Lost For Several Hours

Enroute to the Galloo Island when the compass aboard the palatial cruiser Skale, Rochester, N.Y., went out of commission, members of the craft got off their course and became lost for several hours this week, until guided by Roy Brisbin, Main Duck fisherman, to the island harbor.

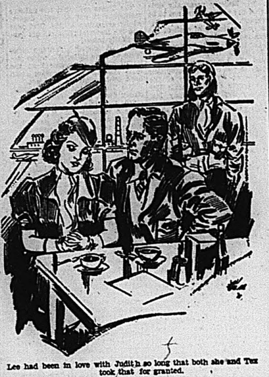
The owner of the boat, apparently strange to local waters, said he had never before heard of the Main Duck, remaining overnight until they picked up their bearings for their destined point.

ALMOST 2 INCHES RAIN FELL IN AUGUST

Exactly 1.93 inches less rain fell during August, 1940, than during the same month one year ago according to records kept at the local pump house. During the month just closed there was only 1.48 inches of rain, while during August, 1939, there were 3.41 inches of rain fell.

The maximum temperatures for the month just closed compared quite favourably with that of one year ago, with the temperature reaching 88 degrees for the high point during August 1940, while one year ago the mercury rose to 89 degrees for the high mark. There was a vast difference in the minimum temperatures recorded however. While it did not freeze in the city during August as it did in many of the surrounding districts, the temperature descended to 38.5 degrees, while one year ago 54 degrees was the low mark for the month.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN



Lee had been in love with Judith so long that both she and Tex took that for granted.

CHAPTER ONE

Just why did I have to quarrel with Tex—today of all days? Judith Aimes kept asking herself the question helplessly. She sat very straight in her seat high up in the press stand, back of the boxes at the Cleveland Airport. And she was glad she was wearing dark glasses, for the tears would come suddenly when Tex's friends stopped to speak to her about his ship.

Now the army was "up". Fifty strong, the boys from Selfridge in their low winged ships wheeled and flashed in the afternoon sun. The roar of their motors synchronized into a deep threat as they began a long dive in formation on the field. Then they were up against the sun again blotted out in a blaze of glory. Just for a moment Judith forgot her own troubles. The huge crowd cheered. They were magnificent!

"Nothing can happen, can it, Judith?" The slender girl sitting beside Tex Aimes' wife caught at her sleeve. There was desperate appeal in Elsie Stone's voice. Judith knew quite well the deep terror that lay in the young wife's eyes. She had seen it in her own. Their husbands were aviators......air racers!

"Of course not." Judith did not look at Elsie as she answered.

"I'm so nervous!" Elsie's voice was pitiful.

"So am I."

"You? You aren't ever afraid, Marvin says. He says I've got to be like you."—

"No use being afraid." Judith still stared up into the sky where the army boys were doing combat. The roar almost drowned out Elsie's thin voice.

"In another hour and a half it will be all over. Then you and Marvin will be sitting on top of the world. Think how proud you'll be!"

Elsie nodded.

"Tex will win, Marvin says. But if Marvin can place in the money. But suppose—" The wife could not go on.

Judith suddenly hated this other wife, hated her because Judith knew so well what she was feeling.

"The fool. Why can't she stop her silly chatter?" Her rage at Elsie melted in her own sweeping remorse. Why she should have chosen today to quarrel with Tex was beyond her comprehension. His nerves had been at the breaking point. But she couldn't stop. What had she said to him? Something terrible, of course. But he had seemed like a stranger to her. She couldn't reach him at all and it had driven her wild. Judith's hands were icy there in the hot September sun. Why had Tex been like that?

"I couldn't bear it if anything happened!" She bit her lips hard to keep from speaking out loud. She'd seen Doug Trexil washed out last year—and Wyn Gleason the year before. Each year she swore solemnly to herself she would never again sit through a Trophy race, but she had. Because she could not stay away. She fought against a sense of uneasiness, a sense of something being wrong with Tex. She couldn't let her nerves get the best of her—she had Elsie on her hands.

Hugh Lanning, one of Tex's newspaper friends from New York, stopped to speak with her. She knew only vaguely what she said to him. Something about the "Victory III," of course.

Yes, it was a wonderful ship. Tex had great hopes for it, maybe as much as 400 miles per hour for the race. No she wasn't worried. Tex liked to break records, and he fancied the idea of being the first man to win the trophy three times.

As she spoke Judith thought of "Victory III". The frail wings seemed ridiculous on the huge power plant. Not a chance to bail out if anything went wrong. She could see the faint smile on Tex's lips as he climbed into the "strawberry box" as he called it, folded up his long legs, pulled the cowling over his head. Such a little ship to be so dangerous! There was nothing to it but motor. Doug's ship had crumpled into nothing last year before the grand stand of 100,000 screaming people, wild with excitement at this new thrill. Curtains for Doug in a spurt of flame.

"What's that?"

"Another race before ours."

"But suppose Marvin shouldn't place in the money. We've taken every cent we could borrow to put into his ship."

"He'll be in the money. There are a lot of prizes," Judith answered curtly.

Money! Judith wanted to scream out at her: "What is money when you may see him killed before your very eyes."

Instead, she introduced Holt to Marvin Stone's wife. Lee grinned down at Judith, feasting his eyes on her cool delicate profile. How game she was! What a thoroughbred!

"How about a cup of coffee, Beautiful?"

"I was wondering where you were." Then to Elsie: "If Lee didn't have his cup of coffee with me before a race he swears he wouldn't win."

"I wouldn't. Come along. I've got about twenty minutes before I have to get back to the ship."

Eager to escape from Elsie for a little, Judith stood up. She felt guilty—Elsie looked so forlorn—but she couldn't throw Lee down.

"Please hold our seats. I'll be back in five minutes with some lunch for you."

"That would be nice. I couldn't eat any breakfast."

Lee led the way down the back stairs of the grand stand, through the pressing crowds. They went into the lunchroom which was almost empty, for it was late.

Lee dropped into a chair opposite Judith. "Take off your glasses so I can see you."

Judith obeyed, smiled at Lee as though he were a child. He'd been in love with her so long both she and Tex took that for granted. Lee feasted his eyes on her face. He loved the deep blue of her eyes, the long black lashes, her cool skin, and black hair.

"How's everything?" Judith was trying to make conversation for his ardent gaze embarrassed her.

"O.K., except I feel as though I had a mess of pigeons fluttering around her." He put his hand over the pit of his stomach.

Judith laughed. Lee seemed no older to her than her kid brother, although he was almost as tall as Tex's six feet two.

When the waitress brought their coffee, Judith ordered food for Elsie. Lee made a face as he tasted the hot liquid.

"Wish I'd ordered beer. It's hotter than the devil today."

"Over my dead body! If I'd had a glass of beer with you and anything went wrong, I'd never forgive myself."

"Trouble is, I let you boss me."

Lee had been watching Judith. There was a shadow in her deep blue eyes.

"Anything wrong?"

"Just the usual."

"We'll all be glad when it's over. Well, here's to the better man, may he win!"

They drank the coffee solemnly. Then Judith determined to ask a question.

"Did you see Tex at the hangar?"

"Yes."

"Everything O.K.?"

"Fine." Lee tried to make his voice sound casual. He watched Judith covertly. Of course she was worried, but he wondered.

"I'd like to have gone over to see him, but you know how Tex hates anybody around on race day."

Judith was uneasy. She could read Lee so easily. Suddenly she was desperately afraid.

"There isn't anything wrong with the ship, is there?"

"Of course not. It was purring like a kitten when I left. Lem was nursing it."

"And Tex seemed all right?"

"Never better! You know Tex. Not a nerve in his body! Acted as though he was thinking about taking you out to celebrate."

"I'm such a fool about Tex." Judith's sudden relief hurt her it was so violent.

CHAPTER TWO

Lee did not add that he'd found Tex sitting in the back of his car smoking a cigarette with Sonia Winthrop. Lee got away from them as soon as he could. But Tex with a gal on race day! Tex who was as temperamental as a ballet dancer and didn't want anybody to even speak to him.

And he seemed to be enjoying himself, so much so that he looked guilty when Lee came along.

Not that Sonia wasn't a knockout. She was. All the gang were crazy about her. She'd done a great job in the cross country race. Navigated like an old sea captain and asked nothing of any of them. If it had been anybody except Tex, Lee wouldn't have given the matter another thought. But Lee had heard Tex hold forth on women fliers! He loathed them. He was not the type to sit around with a blond an hour before a big race.

Judith was lost in thought. There WAS something wrong.

"Lee, look at me. You know you can't lie to me."

"Pretty sure of me, aren't you?"

He tried banter. And he wondered if she'd heard any gossip. But Judith was not to be put off:

"You're my friend, Lee. You'd tell me if there was anything I should know."

Lee's voice was honestly sincere as he answered: "You know I would. Well, here's luck! Tex doesn't need it, he's got it."

Then he changed the subject. He knew how Judith felt about the trophy. It brought bad luck to anyone who won it. And bad luck for men who flew the stuff Tex flew meant only one thing.

"What are you two planning for tonight after the banquet?"

Judith sighed: "We'll be milling about as usual, I suppose. You know how it is."

Lee groaned: "Too well. But I'm on the wagon, unless I win. If I do, there'll be no holding me."

He wanted to ask Judith if she and Tex were going to Sonny Winthrop's party. All the big shots would be there; Sonny had oodles of money. It should be quite a party. But he thought better of it, and let that go.

Judith would have noticed Lee's preoccupation if she had not been so absorbed in her own troubles.

Lee shrugged: "So what? You know Tex on race day."

"That's what makes it so bad. I shouldn't have been such a fool."

She looked at Lee appealingly.

"What did you fight about?" Lee was scared for a moment.

"I cant even remember! He left without kissing me good-bye."

Lee nodded: "O.K. I'll see him, tell him what you said."

"No, just give him my love, and wish him luck for me."

"Good luck, Lee."

He looked so lonely and desperate just for a moment.

"Pigeons still fluttering?"

Lee's crooked smile rewarded her efforts: "I'll say! But just so the wings stay on my ship it's O.K. with me."

Then Lee disappeared in the crowd.

As Judith fought her way up the stairs to the press stand, she pondered his mood. Lee wasn't himself today. That was certain. This racing business! She'd be glad when Tex was back on his regular run. That was bad enough but this she could not stand.

Elsie seemed a little more cheerful when Judith joined her. She managed to drink some of the coffee and eat part of a sandwich. They settled down to wait for Lee's race, which he won. That last hour which Judith so dreaded went quickly.

When they brought Lee to the microphone before the grandstand for a bow, he waved to Judith. Just a little while more. The crowds which had been milling around outside the grand stand were streaming into the bleachers and the boxes. The big race was coming up.

Out on the green airport, seven tiny ships were pockeying slowly into position. Victory III, all silver paint, glittering in the sun. So small it looked as though it had no wings.

Three girls came down the aisle and squeezed themselves into a small space next to Judith. They chattered incessantly... "He's simply darling! Sonny had a date with him last night and he's coming to her party tonight"..."Which is his ship?" asked one of them..."Don't ask me, they all look alike. Sonny was out to the hangar today and he showed her everything about his ship"..."There she is now, by the fence. See her red hat?"

They craned and stood up to see better. Judith was annoyed. Why should they let such people into the press box? Elsie was weeping quietly, clinging to Judith's arm.

"He's crazy about her, but then everybody is," giggled the blondest blond. Judith wanted to slap her!

"Sonny has a thousand on him. Tex told her he was bound to win."

Judith sat in stiffened silence. Her hands were clasped together in her lap. She hadn't really looked at her wedding ring for a long time. Now it startled her, there on her left hand.

Elsie gasped. The first ship was off. Judith did not even see it. All the forebodings of the last few weeks swept back upon her.

So that had been what was wrong with Lee. He knew....

It was queer the way things happen. Suddenly Tex's ship was in the air like a shot and away. Judith staring straight ahead could suddenly see clearly, as though a curtain were parted into the days ahead.

CHAPTER THREE

They were off! Six brittle, incredibly fast planes out to set new world's records! Reporters covering the race, rushed to the back of the stand. In seconds the ships were on the back stretch. Judith could not bring herself to see. Her knees would not have carried her. She sat there waiting, waiting. It seemed hours those short minutes before the racers wheeled into view, dove on the home pylon for the second lap. They came in a deafening roar above the corner of the grandstand.

Four of them! They were bunched together. Their wing tips seemed to touch, so close were they flying, fighting for the lead. As they reached the pylon in front of the stand, they were suddenly stacked one above the other—a house of cards! It was breath-taking.

A murmur ran over the grandstands, an intake of 100,000 breaths! Victory III was on top of the huddle. The other two ships were crowding fast on the first four. A great race! Marvin was coming up. As they disappeared to the left, the first five fanned out on the second pylon and were lost to view.

Judith knew Tex hadn't opened up "Victory." Not yet. It was too early in the race. Elsie was babbling, she was so excited. The palms of Judith's hands were damp as she slumped down to wait... for the next time around. Wait! It seemed all her life she had been doing that. She tried not to think of Sonia Winthrop. Not now! She'd think about that later.

The three girls sitting next to her had rushed to the back of the press platform to see what they could of what was going on at the back pylons. Their excited cries mingled with the click of telegraph instruments. The time was being given on the loud speaker. Judith could not seem to concentrate on it. But it was not a record-breaking lap, she gathered. Then the ships came swooping again. This time they fanned out on the home pylon. Tex was crowding neatly ahead flying wide. Marvin was up there this time. Third place, clearly.

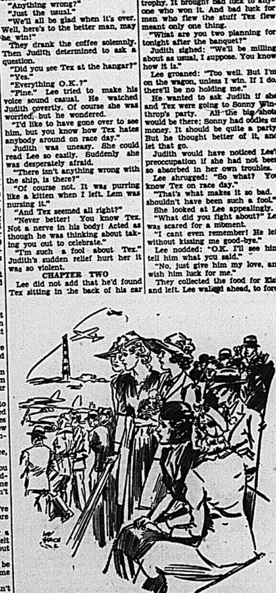
Judith's ears seemed to go dead, so hard did she listen for the sound of Tex's motor. It seemed to be functioning perfectly. A roar went up. Just beyond the pylon something went wrong with one of the ships. There was a puff of smoke. Judith went blind for a moment, like buck fever, until she could focus and see it was not Tex. It was Jim Barnes!

She hardly bothered as the disabled racing ship shot up over the far part of the airport off the course and prepared to land. What did it matter? It wasn't Tex! A cruel game, yes.

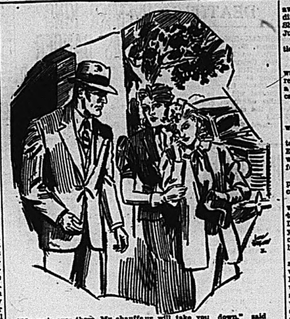
Then a ripple of sound went over the 100,000. Men in the press box rushed to the back, standing on chairs, binoculars gripped to eyes. Something had gone wrong on one of those back pylons.

"Who is it?" There was a babble of voices.

Judith half rose, but Elsie clutched her and she could not stand. Everybody was yelling. Reporters were rushing to the radio room.



"Tex is crazy about her but then ev erybody is" said the blondest blonde



"My car's over there. My chauffeur will take you down," said Michael Dudley.

"Who?" In the confusion, nobody could be quite sure. Judith stood up. Someone yelled to sit down. She'd know in just a minute.

"It's Stone!" a voice sounded behind her. Judith sank down, tears coming. Then she tried to look at Elsie. The girl did not seem to realise. But her face was chalk white as she looked appealingly at Judith.

"What is it?"

The racers were coming again. Judith with a song in her heart saw Tex, well up, racing it out with another ship. The voice came over the loud speaker: "There's been a little accident. Nothing serious. Marvin Stone was forced to land making the fourth pylon. We think it was engine trouble."

Elsie gave a little gasp. Judith thought she was going to faint.

"I've got to get her out of here." Her voice was high and strained as she spoke: "Come, Elsie." Judith pulled the girl to her feet. They stumbled out over the feet of the three girls next to Judith, and they grumbled at the interruption. Judith grabbed Elsie's arm, dragged her through the crowd after her. They passed Hugh Lanning, pounding on his typewriter. He nodded to Judith: "Get her away from here!"

Down the long flight of stairs back of the press box, the two girls stumbled. Elsie moved in a daze, and Judith half carried her down. They came out into the bright sunlight. Judith looked wildly about for a cab. The place was deserted. Everybody was watching the races.

She never knew where Michael Dudley came from. Judith knew him only slightly, her husband's boss, the young general manager of Seaboard Airlines. In her panic Judith realized only vaguely who he was.

"My car's over there. My chauffeur will take you down."

He put the two girls into his car. They were away at break-neck speed. Elsie's thin voice was hysterical: "He's not hurt, is he? Judith, tell me! The man said it was just a forced landing."

Judith could not answer her. Just a forced landing on one of those ships doing better than 300 miles an hour at two hundred feet above the ground! They could hear sirens blazing. The ambulance. Elsie stiffened. "He's hurt!" She began beating on the back of the chauffeur. "Take me to him Take me to him!"

Judith put her arm about the frantic girl. "We're going to him now. Sit quietly, darling. He'd want you to do that."

The chauffeur had evidently had his orders. He turned into Brook Park Road on two wheels. At the next corner they picked up a motor cycle officer. Judith could not hear what the chauffeur said to him but, with the motor cycle in the lead they started.

"Where is he taking us?" Elsie asked.

"To Lake Side Hospital." Judith was thinking fast. They might as well go there. And, of course, Judith could not be sure. Marvin might be alive. Poor Elsie! If he were, he'd be so horribly hurt he'd be better off dead!

CHAPTER FOUR

It seemed years before they drew up in front of the hospital. On shaking knees, Judith got out. She tried to persuade Elsie to wait in the car, but she would not listen.

"I've got to come, too."

The chauffeur helped Judith with Mrs. Stone. At the information desk, it was Judith who did the talking. The chauffeur persuaded Elsie to sit down at a little distance. The nurse on duty talked to Judith in low tones.

"They brought him in just now. You must wait a little."

Together the three sat down on the straight backed chairs.

"Is he here? I must go to him!"

The nurse shook her head at Judith.

"Not now. You must wait a little, dear. Just a little. The doctors are with him now."

The nurse left and came back with a glass of water. She tried to persuade Elsie to drink it. Judith knew it contained a sedative. But the girl pushed the glass aside and stood up.

"I demand to see my husband!"

"My dear, you must be calm. We're doing everything we can. There must be some X-rays."

The nurse tried to help. Her crisp voice seemed to satisfy Elsie for a few moments. The nurse disappeared again. Judith could see she had gone to use a telephone in an inner office. From the inner office the nurse was signaling to Judith.

The nurse took Judith into the hallway.

"Yes... When can she see him?"

The nurse hesitated, as though sizing up Judith's ability to take it.

"I'd say...it wouldn't be wise." She hesitated again. "His ship caught fire."

Judith swayed for an instant. The nurse caught her arm.

"Can you tell her?"

Judith's hands flew to her thraot. How could she?

"I'll have to!" She leaned against the grey wall for a moment, her hands pressed against it.

"Yes."

Judith straightened her shoulders. Then she went back to Elsie. The girl jumped up when she saw Judith and ran to her.

"Take me to him."

Judith signalled to the chauffeur.

"We must go. There are some X-rays to be taken. Come."

"Where to?" The chauffeur's voice was husky as he spoke.

Where to? It did not matter now. The only thing which loomed to Judith's mind was that she must tell this other girl the truth, but how?

"Down town." The car moved away. Elsie suddenly turned to Judith: "You aren't lying to me?" She grabbed desperately both of Judith's hands.

"Yes."

The last vestige of hope...Elsie was stunned. Judith was given a respite for a moment. The wisp of a girl lay back in the seat of the car gasping for breath.

"Take me to him wherever he is!"

"I can't, Elsie."

"I say take me to him!" her voice ward and began to pound the chauf-

"No, darling. I can't." She tried to take the girl in her arms but Elsie pushed her away, leaned forward and began to pound the chauffeur on the back.

"Take me to him!" she cried pleadingly. "I can't bear it! I can't!"

The chauffeur drove. Where they went none of them ever knew afterward. Just down back streets. Driving and driving. It seemed like years. The light began to fade. They couldn't go on this way indefinitely.

Where could they go? Judith's suite? No The gang would be converging. Laughing and celebrating. Even if Tex did not win, the gang would come bounding in. Elsie sobbed in a queer monotone, like the whimpering of a hurt animal. Judith no longer could think of the silly chatter of the three girls, their chatter about Sonia Winthrop. That all seemed so trivial and unimportant now. Why had she ever let anything like that worry her?

But they must go some place. It was Elsie who finally decided things.

"I want to go to our room, Judith. Hurry!"

Judith knew so well what was in her heart, she wanted to be where Marvin's few possessions were, where she'd seen him last. When the decision was made Elsie seemed quieter. But her quiet seemed more desperate to Judith than her first frantic tears.

As they drove up to the hotel, Judith heard the newsboys shouting their extras. She had only a glimpse of the newspapers, enough to tell her Tex had won.

Elsie sat up as they came to the hotel, looking straight ahead. Judith smoothed her hair, put on her hat. They got out. Judith led Elsie into the brightly lit noisy lobby. Some of the gang from the airport were there already. One of the girls called to Judith but she did not stop. A sudden strained silence fell on the crowd as they recognized Elsie Stone. Judith got Elsie's key from the desk, hurried her into the elevator away from the curious though sympathetic eyes.

The elevator stopped at the eighth floor. Judith had trouble with the key. The neat little room which opened onto the court seemed to speak pitifully of Marvin's gallant efforts to make good.

Elsie dropped into a chair, covered her face with her hands. Judith turned on the desk lamp and stepped into the bathroom to get Elsie a glass of water. As Judith came back into the room, Elsie was at the window, climbing up onto the sill.

Judith was at Elsie's side in an instant, dragging her back. Elsie crumpled to the floor. Judith was down beside her, her arms about the other girl.

"Let me go! I don't want to live, not without him!" Elsie sobbed.

CHAPTER FIVE

Judith helped her to the bed. She pulled off Elsie's hat, smoothed her hair, made her lie down.

The telephone rang. Judith got up, took the receiver off the hook. With one eye on Elsie, Judith asked the operator to stop all calls to the room. Elsie lay quiet on the bed now, completely spent by the storm of her tears. Judith tried to think of comforting phrases, but they sounded too empty and futile.

Poor Marvin Stone! For years he'd worked up from a mechanic so that some day he could get into the big race. It had been his dream. Now it was over. She guessed a lot of things were like that.

Elsie was weeping, silently, aimlessly. Judith's lips were stiff as she said: "He would have wanted to go out like this...if it had to be."

Elsie turned her face to the wall.

"But it didn't have to be!" She sat up suddenly. "I haven't told you. He wanted to live. I'm going to have a child." Then she dropped back onto the pillow, her eyes closed...

Judith wished desperately that Tex would come. He was Marvin's old friend. She tried to reach Tex on the telephone but their room did not answer. No, he wouldn't be back from the airport yet.

Part of the gang was back all right. Judith could hear them. The celebration had begun. Somebody across the court was singing. Several others joined in. A radio blared somewhere from above. There was laughter... Fortunately Elsie did not seem to notice.

Now the crowd was doing "Mademoiselle from Armentiers."" Some of the "Early Birds" probably. If only they'd stop! If she could get their room number, she'd ask them to. But she couldn't, with Elsie there to hear. Judith watched the crumpled figure on the bed in despair.

"I should get a doctor."

When she telephoned, the house physician was out.

That singing!

"How can they do that when Marvin's gone?" The wife's voice was piteous.

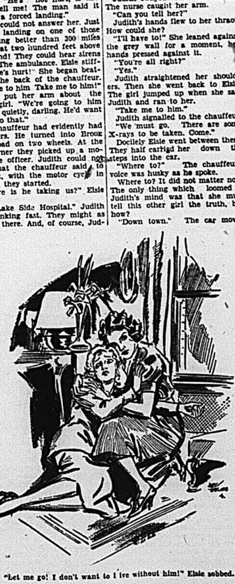
Judith tried to recall Marvin's relatives. There was a half-brother she seemed to remember. If only she could get some of Elsie's relatives here. Judith asked about them.

"My aunt. She lives in Des Moines."

She couldn't get in until tomorrow morning then.

"Marvin's brother? Should I wire him?"

"I suppose so." Elsie was making a heroic effort to pull herself together. "His address is in Marvin's bag. Over there."



"Let me go! I don't want to live without him!" Elsie sobbed.

Seeing the familiar suitcase, she broke down again. Judith went over to it, a shabby affair, it had flown so many miles with Marvin. There was a little red book. In it Marvin had an entry, kept a list of expenses, money he'd spent on his racing ship for today, new spark plugs, etc. Judith found the address. It was in Oklahoma. She went over to the telephone again. Elsie was quiet as Judith dictated two short wires:

"MARVIN CRACKED UP TODAY. CAN YOU COME?"

She made another futile attempt to reach Tex. Then she went back to sit beside Elsie, to listen to her weeping, to the singing of the gang across the way. A knock on the door startled her.

Judith opened the door to admit the sympathetic soft-spoken Michael Dudley. Judith motioned toward Elsie. She had thrown her arm over her face.

"I was afraid of this," Dudley murmured. He looked about the tiny room. The music across the way was getting raucous.

"You can't stay here. Get her up. My car is at the rear. I'll take you down in the freight elevator. The lobby's jammed."

Elsie did not protest when Judith told her they were leaving. Judith found her hat and coat, got her into them, for the night had grown cool. In the car, Dudley announced:

"We're going to the Duttons. They've offered their home. Nobody's there now."

Shortly the car stopped before a brightly lit doorway and a butler came out. Judith could see it was a handsome home, and the lake glistened beyond. In the hallway, Dudley stopped. "I'll wait here. I've called a doctor. Get her to bed."

The butler led the two girls upstairs, to a pretty sitting room with a bedroom beyond. Judith bathed Elsie's face. A maid came in with night clothes. Elsie docilely allowed Judith to help her into bed.

Dudley and a physician came in shortly. Judith left the doctor alone with Elsie for a little while. She felt she had to get away, just for a few moments. When she came into the sitting room, Dudley was standing by the window. He turned:

"You've been a brick!"

"Nonsense, what else could anybody do?" Judith's voice was unsteady and she sat down abruptly.

"He was a good friend." Judith had regained her composure. A maid came in with a glass of hot milk, which the doctor had ordered, went on into the bedroom.

Judith walked over to the window. Outside the lake shimmered in the early fall darkness. A new moon was rising. But not for Marvin Stone. She shivered. The real reason he had wanted to get into the big race was because of Tex. Tex was his hero even since the days in St. Louis when Marvin had worked on Tex's first trans-continental ship...

When Judith finally turned away from the window, Dudley was watching her. She realized for the first time he was in evening clothes. He'd be going to the banquet, of course. The silence hung in the room like a cloud. Judith was glad when the doctor joined them.

"She's dropped off to sleep. I put a sedative in the milk." He closed up his bag which was on the chair. "Somebody had better stay with her. She's suffered a bad shock."

"I'll stay," said Judith.

"Here's my card if you need me again. But I think she'll sleep until daylight probably."

When the two men were ready to leave, Dudley held Judith's hand for a minute.

"Ive ordered a supper sent up here. After the banquet, I'll drop back to see how things are. Your hostess is Mrs. Dutton. She won't bother you tonight. If you want anything, ring."

Judith nodded: "You'll tell Tex where I am?"

"Of course."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was talking and arguing with Puds Simkins and Shorty Judge, and Puds said, Hay, there's a picture around at the Little Grand with the Six Burp Brothers, it's called Wash Monday, I bet it's as funny as anything.

G, it sounds funny, I said, and Shorty said, Let's all go home and ask our mothers if we can go and see it.

Wich we all went to do, and ma was in her room reading a book, and I said, Hello ma, what's you doing?

Just being a sociable question, and ma said, I'm ironing clothes for the naybors.

Being a sourcastic answer, and I said, G, you've almost finished it, haven't you, ma?

Meaning the book, and she said, Yes, Mrs. Hews wants it right back and I'm trying to get through with it this afternoon and maybe I'll succeed if you dont begin an endless series of questions. Look at your hair, she said.

Why, what's a matter with it, ma? It's just like usual, I said, and ma said, That's proberly just the trouble with it, I'd like to see it like unusual for a change. Look at your shoes, she said.

Meaning muddy, and I said, Well jimminy, ma, I'm not going anywheres, I mean in case I do go somewheres I'll clean them right away, and I'll comb and brush my hair too, ma, I bet you wont reckonize me.

O, I might if you give me 2 or 3 guesses, and if you make yourself nice and neet you can take this book around to Mrs. Hews's for me, I certainly wouldn't have you going around there looking the way you do, ma said.

The result being I snuck out of the house again the way I was without even mentioning the Six Burp Brothers, and Puds and Shorty were out already, both saying they couldn't go either.

Making me feel partly lucky.

Eminent Speakers Launch Campaign Across the Nation

Twenty Government Spokesmen Give Luncheon Addresses at Key Points

By The Canadian Press

Under the leadership of Finance Minister Ilsley, spokesmen for the government of Canada were deployed at key points throughout the country today to start the campaign for Canada's second war loan.

Mr. Ilsley spoke at Timmins, Ont., Canada's rock gold-mining centre, but in a broadcast heard at various Canadian Club war loan luncheons throughout Canada he sounded the keynote of the campaign.

He called on Canadians to turn their resources "from private satisfaction to public service" and then in the various centres other leaders added their own words to the appeal.

"Our first war loan (last January) was an outstanding success" said Mr. Ilsley. "Let us make this second war loan equally successful. I have no doubt that the response of the Canadian people to this appeal will justify the faith in us of those who fight for us."

Canada's first loan of the war was for $200,000,000.

At Montreal Defence Minister Ralston and State Secretary Casgrain were the speakers. The Defense Minister reviewed a year of Canada's part in the war and termed Canadian and American defence co-operation in North America logical because "in England is the front line of North American defence."

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Gulf Stream! So-called, but its water really comes from the Caribbean Sea. It flows around the west end of Cuba and via the Florida Strait out into the Atlantic Ocean, hardly mixing any of the Gulf water with it at all. After leaving the Florida coast it flows northeastwardly and at about the middle of the Atlantic loses its identity as it fans out and mixes with the Atlantic waters. Its importance climatically is that it adds to the warmth of the Atlantic, making all the countries in northwestern Europe warmer for their latitudes than any other place in the world.

RAF NIGHTMARES CAUSE ADOLF SLEEPLESS HOURS

Boastful Fuehrer Promises Reprisals for Night Raids Over Berlin

'GENERAL BLUFF'

Berlin, Sept. 4 (AP). — Hitler boasted tonight that "hundreds of thousands of bombs" will drop from the sky on Britain nightly hereafter in retaliation for British night raids on Germany.

Addressing 25,000 workers for the eighth winter relief campaign at the Sports Palace, Hitler said:

"For three months I have waited for the British to cease the nuisance of nightly, planless bomb-throwing. Now we will give the answer night after night."

"If the British throw 2,000 or 3,000 kilograms (of bombs)," said Hitler, "we will unload 150,000, 180,000, yes 200,000 . . ."

Apparently Hitler intended to continue with this progression of figures but he was stopped by the shouts of his audience. (A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.)

Adolf Very Boastful

"If they attack our cities we will simply erase theirs," Hitler boasted. "We will call a halt to these night pirates. The hour will come when one of us two will crack up—and it will not be Nazi Germany.

"Whatever may come, England will collapse.

"If they ask, 'why doesn't he come?' my reply is: just be quiet, he's coming all right."

Hitler assumed a facetious mood, first speaking of "general resolution" as the chief British ally, then general winter and general hunger.

"They ought to make general bluff their Reich's marshal," he said. "Against these generals of the British army we pose the general deed."

D. F. C. Awarded To "Cobber" Kain Presented to Mother

London, Sept. 4 (CP Cable)—The Distinguished Flying Cross, awarded to E. J. (Cobber) Kain, New Zealand ace of the Royal Air Force, for gallantry last spring shortly before his death, was presented to his mother today by the King at Buckingham Palace.

Mrs. Kain was accompanied by her daughter Judith, who is a member of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force. They were received privately and Mrs. Kain described the King as "most charming."

"When he handed me the Cross he told me he was very very sorry to be unable to give it in person to my son Eddie," she said. "The King asked several questions about Eddie and, when I presented my daughter t ohim, he said he was glad to see that she was in the service and asked her where she was stationed."

Kain, 22-year-old flying officer, was killed in an aviation accident in June. He was unofficially credited with bringing down more than 10 German planes in action.

There'll Always Be an England to 'Guide the Clans'

Saskatoon, Sept. 4 (CP)— Addressing a Canadian Club luncheon here today Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., disclosed how he had matched wits and poetic composition a few minutes earlier with Lieut. Gov. A. P. McNab, of Saskatchewan, father of Squadron Leader Ernest McNab, leader of No. 1 fighting squadron, R.C.A.F., now in action in England.

"There'll always be an England
As long as Scotland stands;
For it's due to dear old Scotland
That England's wealth expands".

Air Marshal Bishop retorted with:

"There'll always be a Scotland
While English brains can guide
The brawn and muscle of the Clans
And workers of the Clyde."

American Crews Rush Work to Get Destroyers in Shape for Transfer

COMMISSION AT SEA

Group of Ten Army and Navy Officers Bound for Bermuda for Conference

(By D. Harold Oliver Associated Press Staff Writer).

Washington, Sept. 4 (AP)— The United States acted with great dispatch today to complete its historic swap of 50 over-age destroyers for important defence base sites in six British possessions on this side of the Atlantic.

At Boston, American crews were at work on the first group of eight ships, getting them in shape for transfer to the Royal Navy at a Canadian port on Friday, or immediately thereafter.

Another flotilla of six of the 1,200-ton class destroyers was reported to have left Hampton Roads, Va., headed north for Boston.

In other unnamed ports along the Atlantic coast, the remainder of the vessels involved were being made ready with all speed for delivery in the early future.

Meanwhile, a 10-man commission of army and navy officers were already at sea on the cruiser, U.S.S St. Louis, bound for Bermuda and a series of conferences with British officials there on the base site the United States will acquire in the Great Sound of the resort islands.

RUSSIA CALLS TWO NEW CLASSES

All Men Born from 1920 to 1922 Who Have Completed Secondary Education Called

Moscow, Sept. 4 (AP)—Soviet Defence Commissar Marshal Semen Timoshenko today called up two new classes for military service.

Commenting on the order, the Moscow newspaper Bolshevik noted that "the call to the colors comes during a very complicated international situation when the world is involved in a second Imperialist war," and observed that "the Red army and navy will receive perfect reinforcements this year."

The number of men which the call will add to Russia's armed forces was not indicated.

Affected were all men born in 1920 and during the first eight months of 1921. Also summoned were all men born in 1921 and 1922 who have completed their secondary education and whose compulsory military training had hitherto been suspended.

Fascist Italy May be Surprised

Rome, Sept. 4 (AP)—Fascism's editorial spokesman, Virginio Gayda, asserted today that the exchange of destroyers for defence facilities in the western hemisphere "puts the United States still more dangerously into the European war."

Terming the exchange "one of the most typical aspects of British empire bankruptcy and liquidation," Gayda wrote that Britain's losses "must be colossal if she feels the need of urgent acquisition of 50 American warships paid for with strips of Imperial territory and prestige."

This was much the same line of argument followed by other Fascist writers.

Il Popolo di Roma said that "Like Esau, who sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, England is making a joke of her old Imperial dignity by abandoning ancient and glorious possessions to obtain in exchange poor cast-off ships of little war efficiency."

SHOES USED AS EVIDENCE

London, Ont., Sept. 4 (CP)—Earl Pinnance, 18-year-old Walpole Island Indian, walked into police cour today in his stocking feet because police took his shoes from him to be used as chief exhibit in a theft case.

Pinnance admitted to Magistrate Donald Menzies that he stole the shoes from a repair shop last night and claimed his own footwear "just weren't shoes." He was remanded to Sept. 11 for sentence.

General Satisfaction Expressed Over Deal

(By the Canadian Press)

Swift action on the final details to be worked out in the exchange of United States destroyers for defence bases in British western hemisphere possessions took place today amid a rising chorus of approval of the trade, tempered by only isolated opposition from die-hard American "non-interventionists."

Newspapers in Britain and the United States were almost as one in saying the exchange was a good thing for both countries, giving Britain needed reinforcements for her destroyer fleet and the United States vital positions from which to ensure the safety of the western hemisphere.

British delight was summed up best, perhaps, by A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, who greeted what President Roosevelt said as "an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation" with "the utmost pleasure and satisfaction." That was the British man-in-the-street's reaction in finer language.

Both Sides Satisfied

The United States Secretary of the Navy, Col. Frank Knox, said: "The deal is one of those very rare and unusual transactions in which both sides are thoroughly satisfied that the transaction was a good one." Wendell Willkie, the Republican candidate for the United States presidency, said: "The country will undoubtedly approve."

Public opinion as reflected by the American newspapers approved. "One of the great defence strokes" was the Atlantic constitution's description of the exchange. "Wholly admirable and long overdue," said the New York Herald Tribune. "A step in the direction of more active participation with Great Britain in the defence of a common stake," said The New York Times.

Minor Criticism

What criticism there was in the American newspapers centred only around the delay in the move and the way President Roosevelt effected it. Some newspapers would have preferred that the President had

Nation's Resources Must Turn From Private Satisfactions To Public Service Says Ilsley

Ottawa, Sept. 4—(CP)—Pleading for wholehearted response to the second war loan to be offered next week Finance Minister Ilsley, in a broadcast address today, declared "the resources of this nation must be turned from private satisfactions to public service."

Mr. Ilsley delivered a brief talk which was transcribed and broadcast for the benefit of some 20 service club luncheons held today from Halifax to Vancouver with prominent speakers reviewing the first year of war and urging support for the war loan.

The minister was also chief speaker at the Canadian Club luncheon in Timmins Ont. In his radio talk he thanked the association of Canadian Clubs which had arranged the series of luncheons across Canada.

"After one year of war we know more clearly what the war demands of us," the minister said. "It is a total war in which everyone in the nation must do his share."

Must Borrow Some Money

Whatever means are taken for meeting war expenditures, "a substantial part of the amount required must be borrowed," he said. "The country as a whole will not be the poorer for the borrowing."

It might be necessary for some to do with less in the way of luxuries and with less of what some believe are necessities, the minister said, but he was sure Canadians were prepared to make this sacrifice.

"Whatever it may be, it is a small thing compared with that being made by the young men from Canada, from the Motherland and from other parts of the Empire who are risking their lives in our defence. They are writing an epic of human heroism which will live forever.

"And what are our sacrifices compared with those of the ordinary people of Britain? The dramatic statement has been made that the lights of Europe have gone out. This may be true of those countries dominated by the Nazi terror, but of Britain it is not true. The lights of heroic endeavor burn there more brightly than ever before.

"The true qualities of the British people are being revealed—dauntlessness, tenacity, capacity for sacrifice. In these qualities the British are setting an example to the world. But they are doing more. Two months ago there were many persons on this continent who were prepared to write Britain off the map. They would not do so today.

"The incomparable British resistance has dispelled the fears of her anxious friends. The world now marvels at a Britain which is not only repelling a furious attack, but is also laying her plans for a future and successful offensive in 1941, or if need be in 1942.

LITTLE DAMAGE BY BOMBS IN INDUSTRIAL AREA

A.P. Correspondent Makes Independent Survey of Birmingham and District

MANY HOUSES HIT

By TAYLOR HENRY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Birmingham, England, Sept. 4 (AP)—Despite heavy attacks by Nazi bombers, the Midlands—Britain's industrial heart and centre of her war production—appears to have suffered only slight damage.

I have just completed a survey of Birmingham and its surrounding industrial area. I would say, as a rough estimate, the output for the whole area has been reduced no more than five per cent.

I saw only two factories so badly damaged that production ceased—and these were small plants.

PREMIER PETITIONS GOV'T

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP)—Ontario farmers are facing the problem of having to either liquidate large quantities of livestock due to crop shortage or import grain from the West, Premier Mitchell Hepburn declared today. To combat this situation, the Premier petitioned Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, urging the Federal Government to act in the matter and place some of the 500,000,000 bushel western grain crop, particularly second grades, at the disposal of Ontario farmers.

THIRD DIVISION WILL BE LOCATED AT TRACADIE N. B.

Division Will be Up to Strength and Fully Equipped When it Leaves for New Camp October 15th

STAY ALL WINTER

Ottawa, Sept. 4 (CP)—Canada's Atlantic army command, under Maj.-Gen. W. H. P. Elkins, will be augmented by concentration of the entire 3rd Division in the Maritime Provinces, according to plans now being rushed to completion at Defence Headquarters.

Defence Minister Ralston has announced the intention to have the Division, fully equipped and up to strength, enter a training camp in the Maritimes by Oct. 15.

Whether it will be possible to keep the Division together in one camp has not been revealed since the Department has not disclosed the camp site.

It is known, however, that an artillery range has been acquired at Tracadie, in Northern New Brunswick, and it is assumed that the Division will be distributed among several camps in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, with some possibly going to Prince Edward Island.

Will Help in Defence

Addition of a fully equipped Division to the troops already under command of Maj.-Gen. Elkins will be an important factor in the defence preparations on the East coast, including the Maritime Provinces, Newfoundland and Labra-

MINING INDUSTRY ASKED TO HELP SECOND WAR LOAN

Finance Minister Requests Industry to Expand Even Its Present Production

SPEAKS AT TIMMINS

Hon. J. L. Ilsley Says Dominion Must Have Support of Workers as Well as Financial Interests

Timmins, Ont., Sept. 4 —(CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley today called on the gold mining industry to expand even its present record production levels to provide Canada with the means for purchasing war materials in the United States.

At the same time, he urged the country as a whole to demonstrate how successful voluntary action in a democracy could be, through its support of Canada's second war loan being launched today.

"The enemy is sparing no effort to maintain its fighting forces at the maximum," he reminded a Canadian club luncheon. "They are not asked to co-operate. They are compelled to obey.

"We believe that the democratic spirit, on which our whole society is based, will enable us to match their effort without the rigid compulsion upon which they rely."

There had been plenty of illustrations in recent months of what happened to countries whose efforts were half-hearted, he said.

Mr. Ilsley explained there were two reasons why he felt the Minister of Finance should launch a National War Loan Campaign from Timmins, first, to emphasize the importance of the producing industries to the financial and economic strength of Canada, and, secondly, to give special recognition to the importance of the mining industry.

A Tower of Strength

The support of the great financial centres was not enough. The government had to have the support of working men and women throughout Canada, the support of businessmen in production and trade. "Here in the north country

Dutch Troops Mistaken for Enemy by Officer

London, Sept. 4 —(CP)— Units of the Royal Dutch Army entered a town "somewhere in England" recently. In their grey-blue uniforms designed on the German model they patrolled bridgeheads with fixed bayonets and took up position for manoeuvres. Exchange of Destroyers for Bases Best News Since Dunkirk-Herald

CALLED "GREAT NEWS"

London, Sept. 4 (CP Cable)—The biggest news in London this morning, spread across the front pages of all the newspapers, was the announcement that 50 United States destroyers are to become part of the Royal navy in exchange for naval bases in British territory in the western hemisphere.

"The best news for Britain since the deliverance of our army at Dunkerque," said the Daily Herald.

Wilson Broadbent, diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Mail, said that a "trans-Atlantic telephone talk between Mr. Winston Churchill from his study in No. 10 Downing Street and President Roosevelt at the White House in Washington clinched the agreement."

He added that the final arrangements for the leasing of British territory to the United States were "agreed upon when President Roosevelt met Mr. Mackenzie King on the Canadian border a month us accession of 50 destroyers will be ago."

The Herald pointed out under an editorial headed "triumph" that "to

British Fighters Destroy Two Nazi Planes in Surprise Move

London, Sept. 4 (CP)—British fighters and anti-aircraft guns quickly repelled two enemy thrusts today as it was disclosed that Royal Air Force bombers launched a four-hour series of couter-attacks Tuesday night against advanced German striking bases in France.

Attempted attacks on Kent and Essex airports by two German Forces, one of them consisting of 40 bombers and escort fighters, were turned back in the morning without reported damage or casualties, the Air Ministry said.

A 29-minute air raid warning in the London area during these fights was succeeded in the afternoon by a 24-minute alarm at the peak of the luncheon hour when many restaurants were crowded.

A third force was turned back in an attempted attack toward London. Five German planes were brought down in this brief battle over a southeast town, two in the sea and three farther inland. But no bombs were dropped.

In one of the earlier fights another German fighter plane was seen falling from the sky, and its parachuting pilot was captured.

Twenty planes, flying in formation at 20,000 feet, ran into a barrage from anti-aircraft guns and then into the machine-gun fire of fighter planes.

Nazi Raiders Flee

"The Germans turned and fled," an eye-witness said. "One fighter got in a burst of machine-gun fire and I saw the German falling."

The British counter-attack, which the Air Ministry said lasted from 9 p.m. Tuesday until 1 a.m. today, was aimed at Germany's busy bases at Pas de Calais, across the Strait from Dover, Le Touquet, St. Omer and others.

"High explosives were dropped on the landing ground, later aircraft maintained the attack and a pilot of one saw six separate fires on the airdrome," the Air Ministry said of the attack at Le Touquet. "Another squadron bombed the St. Omer airdrome and scored hits on the landing ground, which were followed by explosions."

Thae airdromes at Marck, near Calais, Guines, southeast of Calais, and Abbeville, farther west along the coast, also were bombed, the Air Ministry said.

Fight At 3-Mile Height

The morning's first air battle over England was fought at a three mile height.

Forty bombers and their escort of fighters were beaten back in this first attack, which set off a morn-

Imminent Fast - Breaking Developments in Far East Situation Expected

INDO-CHINA 'HOT SPOT'

Shanghai, Sept. 4 (AP)—Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet, arrived here unexpectedly today amid reports of imminent fast-breaking developments in the Far Eastern situation.

Attention of foreign military observers was concentrated on French Indo-China, where censorship obscured the situation following reports the Japanese army had demanded immediate submission to demands for the right to move Japanese troops through the colony and to use the port of Haip-ong as a military base in the war against China.

Prince Frederick Not Likely Interned In the Dominion

Ottawa, Sept. 4 (CP)—If Prince Frederick of Prussia, grandson of former Kaiser Wilhelm II, is held in an internment camp in Canada, as reported by the New York Daily News, internment headquarters here has "no official knowledge" of it.

A high official declined to make a flat denial of the report but stated definitely that there was no official knowledge of the German Prince being included among the 6,700 prisoners and internees brought from Britain.

When such a number were being handled, there was a "possibility" the German Prince might have passed unnoticed if entered on the rolls under an ordinary name, the official added.

COUPLE MARRIED A SECOND TIME

Private in Second Division Marries His Former Wife, Who Had Received Divorce in May of This Year

Somewhere in England, Sept. 4—(CP)—Thirteen years ago Pte. W. W. Peattie, of Brantford, Ont., sailed from a Scottish port with his bonnie bride of a few weeks to settle down in Canada. His wife, Marion, who never before had travelled more than a few miles from her native heath found it difficult to adjust herself to her new surroundings. Peattie, meanwhile had landed a good job in Canada, something he had not been able to find in Scotland.

After talking over their problem Marion decided to return home while Peattie remained. Years passed...divorce proceedings were instituted but not until May 29 of this year did the decree become absolute.

When the 2nd Canadian Division arrived in England early in August Peattie was one of the happy group to step ashore. Five-day disembarkation leave came along and Peattie hastened off for Scotland. The first person he looked up was Marion.

That same afternoon they were married for the second time in the Edinburgh registry office. Sitting in the back of the room listening with smiling approval to the ceremony was their 12-year-old daughter, Jean.

The family intends returning to Canada after the war.

BRITISH LINER ATTACKED

Fired on twice by the submarine's deck guns, the Avoceta returned a volley of shell-fire which shattered the underseas raider's periscope. The submarine then submerged.

MELON CROP ONLY HALF OF YEAR AGO

The melon crop this season is only about one-half that of normal years reported farmers attending Tuesday's market. Muskmelons particularly are a poor crop it is said, with melons only being one-half the usual size. This is due to the cold and backward weather which prevailed at the time the melons were planted it is claimed. Watermelons, however, are almost an average crop although the entire crop is almost two weeks later than that of other years.

PENNY BANK DEPOSITS SHOW DECREASE IN MAY AND JUNE

Public schools penny savings deposits showed a decrease of $1,498.37 for the months of May and June over the corresponding period of a year ago, according to statistics released today by J. R. Littleproud, Ontario Penny Bank Inspector. Total deposits on hand at the end of June were $7,368.49 as against $9,-852.86 of June, 1939.

The decrease is due, in part, to the fact that school children are buying war savings stamps and bonds with their savings, it was pointed out.

Respective averages of deposits in the various schools are: King George, 34 percent; Number 4 Sidney, 40; Queen Mary, 28; Queen Alexandra, 26; and Queen Victoria, 30.

INDOOR ATHLETIC MEET AT "Y" HELD

The "Summer Fun Club" activities at the local "Y" were wound up last week with the staging of an indoor athletic meet in which both Juniors and Prep boys took part. The meet was run on the point system for the entire series of events rather than on the winning of individual events. High jumps, broad jumps, and races of 60 yards, 100 yards, and 200 yards comprised the program in which six juniors and 15 preps took part.

In the Juniors' events in which boys of 12 years and over took part, Don Moore won the high and broad jumps while Vincent Massey won the three running events with Massey also winning the all round championship. In the Preps series Merle Massey won the high jump and the three runs while Gerald McKinnon won the broad jump. Massey took the all-round championship, Jack Campbell placed second and Gerald McKinnon third.

"Y" IS UNDERGOING COMPLETE RENOVATION

Preparing for a full program of fall and winter indoor recreational and sporting activities, the gymnasium, swimming tank and other facilities at the local "Y" are undergoing a complete renovation and general clean-up before the busy season gets under way. For the next two weeks the gynasium will be closed while renovation work is under way, while a change in the building's heating system is also contemplated.

While the gymnasium is closed, the boys of the Prep and Junior classes will enjoy a supplementary program of hikes, wiener roasts, etc. Also plans are underway for the organization of a club for young men and high school boys from ages 16-30. The club will be definitely interdenominational and will meet regularly for suppers, social evenings and dances. There will be speakers at each meeting and discussion groups will be formed to round out a complete social and instructional program.

County Constable G. P. Wells of Bancroft was called to the scene of the accident and completed his investigation. No charge has been laid yet against the driver of the truck.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Brotherhood Mission Chapel in a southeast town was destroyed by a bomb. Outside the building a placard still proclaimed: "Brother man, don't stay outside and hope for the best. Come inside and get it."

A reason suggested for the frequent bombing of isolated, desolate districts is that ordnance maps show the word "camp" in many of these areas. One theory is that the Nazis are under the impression this refers to present day military camps. Actually it refers to old British fortresses — mainly earth works dating back 2,000 years.

A cinema in a midlands town was bombed the day before the planned screening of "Gone With the Wind".

"Upminster and at 'em," is the slogan for the Upminster (Essex) Spitfire fund.

One of Britain's most famous locomotives—Coronation—named in honor of the Coronation of King George V and Queen Mary twenty-nine years ago, has been withdrawn as obsolete by the L.M.S. Railway. After removal of all re-usable parts it will be broken up to yield more than 50 tons of metal to the war effort.

The mother and wife of Pilot Officer Douglas Clayton Shepley of Sheffield, reported missing after his Spitfire was shot down over the channel, have started a fund to buy a new Spitfire to take its place. Pilot Officer Shepley's brother and sister both lost their lives in war service.

CPL. W. CAMPBELL DIES OVERSEAS

Member of H. & P. E. Regt., First Division, Well Known in Prince Edward

Picton, Sept. 4—Death of a member of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment overseas was learned in a cable received here last week end. The victim was Corporal William Campbell, son of Mrs. Thomas Wilkinson, Picton. The cable stated that death was due to a motor accident and that further particulars were being forwarded. News of the young man's death was received with regret by a host of friends here. He was a popular member of the younger set and active in the work of the young people at the Presbyterian church. He enlisted with the regiment last September and while overseas had been a motorcycle rider. He is survived by his mother, stepfather and a brother, David Campbell, Picton.

Staff Leaves Picton

The staff of Hastings and Prince Edward depot left Tuesday for Kingston where they will in future be quartered. Recruiting has been completed here for the C.A.S.F. and a total of 2,200 men have joined the colors here since September, 1939. Commanding Officer is Major E. T. Naylor. The Armouries here is now deserted for the first time since war broke out.

Quite a crowd bid farewell to the local company of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment as they left by special train for Petawawa camp on Monday. They were joined at Wellington by "D" Company and later on by the other companies of the regiment. The bugle band accompanied them.

To Build New Road

The town engineer is drawing up plans for building a permanent road from Highway 33 to the site of the Picton Gunnery and Bombing School. The council was informed that the province would pay half the cost of construction, estimated at $10,000. The Federal Department pointed out that such a road would benefit the town as a thousand men would be located at the school.

School re-opened in all local schools and the collegiate on Tuesday. Stores were busy as children purchased the necessary books.

British Children Guests

Three British children are war guests in local homes. William Wills, 13, is staying with James Tubbs and his 8-year-old brother Hugh with Mrs. Ray Young. Both come from Glasgow, Scotland and are attending school, William at the collegiate, and Hugh at Mary Street public. The third lad is Tom Brentley from Darlington, England and he is nine.

The group was brought from Toronto last week end by L. B. Calnan. They had been quartered at the distributing depot at Hart House. All three are attractive and intelligent children and found a warm welcome into their new homes. William Wills expressed amazement at the number of cars found here. "Everyone must own a car here," he remarked after a drive through the town. They were well informed concerning Canada.

Hooks 26-Pound Lunge

While fishing in West Lake on Monday, Gwen McMullen of Toronto hooked and landed a lunge weighing 26 pounds. The big fellow put up a great battle and the girl's father, Grant McMullen, was forced to give aid in landing it, a task which took well over an hour.

Twelve carloads of lumber arrived at the local railway siding last week end and will be used in the buildings now being constructed at Picton Gunnery and Bombing School site. Foundations for many of the 42 buildings are going up rapidly and they will be completed this fall. By next week some 700 men will be employed here. Three runways have been completed and are ready for paving. Ground levelling is being proceeded with.

A Sunday night mail service, which the town does not enjoy at present was requested of the Postmaster General of Canada, in a resolution passed by Town Council at a special meeting. It is desired that the Saturday night mail be suspended and that it go out Sunday night instead. It was pointed out that there would be no increase in the cost.

Mrs. Howard Hogle was soloist at Picton United Church on Sunday. Rev. David Wren, former pastor, who is holidaying at Wellington, assisted Rev. J. P. Reycraft with the service.

Mrs. Albert Hare attended the C.N.E. last week.

Mrs. Jessie Cole is holidaying at Huntingdon, Quebec.

Mrs. Edward Sayers has returned from a trip to Calgary and other western points.

Mr. Arthur Orr attended the exhibition over the week end.

Miss Genevieve Smith is expected home from Winnipeg this week and after a visit of several weeks with relatives there.

Miss Belle Shannon returned to Toronto Monday to resume teaching at Holy Name School.

Mrs. William Reeks, formerly Margaret Graver, was tendered a shower of gifts by friends at Elmbrook, where she formerly taught school. The event was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Moore. Many lovely gifts were presented. A social time was spent.

Several factories are now canning tomatoes but they are a poor crop due to lack of rain. Plants are drying up.

Rev. and Mrs. E. A. Pinkerton and children returned Monday to Quebec after a holiday at their cottage on the Bay Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland Herrington returned to Rockton, Ill., Monday after a visit with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Herrington.

James Healey has returned from North Bay and will resume his studies at Regiopolis College, Kingston, for the new term.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cahoon are in Toronto this week attending the C.N.E. and visiting their daughter Miss Margaret Cahoon.

Miss M. McNeill, superintendent of the county hospital, resumed her duties Sept. 1 after two weeks holidays.

CANNERIES START THEIR TOMATO PACK

With the normal canning season anywhere from ten days to two weeks behind, factories of the district started the season's pack this week. Only small quantities have appeared at the various factories thus far at a time when ordinarily the plants are running at capacity.

The Canada Packer's plant on Albion Street started yesterday when the first tomatoes of the season were brought to the factory. The plant will preserve the vegetable and also manufacture tomato juice during the seasonal run.

KING AND QUEEN VISIT NEWSMEN

London, Sept. 4—(CP Cable)—The King and Queen visited headquarters of the Ministry of Information today and talked with a number of newspapermen.

As the King stood with Queen Elizabeth at the threshold of the Press room, the newsmen were collectively introduced to him as "representatives of the free Press of the world."

Their Majesties were received by Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, and toured both the news and censorship divisions and saw a movie produced by the ministry.

NATION'S

Road Ahead Long, Hard.

"The road ahead is long and hard. As to this we in Canada have no illusions, but we have confidence in ultimate victory and we are determined to play our full part in bringing it about. All that is asked from most of us is to help to provide the resources necessary to enable the defenders of civilization to carry on the fight.

"We cannot keep our money and spend it freely on the things that please us. The resources of this nation must be turned from private satisfactions to public service. To ensure our country's victory we must buy our country's bonds.

"Our first war loan was an outstanding success. Let us make this second war loan equally successful. I have no doubt that the response of the Canadian people to this appeal will justify the faith in us to those who fight for us."

Air Marshal Bishop Speaks at Saskatoon

Saskatoon, Sept. 4 (CP)—When the British Commonwealth Air Training Scheme reaches its peak "there will be no hope or survival of the Germans in the air," declared Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., addressing a luncheon meeting of the Canadian Club here today.

"We are sailing ahead; we have not by any means yet reached our peak, but we have confidence that with our national, dogged endurance and good leadership we will reach our goal," Air Marshal Bishop said.

"For us there is only one end to this war and that is final and complete victory."

Air Marshal Bishop was introduced by Lieut. Gov. A. P. McNab of Saskatchewan, father of Squadron Leader Ernest McNab Commander of No. 1 Squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas who has already downed several enemy planes.

Describing the Lieutenant Governor as "father of one of our most distinguished and able pilots and leaders," Air Marshal Bishop said: "There is not one amongst us in Canada whose heart did not thrill with elation when news arrived that Ernie McNab had destroyed his first German aircraft in combat."

His praise for Squadron Leader McNab could be directed to all those "who have gone over and for months have engaged in bitter battle. We need not fear the laurels of the skies where Canada's sons play a part."

Air Marshal Bishop made a plea for support of the second National War Loan which will be offered next week. It was every person's duty to back up those men who are carrying on the battle at the front. "No sacrifice is too great for them, not even life itself," he said.

He warned against the possibility of faltering hope when the battle seems to be going against the British cause.

"Of the dozen wars in which Great Britain and our Empire have engaged it seems to me that in all of them there were moments when everything appeared lost but the facts of history prove we always snatched triumph from the jaws of apparent disaster."

Many London Families Now Passing Nights In Subway Tunnels

London, Sept. 4 (CP)—Following the example set by residents of Madrid during the Spanish Civil War, many London families are now passing the nights in subway tunnels so they can sleep soundly and in comparative safety through air raid alarms.

Thousands now go nightly to the borough tunnel at Southwark which is 70 feet below ground and secure against even a direct hit. Trains no longer use this tunnel.

They troop down its 200 steps long before the sirens sound and select comfortable spots where they can read, talk or play cards for a few hours before settling down to sleep.

Knowledge of Blood Grouping Urged by City Pathologist

Belleville Hospital Official Delivers Interesting Address to Kiwanis Club on "Laboratory Medicine"

CARNIVAL NETS $990

Classifying blood transfusion as one of the most efficacious forms of treatment of hemorrhages Dr. J. B. MacKay, Belleville General Hospital pathologist, urged everyone to become cognizant of their blood grouping in case an emergency arises whereby they may be called upon to become a donor, in an instructive address on "Laboratory Medicine" to the Belleville Kiwanis Club on Tuesday.

"It is important that everyone should know his or her blood grouping," Dr. MacKay said, "because in these days of serious accidents one never knows when his particular blood-group will be needed. A good citizen should know, as various groups are needed at times in a hurry, and may be the cause of saving a life".

Blood groups, four in number, the speaker explained, are the biological earmarks placed on blood cells at birth and which remain unchanged for the duration of life. One group, known as the "universal" can be given to any group including its own without harm, while its opposite, the "Scotchman's Group" as the speaker humorously put it, can receive from any other but only give to its own.

Divided in Five Groups

Laboratory Medicine, Dr. MacKay pointed out, was divided into five groups, Clinical Chemistry and Microscology; Bacteriology and Seriology, Pathology, Radiology and Cardiography. He dwelt in more or less detail on the first three, and brought out many instructive points and examples of the benefit of the pathological laboratory to the medical profession and the human body.

He described a number of tests which identified foreign substances and aided in the detection of kidney disease, sugar diabetes and other ailments. Final diagnosis rests to a large extent in pathological findings, he said.

Baterlology and Seriology, he pointed out was another important work of the pathologist. One of the most common bacteria is the streptococci family, the most important of which is the hemyletic streptococci. Combatting these dangerous germs is a recent scientific discovery, a coal tar dye, which is being used largely in the isolation of the germs. This has also been successfully applied to cases of common pneumonia.

Pathology is also important in the cases of benign or malignant growths, the speaker said, and the pathologist is often called in consultation with the physician. A second important phase of this work is autopsies and post-mortems, which he said, contribute a great deal of good to the community through pathological findings. The origin of pathology came from the findings of old masters who specialized in post-mortems in the olden days. It assists the physician in finding any errors and also the results of successful treatment.

Provincial pathological laboratories, such as those at London, Kingston, Windsor, etc., are financed in a large measure by taxation and patients fees Hospital laboratories operate on fixed fees to patients for work done, while the general method is to charge each patient a flat rate. Cost of maintenance hinges around personnel, technicians etc. while cost of equipment is peculiarly high due to the slim market, and the fact that the majority of instruments last a lifetime.

Iron Guard Blocked in Plot To Seize Power in Rumania

4 GENERALS ARRESTED

Bucharest, Sept. 4 —(AP)— The Rumanian cabinet, headed by the strongly pro-Nazi Ion Gigurtu, fell today as King Carol sought to save his nation from anarchy and the possible loss of more territory to his neighbors.

Gigurtu, in office since June 1, was replaced as premier by Gen. Ion Antonescu, who was expected to pick a military cabinet. Gigurtu resigned within a few hours after the government, with King Carol's own safety menaced by an alleged Iron Guard plot to place Crown Prince Michael on the throne, began rounding up Iron Guardists.

In Bucharest and Constanta, where demonstrators last night made attempts to seize power, the situation, according to a government spokesman, was "under control." However, at Brasov, Iron Guardists who captured the telephone offices were still in possession of the switchboards.

Residents of the capital were awakened today by explosions on the outskirts. Unconfirmed reports spread that an attempt had been made to blow up some petroleum storage depots.

The new premier is one of Rumania's most noted generals, known for his work in the First Great War. At that time he took charge of disarming the disorganized Russian army when it collapsed.

Gen. Antonescu was held for several weeks in a monastry with others on charges of organizing opposition to the government after the Soviet occupation of Bessarabia in July. He was released yesterday.

A great question appeared to be whether the army, whose leaders returned Carol to the throne 10 years ago, would remain faithful to him in the face of growing public opposition to the Transylvania partition accepted by his government.

Bucharest seethed with excitement over the alleged Iron Guard coup Tuesday night, in which shots were fired at windows of the palace in an unsuccessful attempt on Carol's life. Hundreds of members of the Extremist organization were officially reported "under arrest."

Four top-ranking Rumanian generals were among those reported arrested and charged with plotting the abortive coup. Besides shots being fired at palace windows attempts were made to seize the Bucharest radio station and the America-owned Telephone Company's central office.

Simultaneous coups were attempted at Brasov and Constanza but were quickly crushed.

Three men who broke through a guard of soldiers participated in the shooting at the palace. Many shots were fired in the grounds before soldiers overpowered the three and hustled them away in a car. One Iron Guardist and one palace guard were reported wounded in the fray.

Damage Telephone Exchange

Many local lines were put out of order by a group of uniformed men who entered the telephone exchange posing as guards and attacked the switchboards with hatchets. The capital radio station also went off the air after a similar attack there. An official statement said there was minor damage to the apparatus.

The manifesto accused those responsible for the Transylvania cession agreement of treachery and said their action had "filled the army with shame." Observers interpreted the latter statement as a plea for army support of an Iron Guard attempt to seize power.

Troops Said in Open Revolt

Unconfirmed reports said three army corps in Transylvania, refusing to withdraw from the ceded territory, were in open revolt.

Two under-secretaries of state have resigned.

Sima, who resigned recently from King Carol's cabinet, was understood to be in hiding somewhere outside Bucharest.

At Timisoara, in South Transylvania, Italian and German consulates were wrecked and mobs ransacked Hungarian and German stores.

At Saint George, in the ceded area, the Hungarian mayor was killed by an angry crowd when he hung a Hungarian flag from the city hall.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

RESISTANCE COST $125.75

Hawkesbury, Ont., Sept. 4 (CP)— Jacques Giroux of Bourget, yesterday was fined $100 and $25.75 costs, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of resisting an officer when questioned in connection with an automobile accident last Saturday.

Provincial Constable Ernest Soublierre of Rockland, who attempted to question Giroux at his home, suffered a fractured leg when he fell during a scuffle with the accused.

a gain of colossal magnitude." It said the agreement was a "major milestone in the struggle against Nazi aggression" but added that it should be remembered "it is a no more than mutually beneficial arrangement, like the defence talks between Canada and the United States."

The News Chronicle, in an editorial entitled "great news", said that "here is perhaps the greatest single step which yet has been taken . . . Co-operation between the British Empire and America, without involving the active participation of America in the war or sending of a single American soldier to Europe."

It added: "That co-operation will bring victory to a cause in which both countries believe and pave the way for a new order of peace and freedom throughout the world."

The Times said: "This transaction takes its place in the larger strategic plan for mutual assistance in self-defence which is now being worked out between the British Empire and the United States.

The, Daily Express: "This is a mighty and splendid day, a day in which America, watching our fight as the embattled champion of the world, sends us great aid . . . It is fortuitous and inevitable that every move America makes for her self-preservation is a move in our defence too. America protects the rear."

The Daily Telegraph said the deal is a "notification to Hitler of America's confidence in the ultimate victory of Britain."

first received Congressional approval.

The opposing views of members of the United States Congress were shown in the statements of Senator Alben Barkley and Hamilton Fish, New York Republican representative and one of the group of American isolationists whose vocal misgivings were lost beneath the chorus of approval.

"One of the greatest accomplishments in behalf of national and hemispheric defence that has ever been consummated," Senator Barkley said.

Fish denounced it as "virtually an act of war." He was supported by such well-known non-interventionists as Senator Gerald Nye and D. Worth Clark.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada said only, "the facts eloquently speak for themselves of Anglo-American friendship." But there was evident jubilation in Ottawa.

The Trinided Guardian spoke of the exchange as a "triumph of common sense." Trinidad is one of the islands made available for United States bases.

The news was received with cheer at the Washington legations of empire countries although all, diplocatically, declined to comment. Diplomatic representatives of the South American countries at Washington were enthusiastic and Ambassador Jorge Boyd of Panama expressed the general opinion when he said "It is a great triumph for President Roosevelt's preparedness policies."

A FAIR DEAL

No announcement of recent years has been greeted with more approval by Canadian and Britishers than that which was made yesterday in which it was made public from Washington that in return for defence bases on British possessions in the western hemisphere the United States would hand over to Britain fifty over-age destroyers.

The acquisition of these new bases will place our neighbor to the south in a much stronger defence position which should prevent any enemy gaining a foothold on a lengthy unguarded coast line or islands of great strategic importance in the Atlantic. As President Roosevelt stated the new bases will "keep the enemy away from the United States' front door and they have to get through there before they can reach the mainland." He also stated that in his opinion it was the most important thing for United States' defence since the Louisiana purchase in 1803.

Naval and civil spokesmen emphasized three purposes would be served by the agreement.

(1) The destroyers are a "timely reinforcement" for the Royal Navy in maintaining Control of the Atlantic.

(2) The 99-year lease of bases is a contribution to the security of the United States.

(3) It means a material strengthening of the defences in the western hemisphere.

It is no secret that Britain needs destroyers for she has lost a considerable number of these vital ships through war action. She, also, needs a large number of destroyers to act on patrol duty as well as to protect large capital ships of the navy in various parts of the world.

It must be remembered, too, that the bases are leased for 99 years and no change is involved in sovereignty and those who own property needed for the bases will be amply compensated by the United States government.

More and more in the United States it is being recognized that the continued strength of the British Navy is a guarantee of security for the nation and were it to be weakened to such an extent that Britain no longer controlled the seas then the United States would be in a particularly vulnerable position for attack by aggressors. Her own defences will not be at their peak for at least two to three years. By strengthening Britain she aids herself and brings the time for victory nearer. When that is achieved it is only natural that the country will curtail the tremendous sums she now finds it necessary to spend on armaments.

The assurance by Winston Churchill that "Never would the British fleet be surrendered or sunk" must have had its share in the decision of the Washington government to make the pact. In case Britain were overwhelmed by Germany they would want to know what would happen to the fleet including the destroyers that had been turned over to Britain. When that assurance was given the path was left open to find a means to consummate the deal.

The menace of Nazi aggression has brought the great Democracies together in a way that probably could never be brought about by any other means. This fact alone will be bitter knowledge to the dictators for they must realize that as time goes on their cause is bound to become weaker while that of Britain, with the help of the United States, is bound to increase immeasurably.

TRUTH WILL "OUT"

The tourist business in the city over the Labor Day holiday was the best that has taken place in recent years. Restaurant keepers state that their places of business were crowded most of the time with Americans seeking relaxation and pleasure in this fair land. Confirmation of this was shown in the extra large number of cars to be seen on highways and streets of the district and city.

The setback to the tourist influx was due to the stories circulated in the States by the enemies of Canada as to the dangers and difficulty that would be experienced in a visit over here. Some of the stories went so far as to say that male visitors to Canada would be drafted into the army or that if they did come over they would not be able to get back because of the immigration laws.

It takes a long time for truth to catch up with lies and rumors but the friendly attitude of the United States press and radio has done a tremendous service to Canada in giving publicity to the real state of affairs. The Dominion, also, instituted an extensive advertising campaign to counteract the propaganda and this along with the reassuring news carried back home by those who did venture over is beginning to be seen in the increased business over the last holiday.

THE AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Present conditions and future prospects of the automotive industry, and the important part it has played in the past, and is playing in the prosecution of the war, was forcibly brought out in a recent address by R. C. Berkinshaw, president of the Toronto Board of Trade and General Manager and secretary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada, Ltd., given on Automotive Day at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Mr. Berkinshaw said in part:—

As the years go by, the automotive industry, as an essential contributor to human need in every field of human endeavour, more and more demonstrates its adaptability and its responsibility. It is idle to moralize on the dependency of the civilized state upon the automobile, the truck, bus or tractor, since every succeeding year emphasizes that dependency—even in this era of air transportation. In Canada, the industry represents an integral part and a substantial part of our national economy, not merely from the point of view of productional potential, but from the broader standpoint of capital investment and employment capacity. In a country whose population is a bare eleven millions, any industry which itself distributes over $20,000,000 yearly to nearly 15,000 employees is an important cog in the wheel of national progress. To the number of employees so engaged in the actual production of automobiles, one can add over 16,000 engaged in the production of parts and materials as well as 21,000 more who are employed in the processes of distribution and service.

The total value of automobiles and trucks produced in Canada last year was close to one hundred million dollars. One contributing industry alone—the rubber industry—in the same year produced tires and tubes and solid tires to a selling value of close to $30,000,000 whilst its total value of all production approximated $65,000,000.

Last year the consumption of gasoline in Canada was no less than 807,666,000 imperial gallons of which 85% was consumed by motor vehicles. On this consumption, provincial governments collected $52,000,000 in taxes—a sizable contribution to the cost of government in the provinces of the Dominion. In the three industries alone, automotive proper, rubber and petroleum products, the total paid out in salaries and wages amounted almost to the same gigantic figure. This does not include the earnings of those who are engaged in the distribution and servicing of the products of the three industries.

Only four weeks ago, the Minister of Munitions in Canada stated in the House of Commons that the Dominion is probably producing a greater volume of automotive war equipment than any country in the world—600 mechanized units per week—and he prophesied that within another month or two, this figure would be substantially increased. In addition to the tremendous volume of Canadian Government orders now placed for mechanical transport equipment, Great Britain, South Africa, India and other parts of the British Empire are also placing large orders with Canadian manufacturers. The types of equipment being manufactured in Canada include many types of service trucks, gun-towing vehicles, ambulances, station wagons and service motor cars. The production of universal carriers is well advanced and deliveries will begin before the end of the year.

The Minister took proper pride, when he said that Canadian motor transport equipment is acknowledged to be the best that has been produced anywhere during the present war.

All this is but the beginning, for the industry will cheerfully and willingly face any call that may be made upon it—whether it be for 1,000, 2,000 or even more units per week—in furtherance of the effort which the Empire is making to defend the Motherland from invasion and the world from the heel of an autocracy which seeks to destroy the liberties of all free peoples.

The automotive industry's experience in and capacity for planned research and organized experimentation, has been a potent factor in the acceleration of effort and adaptation of production to war purposes which has been achieved by the industry during the past few months."

Under the Swastika

For centuries the free peoples of Europe lived and breathed by their contact with the outer world. Today some 75,000,000 non-Germans, under German rule, are cut off by impenetrable barriers, prevented from communicating with their neighbor-peoples, forbidden to read or hear the truth, shielded from outer eyes that seek to penetrate the darkness of their prison. A curtain of secrecy, as black as the swastika itself, now lies across the once-free countries that have come to be a German Lebensraum. Neutral correspondents have not been admitted to shattered Warsaw for almost a year; what we read from Oslo and Prague, Copenhagen and Amsterdam, is filtered through the propaganda network in Berlin. Europe is, in truth, a Dark Continent, as isolated in many ways as the Africa of Livingstone.

Occasionally, however, some phrase, some sentence buried in a news dispatch, lets a chink of light through the darkness. Such was the case with a Stockholm message the other day describing German efforts to depose King Haakon from the Norwegian throne. The Norwegians, it appears, have not been cowed by almost five months of German occupation. They have not been intimidated by the tramp of 300,000 German soldiers' boots, by the removel of vast stocks of food and supplies to Germany, by the prospect of immense sufferings in the coming Winter. They "stoutly oppose" the dethronement, we read; "never before have monarchist badges been so profusely and ostentatiously worn by the Norwegians." One little glimpse like this is enough to prove that Norway is not accepting the Nazi "new order." The Norwegians still keep the spark of freedom alive.

Holland has been just as indigestible to the Germans. Every dispatch that comes from Amsterdam, even through the Berlin censorship, shows the survival of a stubborn independence among the Dutch people, a sullen hostility toward their German "conquerors. One German correspondent complained after traveling through Holland that the Dutch are "in no way thankful" for the blessings of invasion; the people, he wrote, "generally refuse all that is German." When a nurse at The Hague is sentenced to three years in prison for chalking an "insult" to Hitler on a tree, when a Dutch hotelkeeper is sentenced to six months just for listening to a London broadcast, we can judge for ourselves the iron rigor of German rule, and we can guess the extent of the defiance among the Dutch people which makes such rigor necessary.

Fewer signs of open defiance have come from Belgium, which was first stunned by its own defeat and then utterly disillusioned by the collapse of France. We know, however, that the King is a prisoner, that he will have no truck with the Fascist leaders who seek to use him for their purposes, that the country faces a desperate food shortage and an immense task of reconstruction for the second time in twenty-five years. We know, too, that economic and spiritual misery has gripped the occupied half of France, now cut off from all communication with the unoccupied part of the country.

In Czecho-Slovakia, the extent of passive resistance can be estimated only by those who know the present output of the Skoda works and other great factories under German control; but the existence of open resistance is proved again and again by reports of prison sentences for "treason" against the Reich. In Poland the Germans have just brought a year of unparalleled harshness to a close by incorporating the Polish "province" into the Reich. Even the fictions of a "protectorate," a "government-general" which left a faint semblance of independence to Poland, have had to be scrapped. Could there be a better proof that the Germans are having their troubles in conquered Poland, that the Poles have not abandoned their struggle to be free?

We shall be told, no doubt, that Poland and other enslaved nations of Europe have returned to "normal," but we shall not be deceived. Men who have tasted liberty will dream of it, and work for it, no matter how savage the penalties may be. They will never be content with a "new order" that brings them only a living death. From one end of occupied Europe to the other, brave men are working already, in various ways but with a single purpose: to break their chains, to win freedom again. — N. Y. Times.

Salute to The Poles

It is high time to say a word in vindication and praise of Poland as the anniversary of her martyrdom draws near. It is time to correct the impression, so widespread in many countries last September, that the Poles were half-hearted in defending their native land. The conquest of France has now provided a yardstick by which to measure the strength of Poland's resistance. A comparison with the French, and with all others who have felt the fury of the German war machine, should restore the reputation of the Poles as fighting men.

The Poles were the first to experience the new German technique of co-ordinated war. They saw their airdromes and frontier blockhouses destroyed on the very first night of hostilities. Their initial strategy was faulty, their lack of mechanized equipment a fatal handicap, but they fought like heroes. We now know that the eighteen-day conquest of Poland took far longer than the German General Staff had expected. We know that in the great enveloping Battle of Kutno many Polish divisions covered themselves with glory and thousands of troops managed to break through the German iron ring to defend the streets and buildings of Warsaw. Before the final surrender Warsaw resisted with a fury that no other besieged capital has matched in this war or the last.

Such a stand would be enough for almost any fighting people, but it was not enough for the Poles. While Poland itself has been held captive, while her people endure a process of cold-blooded extermination, thousands of Poles have continued the struggle—in Norway, in France and now in Britain. Some of them are battling with German raiders every day in British skies; some are serving with the British Navy; some are ready to fight on land for the defense of Britain. For sheer fighting spirit the Poles deserve a place alongside the Finns, who showed last Winter what courage can do. The Poles have known how to fight and die for their country. The surviving free peoples of the world should salute them today.—N.Y. Times.

A FREE FRENCH COLONY

Although fewer than 5,000 Europeans live in the vast forest and desert region known as French Equatorial Africa, the "rebellion" of this distant colony against the Vichy Government may be of great value to the British in their struggle against the Axis Powers. Lake Chad, the strategic center of the colony, is one of the most important junction points in all Africa. Last year the British heard of German plans to seize Lake Chad by a lightning attack of air forces, with transport planes, operating from Italian Libya. One of the last pre-war achievements of Georges Mandel as French Minister of Colonies was to checkmate such an attempt by completing a military road to Lake Chad from Ouargla, in Northern Algeria. But with France a prisoner of the Axis, the road to Lake Chad might become more of a menace than a protection. If German and Italian troops and supply trains could use this road, they could reach the borders of Nigeria, the richest of all of Britain's African possessions.

There is every prospect now, however, that the French authorities in Equatorial Africa will continue the fight alongside the British. The Axis is thus not only deprived of a strategic springboard in the heart of Africa, but deprived too of an easy route to Equatorial Africa's resources of wild rubber, cotton and minerals. Most valuable of all to the British, the action of a few courageous French commanders has kept the free Tricolor waving in at least one corner of the world. The sight of that flag, unstained by any obedience to German orders, may well rally other French colonial authorities to continue the war.—N. Y. Times.

SYMBOLS OF PAGEANTRY AND POWER

By J. R. F. TAYLOR
in P.L.A.
(Port of London Authority)
Monthly

It was with lively anticipation that I set out recently to make a bid and add to my collection of mercantile marine cap badges. Luckily I was successful. Indeed, my meagre gleanings of well over two decades, were simply submerged by the acquisition of a shimmering pile of exquisitely beautiful specimens of the embroiderers art. There is quite a romance in these delightful badges, for they embody in condensed form the very pageantry of the sea. Mostly the badges have one universal feature—a pair of ornate laurel branches in gold wire between which are emblazoned the house flag of the specific shipping line. It is of course these flags that interest one, for they are an education in themselves. Officers and men alike have lived and died with unquestioned loyalty to and pride in their ships; their company's badge is every bit as important to them as are the badges and colours of army regiments to the troops.

It cannot be said for certain when our mercantile marine first introduced the use of cap badges, now universally used, but some in the collection were in use sixty years ago. The most prized badge is from a windjammer that proudly flaunted the red duster during the closing years of the last century. The magic of the gold gilt badge emerges frequently in our literature of the sea. Not indeed solely in fiction on the films do we encounter the inevitable scene aboard a deep-water sailorman, the crew foregathered to curse all and sundry and maybe the ship herself. For weeks at a time out of sight of land, the men have brooded on a grievance, real or fancied, and in their tattered slops with their unkempt appearance they look a truly formidable set of malcontents. Suddenly another appears, no better or worse attired than they, and vociferous conversation is instantly hushed for this newcomer bears the symbol of authority, a hat bearing the badge of the Line. The "Bucko" mate of the sailing ship really did exist and only the totem worship of the badge based on loyalty to the owners saved him from oft deserved fate.

It is interesting to recall that it was not until 1919 that the Admiralty decided that ships of the Royal Navy should have a personal badge. In the case of many ships, badges had been in use quite seventy years but were not recognized officially. For seventeen years Charles Ffoulkes, C. B., O. B. E., F. S. A., was Advisor to the Admiralty on Heraldry and thereafter the duties devolved on the College of Heralds. The well designed badges are worn on the quarter deck and on the port and starboard of the ships' boats. Battleships and battle cruisers have circular badges, destroyers a shield shape; pentagon for cruisers and square set diamond wise for submarines. The official recognition of ship badges for the Senior Service serves to show how captivating these tokens are and helps to explain the keen interest of the Merchant Navy in its hat badges.

To appreciate the full beauty of the badges it is really necessary to see them, but some idea can be formed from a description of the materials used. Besides the standard gold wire used for the laurels, materials of every hue are employed to build up the various flags. Mostly a stout petersham is used for the background and the design embroidered thereon in pure silk. Some badges have central motifs of cast brass richly gilded, others are picked out in silver wire. Wool and velvet are occasionally used.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, September 5

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

WHILE things may be expected to hold their own on this day, judging by certain rather negative or adverse configurations, it will take some sagacity, discretion and good judgment. The especial menace seems to arise from some rather drastic action coming from a group source. This sinister force may operate with cunning, in deep-laid and obscure plots or schemes. It is possible that in a difficult and baffling situation the proverbial "woman's intuition" may be found illuminating, or an elder might assist.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a fairly successful and progressive year by the exercise of steadiness, application, sound acumen and good judgment, especially in difficult and threatening predicaments possibly traceable to deep-laid and sinister plots of certain combinations or group interests. Beware "rackets" and shun drastic measures for tact and finesse, compromise should wise counsel recommend.

A child born on this day may be moderately equipped for coping with negative conditions arising in its life, being tactful, courteous, steady, thoughtful and having keen insight.

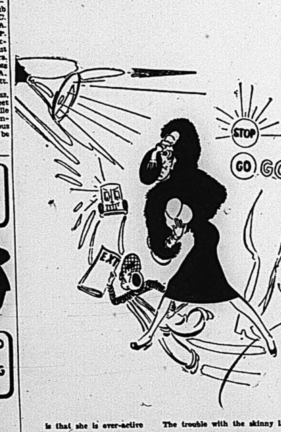
Thin?—Pile In The Groceries



is that she is over-active

The trouble with the skinny lassie

By HELEN FOLLETT

Lightweights aren't as pleased with themselves as they were in the yore days when the boyish shape was the envy of every woman who weighed over 130. Fashion calls for rounded figure—rounded, but slender—and if you haven't got it you'll have trouble finding becoming dry goods.

Sleep Brings Curves

If you are as thin as a rail, don't stoke up on groceries until you feel as if you were stuffed. Your digestive motors won't be able to burn up an excess of fuel. The diet must include all food elements necessary for well being, even those that do not build adipose tissue. The trouble with the skinny lassie is that she is over-active, doesn't get enough sleep, uses up all her calories so there's nothing to stow away in the form of pretty curves where curves should be.

A Quart a Day

Rich milk is Miss Slimpsie's best bet; she should drink a quart a day. Eggs are recommended, also cereals well garnished with sugar and cream. Green salads must be included to supply mineral salts and vitamins, even though they won't add an ounce to weight.

x x x

Bare legged girls had better take a look-glimpse at their knees, which get pretty sick looking after exposure to the elements in the good old summer time. Knees are not beauty bargains anyway. Skin is coarse on the leg hinges, often gets grey looking and, unless they are scrubbed daily with soap and hot water, lines and creases appear dark and unsightly.

Treatment for Knees

We suggest a knee treatment; after the scrubbing rinsing and drying, apply cocoanut oil. Friction it in with the palms of the hands. Dip a heavy washcloth in hot water, give the flesh a steaming. Apply borated talcum and pat lightly.

SALEM W. M. S.

The ladies of Salem W. M. S. gathered at the church for their August meeting with the president, Mrs. L. McLaren in charge. Mrs. J. Cole read the Scripture lesson. Some items of business were attended to and a letter of thanks for plant sent during illness, was read from Miss Ruth McLaren. Mrs. Clarence Hagerman, group leader, then opened her program with singing of a hymn. A reading was given by Miss Bernice Robinson "Miss Owa of Japan." A song, much enjoyed by all, by three little girls, Bernice Hagerman, Aileen and Lois Reid, followed with readings by Mrs. Cole "The Patchwork Quilt", and Mrs. C. Hagerman, "Little Things and True". Hymn 248 and prayer by Mrs. McLaren brought the meeting to a close.

Why Arithmetic Stumps Many Children

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Many children, even in the upper grades, with trouble in arithmetic, have most of this trouble because they still count when they add or subtract, because they had never learned by heart the simple addition facts and the simple subtraction facts in the same way they learned their multiplication tables.

Let me remind you that very few children have any trouble with the multiplication facts. Why? Because they never learned these facts by counting, they learned them by heart. There are 96 of these multiplication facts usually memorized. Yet the average child is drilled ten or twenty times as much on the simple addition and subtraction facts as on the multiplication facts. Even then he does not master them.

Is it any harder to learn by heart that 7 and 9 are 16 than that 8 times 6 are 48? Certainly not, if learned in the same good way.

Counting and Guessing

I've been urging parents and teachers to induce the child who has been counting when he tries to find the sum of 7 and 9, or has been guessing the answer, to memorize carefully and slowly this whole fact, as 7 and 9 are 16 just as he memorizes 8 times 6 are 48.

Also I am trying to prevail upon teachers, often vainly not to teach a child, for example, to count objects or count in any other way, in order to learn that 7 and 9 are 16, and never to hurry him and make him guess the sum.

When our eldest son was about five, he would often work for half an hour at a stretch at counting out and writing the sums of the simple addition combinations. It was a favorite amusement of his during the sermon at church. I kept pages and pages of such sums that he added correctly.

His mother and I were sure, then, that we had a child precocious in arithmetic. We enjoyed considerable secret satisfaction over what we supposed was a clever way at educating him early and happily in arithmetic.

Faulty Speed Drills

When this same lad was in the third grade, he added these same simple combinations a bit faster but with more errors than he did at the age of five. Like many other children, he had learned at school to make mistakes faster and to be more ready to guess, thanks to the speed drills. But he still counted just as he did at five, and was worse in addition. As I look back I wonder why we were so stupid as to let him add by counting. He finally learned the basal addition and subtraction facts, but with all the bad habits in his way that he had learned, it took him more time and effort than if he had never added at all before.

If your child must add before school, don't have him count. Let him learn a few of the number facts by heart that he will need all his life. But you had better not bother him with arithmetic now.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My girl two years old cries bitterly when I leave her with the Sunday school teacher. Should I stay in the room with her?

A. No; if the teacher is willing. But for the peace of the Sunday school class, you probably should stay until you have weaned the child further from you emotionally at home. Or, you might keep her home until this is accomplished. Go away from her more at home leaving her with another person. Attract other children to your home to play with her, especially, if possible, some of the children about her age of the Sunday school. The busy teacher also might be prevailed upon to take a meal with the family so your little child can grow better acquainted with her.

Q. Should the toddler not be trained to stay in one room while the mother goes about the house to do her work?

A. He likes to follow her about the house and gets his best education when he does, provided he has learned clearly what he may or may not do, and his mother never wearies talking to him, explaining to him and answering his questions.

BABY'S TEETHING FEVER"

SO writes Mrs. B———, of North Sydney. Then a Toronto mother says: "I used Baby's Own Tablets and the babies were always so good. No cramps, pain or trouble when teething. In fact, I hardly knew they were cutting their teeth as they never were any trouble at night."

Baby's Own Tablets are quick, safe and effective, sweet-tasting and easy to take. Contain no opiates or stupefying drugs. Try Baby's Own Tablets not only for teething troubles but also for colds, constipation, upset stomach and other simple ailments of babyhood. 25 cents. Your money refunded if you are not satisfied.

SAUCE FRENCH TENDERLOINS WHILE FRYING

WHEN pork tenderloins are just about done, add half a teaspoonful of H. P. Sauce to the gravy in the frying pan. Stir it well; then dip up the gravy and pour it over the pieces of tenderloin two or three times as they finish cooking. This seasoning with sauce, while frying, brings out the full flavour of tenderloins—makes them extra delicious. All meats are more tasty—more appetizing—when H. P. Sauce is added, either while cooking or at the table.

H. P. is quite different from ketchups. It is far richer in flavour—goes farther. Try it yourself for your next meal. You can get grand results by using H. P. Sauce for flavouring stews, gravies, soups, salads, cheese and macaroni dishes, fish of all kinds and many other things.

LITTLE DAMAGE

While others have been hit during the last three weeks of intensive night raids, the damage appears to have been comparatively small and production has continued almost uninterrupted.

My estimate is based on observation of the damage done by bombs to essential parts of works and on talks with workmen.

In fact, the survey was made not only without official guidance but without official knowledge, except that I reported to local police as a registered alien, as a matter of course.

Hires Car and Driver

I just hired a car and a local driver, who took me wherever I wanted to go.

When I saw a plant which had been bombed, I stopped, checked the damage and talked with the workmen, many of whom have worked right through the raids.

Afterwards, I asked the driver if he knew of any damage.

"Sure," he answered, "my own home and others."

Then he took me to other places about which I hadn't thought. Now I have his word for it that up until 5.30 p.m. yesterday, a few hours more than a year since the war began, there isn't a single bombed factory and not more than 20 damaged houses in the Birmingham area which I haven't seen.

Because of military secrecy it is impossible to name individual factories. But for example, let's take one factory which was bombed three weeks ago.

An underforeman said two bombs "landed square on us" and I could see they had. There was a gaping hole in the roof of one shed and all the windows of another were blown out.

But the plant was working at full speed.

"The first week after we got ours, production dropped a little under normal," the underforeman said. "But the next week we were 33 1-3 per cent above normal, and we are sticking there."

On the other hand, there has been considerable damage in residential areas, particularly in the slums and workers' houses around some of the factories.

Few Killed

Only a few of Birmingham's 1,000,000 inhabitants have been killed by bombs during these three weeks. A few hundred were left homeless after the first heavy bombing, during which several rows of houses were demolished.

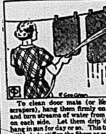
People began leaving town then, but nearly all of them are back. However, some still pile mattresses in their cars and sleep in the open country, returning in the morning.

There have been some direct hits in the centre of Birmingham. One was on a small factory just back of my hotel, another on a Greek-style public market building.

Typical of the reaction was a sign chalked on the ruins of one of the stalls:

"Fred Yates' Fish Shop. Burnt but not broke. Business as usual next door."

Wife Preservers



To clean door mats (or hemp foot scrapers), hang them firmly on the line and turn streams of water from the hose on each side. Let them drip dry, then hang in sun for day or so. This treatment will help to stiffen the fibers as well as get out the dirt.

Why Child Has a Fear Of Storms

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Among children, particularly in rural places, there are needless dreadful fears in connection with electric storms. It's the shock of thunder that frightens the younger child, or the anxiety in his presence of his parent or older children.

If you yourself have fears during an electric storm, work first on yourself. Avoid standing in a draft in the house, or leaning against the walls or chimney. It will increase your safety and feeling of security to wear rubbers or sit in these rubbers in a chair with each leg of the chair in a drinking glass to insulate you. When out-of-doors, stay away from a tree or wire fence during an electric storm. The safest place is in an automobile, except during a severe wind storm.

You can help yourself or another person by watching a receding storm, especially at twilight or night, enjoying the beautiful play of lightning and listening to the distant rumbling of thunder.

Fears Subside

In case your child, say of three or four, is awakened by a thunder clap at night, go to him. Induce him to look out the window, being ready to see the trees, fence, or automobiles during each flash, a very fascinating experience for this child. The greater his interest in such matters the more his fears will subside. By day, it is good to read to the young child from his favorite book during an electric storm, or talk to him of things that capture his attention. Despite your own strong fears, you can, by exercising enough effort, avoid betraying them in the child's presence.

This same principle is employed by British mothers during air raids over England. When the warning sirens sound, the young children are taught to scamper to cover under ground, clutching Mickey Mouse gas masks and singing, "Here we go down the steps again," to the tune of a familiar nursery song. Also the children are trained to clap their hands in "The Big Bang Game," so as to drown out the sound of the bursting bombs. For several million of these little children the sound of a bomber above them is a signal for several minutes or hours of entertainment. I hope such plans for little children are in practice in all parts of the warring world, that moreover, the young children are read to during long periods of such tenseness and during blackouts.

A grandmother once wrote me from Montana that she employed the same principle during an earthquake to calm two children, three and four, by shouting to them "Watch the jumping, sliding sugar bowl!"

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My baby, two years old, hurts the dog by hitting him and pulling his tail and ears.

A. For each and every offense immediately give the baby physical pain, preferably a sound smacking on the bare bottom. Praise her heartily when she treats the dog kindly. Otherwise get rid of the dog. Nothing can do a little child much more harm than to have a pet he continues to mistreat.

2 Million Dollars Daily For War Expenditure Forecast by Ralston

Montreal, Sept. 4 (CP).—Co-operation between the United States and Canada in the defence of North America is logical, Defence Minister Ralston told the Canadian Club here today, because "in England is the front line of North American defence."

"Canada," he said, "is driving to put everything she has into that front line. Isn't it natural that to enable her to do this, those who recognise the vital importance to this continent of the battle which is being fought there, would want to help in the plans for strengthening the outposts of this continent and the coast defences which guard our shores."

Speaking at one of a score of meetings held across Canada today in support of the second Canadian loan of the war, the minister referred to the agreement between Canada and the United States for a joint defence board, and said, "no international understanding in recent years has so caught the imagination and been approved with such unanimity."

Before the war, he said, the people of the United States were Canada's friends. "Now they and we are before the world and in the sight of all men definitely and actually collaborating on measures of joint defence."

Asking for an overwhelming subscription to the war loan, "that will show Hitler more clearly than in any other way the spiritual strength and unshakeable determination of the Canadian people," the minister gave an account of the progress of the Canadian army, navy and air force and the industrial advance of the past year.

155,000 Troops in Dominion

Ten months ago, he said, there was forecast an expenditure of $1,000,000 a day, now the forecast for the present fiscal year was more than double that amount. The size of the job had increased and the time for doing it had shortened since the swift events of spring had shattered expectations of a long period of defence behind strong lines.

When war was declared, he said, Canada had 4,500 troops, now the Dominion had 155,000.

With the Canadian Active Service Force in England, Iceland, Newfoundland and the Carribean and over 100,000 in Canada, with the prospect of training making the figure for Canada 200,000, he figured the operating costs for the fiscal year for army pay and allowances, clothing and personal equipment at $238,000,000.

"And when we are taking stock of the army," he said, "we remember that now in the front line on the English Channel our Canadian troops in numbers equal nearly three divisions trained to the minute, under the tireless and brilliant leadership of General McNaughton and the two division commanders, Generals Pearkes and Odlum."

As to the navy, he pointed out, it had grown from a personnel of 1,700 to 10,000, from 15 ships to 115 with the prospect of another 100 next year. For the first time four Canadian destroyers were on duty in wartime in British waters. The navy has convoyed 2,300 ships with 16,000,000 tons. The loss was one half of one per cent and every man and every gun and every item of munitions carried got safely across the sea.

R.C.A.F. Has 25,000.

The Royal Canadian Air Force had grown from 4,000 to 25,000. At home they patrolled the coast, guarded the convoys. "They are prepared to strike at anything that threatens." They scoured the coasts of Newfoundland. Three squadrons operated in the United Kingdom and another squadron of the Royal Air Force was composed of Canadians.

The Air Force in administering the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, he said, "has already done a magnificent job." At 75 different locations schools were functioning and others were springing up almost overnight.

For the first year of the war it had been planned to spend $88,000,000 on the air service. For the present fiscal year the estimates were about $240,000,000 and the amount would probably reach $280,000,000.

With respect to munitions and supplies he noted that with the break through of the enemy last May, Canada had been thrown much on her own. Thereafter plans had been speeded for planes, tanks, guns of all kinds, Bren gun production was being doubled, 25-pounder quick firing guns would be in production almost at once, construction work in erecting and enlarging 100 major plants had been undertaken involving more than $165,000,000. The annual output of these plants, he said, would run to $800,000,000.

Canadians An Inspiration.

The minister noted the shift of the people from peace to war. The increase in income taxes, the regulation by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

"I have heard a few groans and grumbles but I think the way in which the people have shown they can "take it" is noting short of an inspiration—I call it morale."

The minister paid tribute to the part French Canada was playing. "English and French speaking Canada," he said, "are one today—one in the equality of sacrifice in the field, in the air, on the sea, one in sharing the heavy responsibilities that the war imposes."

The War Today

(By Guy Rhoades, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Britain rejoiced today over acquisition of 50 over-age United States destroyers and was believed laying plans for an offensive to stop Italy from expanding its mid-eastern empire.

Commentators in the United Kingdom hailed the destroyer deal as an historic one, providing as it does for United States leasing of naval and air bases in the British West Indies for 99 years as well as for a gift of base sites in Bermuda and Newfoundland.

At first sight the bargain looks a bit top-heavy in favor of the United States, but it must be remembered that when the United States establishes the bases it will free British naval forces now tied up in patrolling western hemisphere waters.

The destroyers, good but not so fast as modern vessels of their category probably will be used for such jobs as convoying, releasing for offensive work the faster and newer ships of the Royal Navy.

While Britain was occupied by the war in the air and plans for the navy, the Balkan squall gained momentum and Rumania was placed under martial law.

Shots were fired in the royal palace gardens at Bucharest last night, but neither the King nor Crown Prince Michael was hurt.

Members of the Fascist iron guard, strongly nationalistic in feeling, demonstrated against Germany and demanded that their country fight to preserve Transylvania—awarded to Hungary in a joint Italo-German sellout in Vienna last week.

Meanwhile an advance guard of German troops were in Hungary in the Rumanian border region ostensibly to man the defences of the new Rumanian frontier established by the Russian seizure of sections of Bessarabia.

Russian distrust of German intentions appeared in the action of the Kremlin in calling two new army classes to the colors.

What unhappy Rumania would do next appeared uncertain as King Carol accepted Premier Ion Gigurtu's resignation and called Gen. Ion Antonescu to form a new military cabinet.

Carol, surrounded by grasping neighbors, all coveting his territory or the great resources of his country, appeared to have landed finally in a corner from which there was little chance of escape.

The Iron Guard called for his abdication and succession by his son, the young man whom Carol himself deposed ten years ago when he returned from exile with the red-haired Magda Lupescu. Mme. Lupescu, now in complete obscurity, used to be credited with having the political brains of the royal household. She never was popular with her countrymen, however.

Rumania's chief danger lay in the riots and demonstrations against Germany which spread throughout the country. The disorders presented a first-rate setup for a German invasion on the grounds that the government no longer was able to maintain order and security.

A German "protectorate" over Rumania would give the Nazis control of Europe's chief granary and a rich source of oil, timber and minerals. What then would become of Hungary's claim to northern Transylvania is a question. Hungary has been riding along with the axis, but that is what Carol tried with unhappy consequences—or maybe he was too late.

Germany Launching Economic Invasion On Iberian Peninsula

Lisbon, Sept. 4 (AP).—Germany is launching an economic invasion of the Iberian peninsula along with her air blitzkrieg against the British Isles.

Busy Nazi travelling salesmen, their gripsacks crammed with samples, buzz about Spain and Portugal as the Reich moves to regain markets the start of war and the British blockade lost her.

Reopening of lines of communication southward, the result of the conquest of France, makes it possible for German business houses once again to offer prompt delivery of goods they manufacture.

The German salesmen offer limited consignments now, unlimited deliveries after October—"when," they say confidently, "the war will be over". They offer to post cash guarantees.

British spokesmen here term the German offers "outright" nonsense, pure propaganda." But they are having effect.

For raw materials their highly organized war industries need, the Germans are prepared to pay handsomely. Tungsten and tin producers here have been offered premiums of 40 to 50 per cent over the market quotations. Spanish mercury and lead miners report like experiences.

At the same time, the Germans are listing their chemicals, machinery and processed goods at 10 to 30 per cent below other best offers. They are ready to take losses, if necessary, to get foreign exchange, it is asserted.

Oil-Incendiary Bomb Now Used by Nazis

London, Sept. 4 (CP Cable)—The Nazis apparently used a new type oil-incendiary bomb in a raid on the northeast coast early today.

A tank believed to have held 10 gallons of oil was found in the crater. Inside the tank was an incendiary bomb. After exploding the bomb fired the oil and spurted it in all directions but no damage was caused.

Three Men Arrested For Molesting Girl

Toronto, Sept. 4 —(CP)— Three men are being held today on charges of assault on the complaint of a 19-year-old girl that she had been molested during a car ride. The trio were caught at 2:30 a.m. by Constable Both after the girl leaped out of the car and fled screaming, followed, police claim, by the men.

CARRIER PIGEON ALIGHTS IN CITY

A lone carrier pigeon, tired from its long hours in the air, fluttered into the yard at the home of Mr. Fred Gauthier at 106 East Moira St. at the noon hour on Wednesday. Mr. Gauthier fed the bird and examined the bird's leg bands before permitting the pigeon its freedom. On one leg there was a band with the number 1015 T. C. 40 inscribed on it, while on the other leg was a rubber band which bore the words "Made in Belgium." On the outside the rubber band bore the number 416, while on the inside was the number 741.

Hon. C. D. Howe Opens Campaign For Loan in Toronto

TORONTO, September 4 — — (CP) — Hon. C. D. Howe, Federal Minister of Munitions and Supply, opened the campaign in Ontario for the second Canadian War Loan today with an address in which he described a year's progress in the nation's war effort and appealed for public support which, he was confident, would be given cheerfully.

Mr. Howe, who gave his address as a special luncheon meeting of the Canadian Club in conjunction with the Empire Club and the National War Loan Committee, was given a guard of honor of Royal Canadian Air Force members from the Manning depot on his arrival.

Flt. Lt. Wallace Barton of Lindsay, Ont, who has been in the R.C.A.F. since 1936 and took part in the battle of Dunkirk, was present at the luncheon.

The Minister said the process of changing Canada's economy from a peacetime to a wartime basis had seemed slow in development but the full magnitude of the task and its results now were apparent when examined in relation to conditions a year ago.

Co-ordination of Labor And Capital Asked By Labor Minister

Ottawa, Sept. 4 —(CP)— Coordination of capital and labor in the national effort for victory should be the aim of all Canadians, Labor Minister McClarty said today in an address to the Canadian Club of Ottawa.

Labor is already contributing men from its ranks to the army, the navy and the air force, he said. Labor was ready to work longer hours to speed up war production. The war loan offered an opportunity to capital and capital should not lag behind.

"What does wealth or income matter in comparison to the things we are fighting for?" he asked. "What are 50,000 francs deposited in the Bank of France worth today? What becomes of wealth if we lose this war when we reflect that one dollar in 1924 would have bought all the German marks issued prior to the last war?

"If government bonds go then everything goes with them. There is no security that is and will remain higher than the bonds of the government of this country. It is no sacrifice for the men and women of this country to do their duty and purchase all these bonds possible when the loan opens on Sept. 8."

German Troops Reported in Hungary

Szolnok, Hungary, Sept. 4 (AP)—Uniformed German troops today took up quarters in the railway station here, 60 miles southeast of Budapest, at a junction of the main railway line between Germany and Rumania.

The Germans were reported to be the advance guard of a full size expeditionary force which will be sent into Rumania in fulfillment of the German-Italian promise of military protection for Rumania's new, shrunken borders "against any power."

In Budapest, the Foreign Office spokesman denied there were any German troops on Hungarian soil. He said he would investigate to determine whether Hungarian troops could have been mistaken for Germans.

Produce Displays Mixed Price Trends

Toronto, Sept. 4—Price trends were mixed on the Toronto open produce market. Top-grade butter firmed but second-grade stock lost a fraction. Top-quality eggs declined while under-grades advanced.

First - grade Ontario creamery butter firmed to 22 1-2c, light offerings being readily absorbed. Undergrades eased to a price range of 20 1-2c to 21 1-2c as a surplus became evident. Trading was not heavy, with buyers awaiting publication of the nine-city storage stock figures for Sept. 1 before making heavy purchases.

Egg receipts increased in volume slightly in the morning. Trading was quiet. In the graded section, A-large eggs declined to 34c, A-medium to 33c and A-pullet to 26c, while Grade B eggs moved up to a range of 24c to 25c and Grade C held steady at 16 1-2c to 17c. Undergrades also showed gains in the wholesale-to-retail section.

Toronto, Sept. 4—(CP)—William T. Lawson, avowed Communist, is no longer a member of the Toronto Board of Education. His absence from meetings for a period covering three months automatically brings about his expulsion from the board.

Trustees have been informed of the expulsion and it is predicted a new member will be nominated at the next board meeting on Thursday night.

Free Transportation For Soldiers Advocated

Oshawa, Ont., Sept. 4 (CP)—"In a number of cases when soldiers have had week-end leaves, they have had to thumb their way home and there have been several accidents, some of them fatal," stated Alderman Finley Dafoe last night. City council endorsed a resolution from Sarnia recommending that free rail transportation be given C.A.S.F. members on leave.

"It would mean a great deal to these men. Most of them have to thumb their way home and they only get a two-day leave at one time. The government is saving money on food when these men are away. I think it would be a good idea to see that these men get free transportation," said Ald. Dafoe.

Dr. George F. Rogers Is Deputy Minister

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP)—Dr George F. Rogers, Chief Inspector of Secondary Education in Ontario, was today appointed Deputy Minister of Education by the Hepburn Cabinet on recommendation of Hon. Dr. Duncan McArthur, Minister of Education.

Dr Rogers assumes the post left vacant by Dr. McArthur's elevation to the cabinet, following the death of Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education since 1934. He has been chief inspector since the Hepburn government took office. He was principal of London Collegiate prior to his appointment with the government.

The office of chief inspector will remain vacant for probably a year, Dr. McArthur said, while Dr. Rogers carries on the work of this post.

Small Formations Of Nazi Bombers Penetrate Defences

London, Sept. 4 (CP)—Two small formations of German bombers penetrated Britain's defences today, one damaging inland industrial property and causing some fatalities and the other damaging houses in a river Medway town, the Air and Home Security Ministers announced tonight.

Stores and houses were damaged in scattered areas in the southeast, the communique said. The two formations which penetrated the defences were part of 200 German planes which crossed the Kent coast around noon. Most of the 200 were driven back by Royal Air Force fighters and anti-aircraft fire.

Armament Factory In Berlin Bombed By British Planes

London, Sept. 4—(CP) — British planes last night bombed electrical power stations, lighting installations and an armament factory in Berlin, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

Other British planes, the Ministry said, attacked military objectives in fields in the Hartz mountains and in the Grunewald Forest north of Berlin, starting fires and causing explosions.

SEEK CLUE TO AIRPLANE CRASH THAT KILLED 25

Inspectors of the U.S. civil aeronautics authority scan the wreckage of the Pennsylvania Central airliner that crashed near Lovettsville, Va., killing all 25 persons aboard, including Senator Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota. It was said that the plane apparently struck the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains with the throttles of both engines wide open. The crash occurred during a cloudburst.

3-TEAM GROUP IN THE O.R.F.U. NOW ASSURED

No. 1 Canadian Infantry (Rifle) Training Centre Will Enter a Team

LT. HAYES COACH

Western University Will Not Play Football This Season, Says Director

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP)—The Ontario Rugby Football Union, which has flourished since 1883, still survives. But for a time this year things looked pretty tough for the "daddy" of organized Canadian football.

The O.R.F.U., formed 11 years earlier than any other big-league organization in Canada, continued interruptedly throughout the first Great War. It's foundations wobbled early in July this year when Sarnia Imperials announced withdrawal for duration of the war and the SOS signal went out when Peterborough Orfuns followed suit.

A three-team group was assured last night when Secretary Harold Bailey announced that No. 1 Canadian Infantry (Rifle) training centre, Canadian Active Service Force, Camp Borden, had joined the Union with Toronto Balmy Beach and a team from Hamilton.

Not-so-cheery news came out of London, however, when J. H. Crocker, spokesman for a joint meeting of the Stadium Committee and the Athletic Directorate of the University of Western Ontario, said "military orders for the training of all physically-fit students makes it impossible for the university to contract for any permanent football schedule." The Western Ontario city had been invited to link up with the O.R.F.U. after the senior Intercollegiate Union had "folded" on account of the war.

The Ottawa and Montreal clubs in the Interprovincial Rugby Union joined in the football "chatter" last night. Coach Ross Trimble of the Rough Riders said practices will start today. Montreal's Big Four entry also will start tossing the ball around today.

Definite Military Team

The Camp Borden entry in the O.R.F.U. is definitely a military setup. Lieut. Alex Hayes, formerly star quarterback on many Sarnia Imperial teams, is coach; Lieut. Maurice Chilton will act as co-manager with Lieut. W. J. Balkwill. Lieut. Chilton is First Vice-President of the Union. Lt.-Col. A. H. C. Campbell will act as President and Lieut. Tommy Shields, D.C.M., former sports editor of the Ottawa Citizen, is Secretary-Treasurer.

Preliminary investigation into football possibilities at No. 1 training centre brought forth 400 rookies, Lieut. Hayes said. "Name" players on the roster include Gus Guiltinon, former linesman with Balmy Beach and George Hungerford, who played with Sarnia in 1937. Former United States College players from University of Chicago and Louisiana State are also included in the probable line-up.

LOSE TO WHITE SOX

Tigers Drop Important Game and Lose Services of Outfielder Barney McCosky

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Detroit Tigers backed into the last ditch today in their battle for another American league pennant.

They came to grips with Cleveland Indians in the first of nine games the two clubs have left with each other and the prospect for Detroit was disheartening.

The Tigers lost their fourth straight game yesterday as well as the services of their star centre-fielder, Barney McCosky, in a 10-2 debacle against the Chicago White Sox. McCosky hurt his side diving for a fly ball and may be out a week.

Detroit never had a chance, giving up seven runs in the first inning. Fred Hutchinson loaded the bases right at the start with three walks and all of the runners scored on two singles and an error. That sort of thing kept going on until 13 of the White Sox had paraded to bat. Jack Knott pitched shutout ball until the ninth for the Sox.

The National League standard-bearer no longer is in doubt. Cincinnati's hitless wonders squeezed past St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 yesterday to take an eight-game lead over Brooklyn Dodgers.

It was the 32nd time this year the Reds had won by one run. They were outhit again 12-8, but as usual made the most of what they got. Jimmy Ripple hit a two-run homer and in the eighth inning 40-year-old Jimmy Wilson, who had to forsake coaching for semi-active service after the suicide of Willard Hershberger, knocked home the winning run with a double.

ZELLERS BEATEN BY ALL-STARS FOR RED CROSS

Stub Barrett's Lassies Win Game 11-8 With Zellers Nearly Pulling Game Out of Fire in Sixth

SMART CONTEST

"Pee-Wee" Colden Allowed Only Nine Hits, Her Team Mates Failing to Hit in Pinches

Champions and All-Stars of the Ladies' Mercantile Softball League pooled their abilities on the Coleman Flats diamond last night and the result was a sparkling exhibition of the summer pastime and a substantial sum raised for the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society. The youthful Zeller's champions minus the form and a few star players that carried them to the city title bowed to Stub Barrett's All-Stars by a score of 11-8.

At that, Chuck Barnett's gang nearly pulled a lost cause out of the fire and only the fine defensive work of the Stars in the last innings of an abbreviated pastime plus a few timely errors on the part of the champs, saved the game for the winners.

The titlists were trailing by six runs going into the sixth innings due to the fine hurling of Mary Lickfold, who held them to four hits and two runs up to this point, but suddenly came to life and smashed out four safeties, which combined with an error and a walk sent enough runners across the plate to tie the count. The winners came back in the top half of the seventh to notch three markers, and retired the champions in their half, one, two and three.

"Pee-Wee" Colden on the champions mound deserved a better fate. The diminutive hurler allowed only nine hits, but her mates failed to bat in the pinches. In fact the war-bludgeons of the champions were conspicuous by their absence. Mary Lickfold did a swell job, except in the sixth when she eased up. Bennett, Zellers third baseman, led the hit parade of both squads with four for four. Marg. Orr got a round-tripper and Maker a three-bagger. Ebelyn Orr poled out a long double but went out trying to stretch it to a three-base hit.

JERSEY GIANTS CONTINUE TO KICK NEWARK DOWN

Take Last Six Games Played With Newark and Put Team Seven Games Behind Leader

LEAFS DROP TWO

Rochester Increases Lead by Defeating Toronto in Both Halves of Twin Bill

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Little Giants, 1939 pennant holders in the International League are having lots of fun knocking their greatest rivals, Newark Bears, out of a chance at the flag.

The J's have taken four of their last six games with the Bears. An 11-7 walloping last night dropped Newark seven games behind the league-leading Rochester Red Wings who took a couple of more steps toward clinching the flag when they trimmed Toronto in a doubleheader, 3-1 and 15-2. Jersey City's position wasn't improved, as Baltimore Orioles, just a game ahead in third place, blanked Syracuse Chiefs, 2-0.

Trailing 7-2 going into the eighth inning last night, Jersey combined four hits with six walks, a hit batsman and an error to score eight times against four Newark pitchers. Hank Borawy had allowed only three hits up to the eighth, when a double, triple and Herschel Martin's homer sent him to the showers. George Washburn and J. Johnson couldn't stop the slaughter and Tommy Byrne finally finished.

Rochester had to go overtime to take the first game from Toronto on Augie Bergamo's ninth-inning homer after the customary seven inning stint had been finished without a score. The nightcap was easy as Les McCrabb gave up seven runs before going out in the sixth and rookie Ralph Hammond, although yielding only three hits in 3 1-3 innings, gave out eight walks.

Baltimore's Orlin Collier pitched four-hit ball in a duel with Les Hinckle and scattered the hits. Hinckle also turned in a four-hitter but Orioles bunched three of them for a third-inning run and scored again in the eighth when Eddie Collins forced Redmond, who had walked, then stole second, advanced on Leip's error and came home on Benjamin's scratch hit.

Montreal and Buffalo were not scheduled.

SHELL "OILERS" ELIMINATED BY KINGSTON NINE

Tanners Win at Napanee 12-3 to Advance to Next O.A.S.A. Round

BAWDEN WHIFFS 13

Oilers, Short-Handed, Make Gallant Stand — Udall and Ball for Winners Carry Defensive Burden

The softball curtain was definitely rung down as far as Belleville is concerned at Napanee last evening, when the Shell "Oilers" bowed helplessly out of the Intermediate O.A.S.A. picture as the result of a 12 to 3 reverse at the hands of the Kingston "Tanners" in a third and deciding series game.

Despite the rather one-sided score the local "mushballers" were not in disgrace. Minus the service of four of their regular keymen, all of whom are giving service to the country in a military camp under the current N.P.A.M. program, Johnnie Bawden stood practically all alone against the full strength Limestone City nine and despite the fact the local moundsman was touched for 11 safe blows the absence of four regular players took its toll and was the answer as the ultimate result.

Bawden struck out 13 Kingston batters, one-half of the outs made in the entire game by the "Oilers" as his mound opponent "Cowboy" Smith whiffed but five of a weakened Belleville nine. However, no glory can be taken away from the Kingston nine, as they battled tenaciously throughout the series and received the congratulations of the Belleville nine and good wishes for a successful season towards an Ontario softball championship.

Score Six in Sixth

Despite the fact that Kingston scored three runs in the first two frames, the weakened Belleville nine stood their ground and were well in the game's picture until the "Tanners" pushed six runs across the plate in the sixth inning on but four hits, prior to which the count had stood at 5 to 1. After the big sixth the issue was never in doubt, however.

Coach Harold Bawden bowed gracefully from the game with a mighty triple, that would have been an easy home run for a younger player, in the sixth. Murray, Henn and John Bawden counted the remaining three Belleville singles. Boone hit a home run for Kingston in the second with one aboard, as Smith, Boneham and Ball counted two hits each for the winners. The Belleville outfield made exactly one putout in the entire nine innings as the combination of Udall and Ball around the Kingston keystone sack played errorless ball and carried much of the victors' defensive burden.

Lou Gehrig, ex-Yankee star, is the only player who will make the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., the game's birthplace, this year. Eddie Plank, the former crack Athletic lefthander, is likely to make it in 1941.

Prexy Larry MacPhail's plans to take his Dodgers to Puerto Rico for training next spring ran into a snag last week. With a big defense program under way at the island and with efforts also being centered on economy in administration, Admiral William D. Leahy, governor of Puerto Rico, advised MacPhail that he couldn't find the $12,500 guarantee necessary to assure the visit of the Brooklyn squad.

Do you remember when Lou Ambers, the "Herkimer Hurricane" pounded out a 15-round decision to strip the world lightweight boxing championship from Tony Canzoneri at New York four years ago last night. He held the crown until August, 1938, when Henry Armstrong, negro battler, defeated him over 15 rounds.

Today it's actually moth balls for softball in Belleville for the season of 1940. The end came abruptly, but not unexpectedly. Last week's inclement weather actually robbed the Shell "Oilers" of any far-reaching chance Coach Bawden's nine might have entertained in advancing further into the intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns. First and foremost the Kingston 'Tanners' pushed the local 'Oilers' out of business and into elimination with a 12 to 3 win over the local nine at Napanee last night. Unfortunately four of the 'Oilers' are at the N. P. A. M. camp at Petawawa, Alfie Rowbotham, Art Cole, 'Wimpy' Reynolds and Johnny Rensky all being in the N. P. A. M., while Kingston only had "Tabby" Gow in the same category. Actually the player most missed by the Oilers yesterday was Alfie Rowbotham, their able catcher. To substantiate this we look into the box score of the game that shows Johnnie Bawden striking out 13 Kingston batters with two catchers in front of him, who hadn't completed a full game in front of an umpire this season.

Kingston cannot be blamed for the unfortunate position in which the 'Oilers' found themselves in the absence of four players last night. Kingston and Belleville have battled hard in O.A.S.A. playdowns during the past decade or so and only twice before have Limestone City nines eliminated local teams. "Cowboy" Smith, the eccentric Kingston hurler and his contemporaries, played strong ball yesterday as can be seen in the fact that Udall and Ball, the Kingston keystone sack pair, accepted 14 chances around second base without a bobble, but the fact still remains that the "Oilers" were minus the service of a combination that was hard to replace, catcher, first and third basemen and one regular outfielder. The locals will never believe they were beaten by a better team, but immediately following the game the Oilers 'ganged' the Kingston bench and wished the Tanners success and a championship, but from this individual corner we're sorry the Oilers could not have tangled with George Campbell and his alleged softball nine from Oshawa.

The sporting public of Belleville did not exactly cover themselves with patriotic glory when the Ladies' Softball League staged a benefit game for the Red Cross at Coleman Flats last night. Something less than $10.00 was realized, which isn't exactly a sum to boast about coming from the sporting fraternity of a city the size of Belleville. However, the participants upheld their end of the picture by playing a stellar game of softball, "Stub" Barrett's all-star nine defeating the league champions, Zellers, 11 to 8 in as tidy a softball game as seen in the feminine ranks this year. It was a creditable final gesture on the part of the gals and their efforts could have been much better supported, that is, from a financial viewpoint. As we pointed out last evening—it was the final softball game of the year.

The box scores of baseball games played in Northern Ontario these days always brings forth names of either Belleville players or those who in days gone by were well known in this district. Yesterday Copper Cliff won the Nickel Belt League title and we find Stan Spratt, former Napanee pitcher, was on the mound for the 1940 titlists, while Cliff "Nugger" Bennett, former Belleville ball-hawk, was in the outfield for the eliminated Frood nine, while Earl "Soxy" Gray, another of Belleville's gifts to Northern Ontario baseball circles banged out a timely hit and romped around right field for Frood also. Further up north at Kirkland Lake, Walter Gerow's Toburn Mines nine dropped the first of a league final play-off to Hollinger and strangely enough Reg. Dorey, who once hurled for Walter, was on the slab for Hollinger. Hughie Brennan, who came into senior catching prominence at Napanee, won the batting championship of the Temiskaming League with a batting average of .441 for the season and that covers the activities of former Bay of Quinte League players in the northland for one day at least.

SPORT SPICE—Continuing in a baseball line, "Twig" Woodley has called nightly practices of the South Hastings baseball nine at the Fair Grounds every night this week. . . . The district nine will meet the winner of the Bancroft-Deloro series in the intermediate O.B.A. playdowns just about one week from today and although softball is washed up for the current season, baseball now looms on the horizon for the first time in 1940, which is actually better late than never. . . . If Cincinnati and Cleveland can keep pace we'll see an all-Ohio world series in 1940, which would be the first in baseball history. Either the Indians or Tigers will practically pass out of the American League picture as the result of the present Cleveland at Tigers' series. . . . Down in Kingston "Star" Reid and his henchmen have a smart junior baseball team, three of which play immediate softball. Get it?

"I Was a Convict"

In "I Was a Convict," Herman Schlom is responsible for another nerve-tingling drama based on the affairs of a millionaire business man who is sentenced to prison for income tax evasion. When the man is released, he brings back several prison pals with him and gives them important positions in his company. This not only startles the business world, but opens up the avenue for many exciting and amusing events.

Clarence Kolb is seen as J. B. Harrison, the millionaire convict; Barton MacLane plays Ace King, a big-time racketeer who becomes manager of J. B.'s corporation; Beverley Roberts is Harrison's daughter; and Ben Welden, Horace MacMahon and John Harmon also have featured roles.

The extra added attraction on the same programme is the 5th of the "Canada Carries On" series, Squadron 992, a two-reeler depicting the thrilling pictorial story of Britain's air defences, new links in the chain of her aerial armour, men from the Dominion train to defend the Mother country. The Universal News of the World and the 6th chapter of the thrilling serial "Buck Rogers," closes the grand show.

AT THE BELLE

"The Mortal Storm"

Looking at history in the present rather than in the past tense, "The Mortal Storm," a story of love and sacrifice—not war—is now on the Belle theatre screen.

With an all-star cast headed by Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Robert Young and Frank Morgan, the dramatic new offering, based on Phyllis Bottome's best-seller novel, brings to the screen ample food for thought.

The story deals with the experiences of a family "somewhere in Europe," who become a house divided as a result of political dissension. It is dramatic, simply told, effective. It is the picturization rather than the fictionizing of daily headlines, presented with no more fanaticism than the report of a foreign correspondent.

As the daughter of the family, Freya Roth, Miss Sullavan turns in another sterling performance. Her treatment of the character is sympathetic and genuine. The same may be said of James Stewart as Martin Breitner. Stewart's expert handling of a difficult assignment puts him in line once again for an award.

CARD OF THANKS

Miss Etta Reavie, sister of the late Samuel Reavie, wishes to thank her many kind neighbours and friends for their tributes of sympathy expressed in the many floral tributes and other kind acts. S4-1t

In the most thankless role of his career, that of Fritz Marberg, fanatic young political leader, Robert Young turns in a surprise performance. Capable in every assignment, he surpasses himself in this new type of role, succeeding in the almost impossible task of making the personality he portrays appear to be misguided rather than a downright villain.

Frank Morgan, who gave audiences a sample of what he could do in a dramatic role in "The Shop Around the Corner," does an even finer acting job along the same line as Professor Viktor Roth, teacher and scientist who finds himself assigned to a concentration camp at the very height of his career.

The excellent supporting cast includes Robert Stack, Bonita Granville, Irene Rich, William T. Orr, Maria Ouspenskaya and Gene Reynolds. No small amount of credit for the success of the production goes to Frank Borzage for his sympathetic and intelligent handling of a difficult assignment.

"Squadron 992"

A special extra attraction on the same program is the latest issue of the series, Canada Carries On, the title of the new film is "Squadron 992" the thrilling pictorial story of Britain's air defences, new links in the chain of her aerial armour, men from the dominions train to defend the mother country. A film of exceptional interest to every Canadian.

COLBORNE STORE LOOTED OF $100

Police Believe Organized Gang Operating in Eastern Ontario

Robbers entered Griffith's drug store in Colborne sometime last night and stole merchandise valued at over $100.00, Provincial Police here learned this morning.

Entrance was made by jimmying the front door. Once inside the building police believe one man opened a rear door and admitted accomplices. Fountain pen and pencil sets constituted the bulk of the loot stolen, although safety razors and other sundry articles were reported missing. The store cash register was entered, but as no cash was left in the store, only merchandise was taken.

Provincial Police revealed today that other similar robberies had been successfully consummated in Eastern Ontario during the past month, presumably by the same organized mob of night raiders.

"Squadron 992" is Dramatic Portrayal Of Britain's Defences

(By G. H. Carver)

The balloon barrage, one of the main links in Britain's aerial defence armor is truthfully and dramatically portrayed in the "Canada Carries On" series of pictures, captioned "Squadron 992," which will be shown at the Belle Theatre today, tomorrow and Friday and at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Like huge sausages etched against a background of cloudy blue the balloons that stretch from Land's End to Lincoln and from Dover to the Firth of Forth are shown guarding Britain's battle-worn shores and cities. Graphically portrayed is the forced march of "Squadron 992," crack balloon unit from London, to the Firth of Forth after the first German raid on the famous bridge. It pictures the German raider diving down on the huge structure, machine - gunning civilians and soldiers and the death of a rabbit by a hunting dog, the only casualty of the raid. A dramatic climax is the sinking of the raider in the Firth after British Spitfires had got in their deadly work.

Huns over England in squadrons and massed raids; the staccatos of British machine-guns as the deadly Hurricanes and Spitfires send raider after raider diving to the sea in the van of a comet-like stream of smoke; the thunderous detonations of bombs as the Nazi Stukas attack a Channel convoy; peaceful English countrysides with children playing in hayfields; the sudden roar of enemy raiders, all are links in a whole that make "Squadron 992" one of the most dramatic of the entire series.

The picture shows an Eastern Canadian port with daring young pilots going through their training paces. Gallant Australians are shown in formation over Sydney and Canberra. But most of all it portrays the tight aerial defences of the "tight little isle" and laughing devil-may-care young airmen, singing their barrack-room ballads to a machine-gun accompaniment.

Red-blooded Canadians will swell with pride when they view the vast defence preparations that encompass Britain; the stoical calm of the Englishman; the quiet efficiency of her officers, and the calm confidence that abounds in every phase of activity.

It leaves one with a deeper-than-ever impression that "There Will Always be an England."

TO STUDY ADMINISTRATION OF INTERNMENT CAMPS

A special board of experts comprised of, LEFT to RIGHT, Warden G. T. Goad, of Dorchester penitentiary; Col. P. A. Piuze, chairman, and Col. Thomas Dann, former deputy commissioner, R.C.M.P., has been appointed by Defence Minister Ralston to study the organization and administration of internment camps.

Inspecting a squadron of the R.C.A.F. somewhere in England is the Canadian high commissioner in London, Hon. Vincent Massey. Canadian fliers have been giving raiding Nazi bombers a hot reception.

CHAPTER SIX

Judith was alone. She threw herself onto the chaise lounge and wept quietly. She got up and tiptoed into the bedroom. Elsie was still sleeping and Judith went back to the sitting room.

The butler brought her supper on a tray. It glittered with silver and he set it on a table near the window, lifting the covers of the delectable dishes. Suddenly Judith realized she was terribly hungry.

Judith thanked him and he left her alone again. After dinner she got up from the table impatiently, began to pace aimlessly about. Such a beautiful room, all rose and grey. There were books and flowers about. She wondered vaguely about her hostess.

When she tried to read she found her head ached badly. Her eyes smarted from the many tears. Now and then she looked into Elsie's room, but all was quiet. What a blessing sleep was?

The day had been a nightmare. Looking back it seemed years since she and Elsie had gone to the airport. How silly she had been to be so upset about what those girls had said about Sonia Winthrop!

"I'll not think of it again!"

But she wished desperately that Tex would telephone. He'd come with Mr. Dudley, she was sure. He'd know how she needed him. Never would she mention the episode of Sonia. Of course, he'd talked to the girl! She must be a thrilling person. Everybody adored Tex. Judith was used to that. She flatly didn't believe about the date the night before the race. It was ridiculous. Tex was with his ship! He'd have no time for women before the big race!

It was only 9 p.m. The banquet would just be underway. She would have liked to turn on the radio. But she was afraid it might awaken Elsie. She managed to read a little. When the butler came for the tray she asked him for the newspapers. When it was all over, Elsie would want to see them.

Somehow the time went. Tex would be there soon. Then she would be all right.

It was long after 10 o'clock when there was a light tap on the door. She jumped up eagerly. It was Michael Dudley coming in to say good night. Judith hoped he did not see how bitterly disappointed she was because Dudley was alone.

"She's still sleeping. Good! And you?"

"I'm fine, thanks." Judith tried to smile.

"Tex told me to tell you he'll see you early in the morning, since he couldn't see Mrs. Stone tonight, anyway."

"Of course."

"Yes."

"He's pretty upset about Marvin."

"They were very close." Judith was answering mechanically. Something in the girl's distraught face touched Dudley. He felt sorry for her. These fliers' wives! What a life for them!

"Who is giving the party for Tex?"

"Sonia Winthrop. It's a big affair."

The moment he spoke he knew he had said the wrong thing, and Judith knew he knew. The panic of the early afternoon gripped her. She tried to hide what she felt. She felt sorry for Dudley's sudden embarrassment.

Dudley paid tribute to her gallantry. Judith Aimes was a thoroughbred, he said emphatically.

Dudley took her hand. "Bye-bye, Judith." Then he left her. Judith was so distraught she did not even notice that her husband's flying manager had called her by her first name.

She went in to Elsie, to lie in the bed across from the sleeping girl, sleepless until the deep french windows were grey and it was a new day. Then sleep came....

Five hours later Judith awakened with a start. Just for a moment she wondered why there was that leaden feeling in her heart. Then she remembered. Somebody was tapping on the door.

A maid came in with a telegram. Mr. Dudley must have sent it on from the hotel for it informed Judith that Mrs. Royce would arrive in Cleveland on the eleven o'clock train. Arrival of that telegram roused Elsie. She lay there dazed for a moment, staring at Judith uncomprehendingly. Then she buried her face in the pillow.

"Why did I have to wake up?" She seemed to sink in a gulf of misery again.

When the maid brought their breakfast, Judith urged Elsie to eat. The food seemed to revive her. And she made a desperate effort to get a grip on herself. Before Elsie finished her coffee the maid came back to ask if Mrs. Aimes would see Mrs. Dutton.

Judith, clad in one of Lydia Dutton's pretty house coats went into the sitting room to meet her hostess.

"I'm Lydia Dutton. I do hope you've been comfortable. I wanted to see if there is anything I can do this morning."

The Mrs. Dutton was a handsome woman of thirty. Her charm was even more famous than her beauty in her home town.

Judith said: "You've been more than kind. You can't realize what it has meant to both of us. Mrs. Stone ate some breakfast. She seemed a little better. I didn't know strangers could be so kind."

"Nonsense! You're our guests. Now what about clothes? I've got scads of black frocks. I'll get my maid to find some. It's absurd for Mrs. Stone to have to buy clothes."

As she talked, she was inspecting Tex Aimes' wife. A beauty, Mrs. Dutton decided. The black haired, blue eyed type... Yes, Sonia Winthrop would have a run for her money! Mrs. Dutton was vaguely amused. "Sonny" had summed up Tex's wife as "a dowd". "Sonny" was accustomed to her own way but, if Lydia Dutton was any judge of human nature, Sonia would meet her match here.

Judith said, "You've been more than kind, Mrs. Dutton."

CHAPTER SEVEN

Judith's shining black hair fanned out on her white cheeks charmingly. She had on no make-up, but her straight black brows made her deep blue eyes startling.

All in all, Lydia Dutton decided she liked this "wife" very much indeed; she didn't like many wives, she admitted freely. Especially hero's wives!

All this scrutiny was missed by Judith. She was too intent on what the day before her would bring.

"Mrs. Stone is suffering badly from shock. I must make some plans for her. She's totally incapable of doing it herself. I just got this." Judith handed Mrs. Dutton the wire which she had in her pocket.

"Bring her here by all means. Of course, you'll go to meet her?"

"I suppose I should."

"You probably don't like to leave Mrs. Stone. I'd stay with her gladly, but a stranger would not be much help to her, I'm afraid."

Judith nodded: "That is what has been so difficult. I hadn't met Marvin's wife myself until we arrived Wednesday. She's so alone!"

"Yes. My car will be ready for you at 11.00. You ought to leave by then to meet the train."

"I can't let you do that, Mrs. Dutton."

"Of course, you can. Your husband is a great hero to my children. I met him last night, by the way, and he's charming."

Judith's heart contracted. At Sonia's party, she knew!

"He promised to autograph their model airplanes. Mr. Aimes said he'd be over this morning." Then as an afterthought: "There are two friends of Mr. Stone downstairs. Davis and Holt."

Of course, Lee Holt would come. And it must be Lem Davis, Tex's mechanic. He'd worked with Marvin Stone in the old St. Louis days.

"It might do her good to see them." Judith hesitated.

Elsie tried to smile when she heard Lem and Lee were there. The maid was just leaving with Judith's dress when the two boys came into the sitting room. Both of them were ill at ease, afraid they'd done the wrong thing.

"If we'd known you were in such a swell place, we wouldn't have come."

"You were darlings to come. It's been pretty awful," said Judith.

Lee nodded glumly. "I know."

Lem added heavily: "I never thought Marv would go out that way." He cleared his throat. "Poor guy! He'd worked like a wiz on that ship! I was afraid of that wing construction."

Lee shoved his hands into his pockets. "At least, it didn't happen on the home pylon! She'd have seen it all!"

When Elsie came out to them she cried on Lem's shoulder, but she was less hysterical. Judith felt it had done her good. The three of them talked together while Judith dressed to go to the train. Elsie tried to describe her aunt to Judith.

"I'll have her paged if I miss her," Judith promised. "Don't you worry."

Lem offered to wait with Elsie until Judith and Mrs. Royce came back. That seemed to solve that difficult problem.

Watching the clock, Judith stalled, hoping against hope that Tex could come before she had to leave. Finally she gave up, kissed Elsie goodbye. Lee promised to make some necessary telephone calls and he followed Judith out into the hall when she left.

"What about money? I don't think he had any more than enough to pay his hotel bill and get back home."

"We'll manage some way. Tex will pay the hotel bill."

"We fellows can dig up the funeral expenses, I guess."

How real they were! Judith's heart was warmed. On the trip down she chided herself. Tex would be afraid to face Elsie. He was like that. Besides he had loved Marvin. Judith knew how Tex hated scenes. How well she knew! Marvin had been closer to Tex than any other man... I mustn't be unfair, she concluded.

So Judith argued with herself. It was comfortable leaning back in the fine limousine. A beautiful day, too. Perfect flying weather, and warmer than yesterday. Yesterday. It seemed weeks away. Her troubled thoughts gave her little peace.

Of course, Tex had celebrated last night. Not that she blamed him. He was a new national hero. She knew how much the big race meant to him, how he would feel this morning. She wished she'd started earlier so she could have stopped off at the hotel. But it was too late now.

At the station she found the train was half an hour late. She could have seen Tex. As she stood there uncertain, she heard somebody call her name. It was Hugh Lanning.

"Dont tell me I'm to have the good luck to find you going with me to New York?"

"The answer is, no. If you call that luck. I wouldn't be much of a travelling companion today."

"It would be 'yes' with me any time." Lanning held her hand a moment, saw the dark smudges under her eyes. "You must have had a bad time of it."

"I'm not the one to be pitied, Hugh."

"I know. Tough break! But you know the flying game. How's his wife?"

"You can imagine."

(To Be Continued)

"I'm not the one to be pitied, Hugh," said Judith.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, O deer, dont mind me if I seem to eat with a far away appetite I've been unaccountably blue all day not that there's any particular reason for it but on the other hand that's no particular consolation.

Maybe you'll cheer up and maybe the light of anticipation will brighten the embers of your lack luster eyes when you hear the news, pop said. Did you perchance notice a squarish package on the hall rack? he said, and ma said, Why Willyum, no, I didn't notice it, do you mean there's something in it for me?

G, pop, I noticed it, is it something for ma? I said, and pop said, The wrapping may be plain but the contents have infinite possibilities. I'll give you 3 guesses, my deer, and I'll even go so far as to tell you that it's nothing to wear and nothing to eat and it's not a work of art or a decoration, he said.

Then let me see, well my goodness Willyum, you've eliminated everything, how can I guess now? ma said. Now you really have aroused my curiosity. Benny, run and bring me that box, she said.

Wich I went and did, and ma said, Well I must say you're right, it's certainly plain looking, and pop said, So was I when you picked me out from a cluster of glittering packages years ago, but look at the jewel I turned out to be.

Wich by that time ma had it unrapped, saying, Why you crazy silly thing, it's a box of cigars, and pop said, I didn't say it wasn't and I didn't say who it was for, but what's a difference? Your eyes are shining with the lovely light of hope and greed and your breath is coming in short happy gasps of avaricious anticipation. But let me add hastily that I thoroughly intend to escort you to the movie of your choice after dinner, he said.

Adding it so hastily ma didn't have time to be mad.

Folding into a compact package when not being used, a portable dark room for photographers has been invented that can be set up in any room.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 4—(AP)—Conflicting trends of thought among traders sent uneven price movements through the Stock Market today.

Gains and losses, mainly of a fractional nature, were fairly well distributed throughout the list toward the fourth hour, but the volume of dealings was very limited.

Among leaders on the downside were U.S. Steel, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Air Reduction, Union Carbide and Chesapeake & Ohio. Included in the advancers were U.S. Rubber, Goodrich, Eastman, Dupont, Westinghouse and Sperry.

Canadian issues were irregular. Dome and Lake Shore Mines dipped fractions and Hiram Walker gained as much while Canadian Pacific held unchanged. Canada 4s, among bonds, was stationary.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP).—The Toronto market continued the advance in the early session today and all indices were higher at noon, the golds leading with a gain of 1.19. Turnover totalled 166,000 shares for the first three hours.

Base metal stocks came to the front in the early afternoon to show gains for Nickel, Noranda, Waite-Amulet, Sudbury Basin, Pend Oreille, Sherritt and others.

MacLeod-Cockshutt touched 2.50 and Teck Hughes 3.45. Preston, Mackenzie, Pamour, Powell Rouyn and other medium-price issues moved ahead.

The price tone was strong for the steel, food and senior oil group. Bell Telephone, Fanny Farmer, Loblaw A and Brazilian were among the gainers.

Home Oil led the western oils in moderate gains. Calgary and Edmonton, Anglo-Canadian, Okalta and Calmont were other strong issues.

CONVICTS RELEASE GIRL HOSTAGES

Send Her Out to 'Make a Deal' for Lives of Other Girl and Boy

Columbia, Miss., Sept. 4 (AP)—Three of four desperate Arkansas convicts surrounded by 1,000 grim possemen surrendered today, releasing unharmed two High School students held as hostages since Monday night.

Their surrender came a few hours after they had freed a third captive girl and sent her to police with a "truce" demand.

Caught between a closing line of State Police troops and trusty convicts in civilian clothes from the Angola Penitentiary, the convicts threw down their guns and gave up.

The surrender took place in a corn field at the edge of a woods several miles from Columbia. The names of the three were not immediately known One—or possibly two—of the 36 convicts who killed a guard and escaped a prison farm on Labor Day remained at large in this area.

After nearly two full days of captivity, 16-year-old Voncelle Williams walked from thick swamp lands near here and told police the fugitives demanded free passage through posse lines. Denied this, she said, they threatened to kill Gladys Diamond, 15, and Jerry Harrigill, 17, yhom they still held. All three live in Rayville, La., and were kidnapped when the criminals commandeered their car late Monday.

After the posse refused to deal with the convicts, Miss Williams joined the search, aiding with directions as to the fugitives' probable whereabouts. She told officers that the original group numbered five, instead of six as police believed, and was reduced to four when gunfire killed one of their number yesterday.

They were part of a group of 36 that shot its way out of the Arkansas Prison Farm at Cummins Monday, killing a guard. With one dead and 10 recaptured in Arkansas, there remained 25 unaccounted for.

A convict found drowned near the prison yesterday at first was believed to have been one of the 36 but prison officials later said his was an independent escape.

Miss Williams appeared unharmed and said that she and her friends were not mistreated but were forced to tramp through the woods by the hour with their captors while they played a mad game of hide-and-seek with possemen, living in fear that the pursuers guns might find them.

It was here that the men freed Frank Horsfall, former president of Monticello, Ark., A. and M. College, and Mrs. Horsfall, whom they had abducted near Gould, Ark., earlier in the day, and drove off with the young people.

"It was just awful," Mrs. Horsfall said of the wild ride with the convicts when she returned home to Little Rock.

Actress Has No Doubt Of Britain's Victory

Barrymore has "never doubted for a minute" that Britain will win a complete victory over Germany. Here to appear in Sheridan's "The School for Scandal", the 61-year-old queen of the "royal family of the theatre," declared: "France's surrender was a terrible shock to me, but even then I knew England, led by good old Winston, would never surrender and couldn't be beaten."

"You see," she continued, "I know England and the British and the stuff that's in them. I love them all."

Every Reason For Confidence

Revenue Minister Gibson, speaking at Hamilton, Ont., declared there was every reason for confidence that the enemy had been checked while Hon. Air Marshal W. A. Bishop, speaking at Saskatoon, said there was no hope of survival of the Germans in the air.

"For us there is only one end to this war and that is final and complete victory," he declared.

Pensions Minister Mackenzie told a Windsor luncheon that every war bond is a financial soldier and said Canadian savings could be devoted to no higher or better purpose than this second war loan.

Conservative Leader R. B. Hanson joined with Labor Minister McLarty in carrying the message to an audience in the national capital.

Munitions Minister Howe who will have the spending of a considerable amount of the millions of dollars the loan will bring in as chief purchasing agent for war supplies of all kinds spoke in Toronto.

War Services Minister Gardiner was the speaker at London and Hon. Grote Stirling, former Minister of National Defence and Conservative member of the House of Commons for Yale, aided the campaign with a speech at Edmonton.

Censors refused to deliver messages to Hanoi correspondents. Japanese military authorities in Shanghai were silent on reports of the ultimatum, in which Indo-China officials were said to have been warned to yield or "take the consequences."

Chinese reports in dispatches from Hong Kong said the Chungking Government of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek had reached an agreement with authorities at Saigon, Indo-China, regarding measures to be taken in event of Japanese invasion.

Japanese Refused Request

Governor-General Jean Decoux, newly appointed by the Vichy Government, was said to have assured Chungking that under no circumstances would Japanese armed forces be permitted to pass through Indo-China or establish bases there.

The Japanese fleet was reported to be cruising outside Indo-China waters, blockading the entire northeast coast.

Haipong was a hive of activity, with French and native troops mobilized and manning all defence positions along the coast. Preparations were being made to remove French women and children from coast towns.

Shanghai became virtually an armed camp as authorities acted to prevent possible Terrorist outbreaks in the French concession and the International settlement.

About 80 armed sympathizers of Premier Wang Ching-Wei's Nanking regime were reported planning to invade these foreign areas and attack Chinese followers of Chiang Kai-Shek's government in retaliation for the assassination of Liu Hanha, a newspaperman and native Formosan who became a naturalized Japanese, by two Chinese gunmen in the old British defence sector.

TARGETS IN

ing warning of 29 minutes in London while the battle was fought.

The raiders tried to enter the Thames Estuary, but were forced to turn by shell bursts and British fighters.

One of the German fighters was sent fluttering from the sky, and the pilot who bailed out was taken prisoner.

The formation then scattered and fled toward the French coast, with British chasers continuing the pursuit.

The Air Ministry said this and another force of German planes crossed the coast this morning and attempted to bomb airdromes in Kent and Essex, but that only a few got through British defences and that no serious damage or casualties were caused so far as was known.

Another German raid was reported in the vicinity of a southwest town in the afternoon.

R. A. F. Strike at Italy

While the German attacks on Britain continued the Air Ministry announced that British bombers had struck at Italy's great commercial city, the harbor of Genoa. R. A. F. bombers which previously had heavily attacked Turin and Milan this time attacked a power plant and railway junction at Genoa, Italy's principal seaport.

The R. A. F. also bombed new targets in Germany during the night and aircraft of the Coastal Command attacked supply ships in a Norwegian harbor. Gun emplacements on the French coast at Cap Gris Nez were also raided and apparently this latter attack continued during the daylight hours today for heavy bomb explosions could be heard across the Channel this afternoon. Ostend in Belgium was attacked and Lorient on the French coast was raided for the second time this week.

Half-Hour Alarm.

In today's new attacks on Britain the first alarm in London was in effect for just under half an hour. London had three air raid alarms on Tuesday.

While the Nazi raiders were being driven away from the capital, other German planes were reported to have fanned out over England and Wales in scattered pre-dawn bombing attacks which caused some casualties and destroyed a number of houses in coastal areas.

Most of the attacks during the night, the government said, were directed against towns in northwest England and in the Bristol channel area, although a few bombs were dropped in rural areas in the northeast and in Scotland. The night raids were described as "not extensive".

50 Dropped in One Town.

More than 50 incendiary bombs were dropped in the residential district of one southeast coast town in a pre-dawn attack, starting fires in a number of houses. No casualties were reported. The raiders fled seaMany incendiary and high exploded.

Man incendiary and high explosive bombs also were dropped on a northwest town, causing some fatalities. Direct hits destroyed homes in a thickly populated suburban area, while incendiary bombs hit a church and a school and set a nearby convent afire. Rescue workers were amazed to find a two-months-old baby uninjured in a mass of debris in one home hit squarely by a bomb.

Raiders Fly Over Wales.

One northeast town had two air raid alarms during the night. But a heavy anti-aircraft barrage apparently kept the attackers from dropping bombs.

German raiders flew over Wales in small formations without making a concentrated attack dropping bombs apparently at random on many districts along the coast. Anti-aircraft fire drove the raiders off one town.

Fierce anti-aircraft fire also turned back one Nazi dive bomber which tried to cross the southeast coast early this morning.

At least thirteen cities reported German planes overhead during yesterday's widely scattered raids which the Air Ministry said had "failed completely to weaken in any way or in any place our fighter opposition".

Czech Pilots Active.

A bulletin said the day's aerial activity resulted in the destruction of 25 German planes and the loss of 15 British aircraft. Eight British pilots, however, were safe.

The communique also disclosed that a newly formed Czech squadron had participated in yesterday's fighting, and it was credited with destroying seven German planes during the first attack on London.

Reports on raids executed by the Germans last night and early today said seven persons were killed in one Welsh district where bombs fell on a group of houses. Observer said the raiders appeared to have jettisoned their bombs when subjected to violent anti-aircraft fire.

Six Buried in Wreckage.

Six persons in a northwest town were buried in the wreckage of their home when it was demolished by an explosive bomb. They escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Mary Jones, one of the six, said:

"I was buried under the debris, and stuff kept bumping down on me. I saw the rest of my family were pinned down and started calling out to them one by one. What a wonderful relief it was as they each answered the roll call. We got out as best we could.

A crude oil incendiary bomb fell in an industrial district in the same town, slightly damaging a bakery warehouse and splattering the walls with oil.

Air Raid Precautions Wardens found a spaniel howling among the ruins of a picturesque old world cottage at the edge of a southwest town. They dug from the debris the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Gwyri Jones and their daughter Valerie, three. Melville Brown, 10, was blown into the roadway unharmed by the explosion of a bomb which scored a direct hit on the cottage.

Fell In Open Country.

A number of incendiary bombs dropped along the southeast coast of Scotland fell in open country and caused no serious damage.

A formation of German bombers flew over one town not far from the Thames estuary but dropped no bombs.

Many casualties were reported when bombs were dropped in a suburban shipping centre in Wales, damaging several shops, a church and a motion picture theatre. One family was wiped out.

A lone raider flying at a great height dropped ten bombs on a southeast inland town this morning. One bomb struck an air raid shelter, injuring a woman. Her two children were pinned in the wreckage, but were unhurt.

THIRD DIVISION

dor, and parts of Eastern Quebec.

Most of the 3rd Division senior officers have already been named, several of them returning from service overseas with promotion to higher rank. But the officer commanding has not yet been announced.

It is presumed that despatch of the 3rd Division overseas will depend upon the course of the battle of Britain but officials seemed to feel the Division will be in the Maritimes for some time.

United Composing Division

The 3rd Division is constituted of the following units: Six Field Batteries; four Anti-Tank Batteries; three companies of Royal Canadian Engineers; one Signal Section; three brigades of Infantry (7th, 8th and 9th); one Ammunition Company; two Royal Canadian Army Service Corps Companies (one Petrol and one Ammunition); three Field Ambulances and one Hygiene Section; Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps.

These units have been drawn from non-permanent active militia units throughout the Dominion.

UNITED STATES TURNS FIFTY DESTROYERS OVER TO GREAT BRITAIN

Fifty Great War destroyers of the United States navy are to be turned over to Great Britain in return for naval and air bases for the United States in British Atlantic territories. Some of the destroyers that will be turned over to England are shown here at the naval base at San Diego, Calif.

NO TIME WASTED

The Bermuda base and another base in Newfoundland would be in addition to the six acquired in the destroyer swap. The right to bases in those two possessions was granted by the British as an outright gift, but their acquisition was naturally linked with the broader program.

Navy Board to Meet

Conferences on the other bases were expected to be arranged shortly. A seven-man navy board will meet with British officials to decide on the exact locations for the projected naval and air bases which President Roosevelt told reporters were needed to keep any enemy from the United States' Atlantic coast. The other base sites are in the Bahamas, Jamaica, St. Lucia, Trinidad, Antigua, and British Guiana.

The announcement of the destroyer-base deal as a fait accompli took the capital completely by surprise yesterday.

Congress reacted with both applause and dismay, but the expression disregarded party lines. Discussion quickly centred on whether the deal presaged another request for appropriations to augment the already huge defence budget. Equipment will have to be supplied for the bases and in some cases it may be found desirable to extend the base confines by purchasing adjacent private property.

No cash consideration was involved in obtaining the bases, Great Britain agreeing to lease the sites to the United States for 99 years in return for the destroyers.

Congressional supporters of the Roosevelt "aid-to-Britain-short-of-war" policy voiced approval of the transaction as a major defence achievement.

Those who have advocated aloofness from the European conflict condemned it just as promptly as "an act of war," justification for Hitler to "declare war" on the United States, and an illegal transaction without congressional approval."

No Indications of Blocking Pact

Nevertheless, there were no immediate indications of any serious attempt to block new appropriations for equipping the bases.

Notifying Congress of the agreement which was reached by an exchange of notes with Britain, President Roosevelt transmitted with his special message a 4,200-word opinion of Attorney General Frank Jackson asserting that the agreement could be effectuated under the President's constitutional powers and hence did not require ratification by Congress.

Jackson also ruled that the overage destroyers might be transferred to Britain under laws permitting disposition of naval equipment not needed for United States defence if the equipment was so "certified" by staff officers.

A formal statement issued later by Acting Naval Secretary James Forrestal said Admiral Harold Stark, Chief of naval operations, "has certified" that the exchange "will strengthen rather than impair the total defence of the United States" and that the 50 men-of-war were "not essential to the defence of the United States."

President Roosevelt in his message called the agreement "an epochal and far-reaching act of preparation for continental defence in the face of grave danger."

He returned to the Capital last night after a defence tour in West Virginia and gave immediate attention to further steps to carry out the negotiated agreement.

MINING INDUSTRY

we can expect to find in abundance the initiative, the energy and the persistence to make this loan a success."

The mining industry had been a "tower of strength" in both peace and war. It had contributed much to the country's financial strength. It provided a great volume of Foreign Exchange with which to buy war supplies. "It can and will, I have no doubt, contribute a great deal to the war loan which we are issuing next week."

Under the pressure of war, Canada's power had grown by leaps and bounds, Mr. Ilsley continued, although, naturally, her war effort had not yet reached its peak. There was still room for expansion.

Because this was a total war and a mechanized war, where every man in the fighting forces had to be backed up by several men behind the lines, it was an "extremely expensive war," he said. Heavily increased taxes fell far short of producing enough to pay for the war, so the rest had to be obtained by borrowing—not only to meet Canada's own expenditures but to help Britain finance purchases in Canada.

Personal Sacrifice Necessary

"The people of Canada as a whole have the income and the wealth to enable them to subscribe more than the $250,000,000 or $300,000,000 we are asking for in this loan," he said.

Many could invest accumulated savings in the loan. Savings from income, however, was what the government particularly wanted to see. Incomes generally were now "substantially higher" than a year ago, although this was not true of everyone, making saving easier. Personal sacrifices would be necessary.

Gold production had been increased from 2,000,000 ounces a year 10 years ago to 5,000,000 ounces last year and means were being taken to increase output even beyond present levels.

Gold was of vital importance to our financial system because it was most acceptable as international money, to settle balances between countries, even though internal monetary supplies were no longer tied tightly to gold stock.

"We have learned, the world has learned, that sound monetary management in our modern industrial society requires flexibility and judgment in national monetary policies."

However, gold remained "at the very core of that system of free international trade and finance which has been so important in the democratic world."

Britain May Push Eastern Campaign To Smash Italy

Acquisition of 50 U. S. Destroyers Big Help in Plan

London, Sept. 4 (CP)—Britain's predicted near eastern campaign designed to smash empire plans of the Rome-Berlin axis may be bolstered by acquisition of 50 destroyers from the United States.

Authoritative sources pointed out these vessels could release more modern craft for use in the Mediterranean fleet, backing up land forces which the war office already has disclosed are being prepared for "offensive action."

Only yesterday War Secretary Anthony Eden said that "at any moment fighting may begin on a large scale" in the Near East.

Aside from the immediate practical gain for the fleet, Britons from First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander Down viewed the destroyer deal as drawing Britain, fighting with the Empire against Germany and Italy, closer to the United States.

Alexander said in a statement the deal "will strengthen the feeling of good will and friendship" between the two nations.

The News Chronicle said in an editorial today:

"Here is perhaps the greatest single step which has yet been taken towards . . . The planet-changing co-operation between the British Empire and America.

"Without involving the active participation of America in the war or the sending of a single American soldier to Europe that co-operation will bring victory to the cause in which both countries believe and pave the way for a new order of peace and freedom throughout the world."

The Times said:

"This transaction takes its place in the larger strategic plan for mutual assistance in self-defence which is now being worked out between the British Empire and the United States."

The Daily Express:

"This is a mighty and splendid day, a day in which America, watching our fight as the embattled champion of the world, sends us great aid. . . . It is fortuitous and inevitable that every move America makes for her self-preservation is a move in our defence too. America protects the rear."

The Daily Telegraph described the deal as "notification to Hitler of America's confidence in the ultimate victory of Britain."

The direction Britain's predicted near eastern campaign is to take has not been mentioned in official pronouncements. The spotlight has been focussed on Syria, however, by Cairo reports that the British believe the Italians are moving toward occupation of that country, which was under the protection of the army of France.

The Cairo report said members of the Italian armistice mission had demanded that France disband her force in Syria as the first step in the direction of Italian occupation.

A pro-British rule in Syria would give Britain control of a branch of the Mosul oil fields pipeline which goes to Tripoli and would re-establish the eastern Mediterranean shore as solid pro-British territory.

There is talk also that Iraq will push the old dream of Col. T. E. Lawrence of Arabia for a pan-Arab union under British protection. Support of the Arab hosts would be especially valuable to Britain in Northern Africa, where Italy and the Petain government of France rule millions of Moslems.

BRIGHTON YOUTH HIT BY BULLET

Revolver in Hands of Seven-Year-Old Accidentally Discharges Hitting Rothwell Waite in Shoulder—Wound Not Serious

While resting in an ante room of the service station in which he was employed one mile west of Brighton, 24-year-old Rothwell Waite was accidentally shot in the left shoulder by seven-year-old Ralph Post yesterday. Waite was removed to the Belleville General Hospital where it was necessary to operate for the removal of the revolver slug.

Waite was resting in a rear room when the little Post lad entered, as was his custom, accompanied with other playmates. How the little lad obtained the revolver that was kept in the building for protective purposes, puzzles investigating police.

Upon entering the Post lad was heard to remark: "Aren't you going to get up today?"

Waite paid no attention to the lad and his companions as they are daily visitors to the service station where he is employed. Suddenly there was an explosion and Waite was shot in the left shoulder. How the little Post lad found the revolver that is kept for protective purposes only, still puzzles the investigators. Waite had his back to the entrance to his bedroom, which adjoins the service station, when the children entered, Provincial Police here were told today.

Dr. Clarke of Brighton attended the wounded man at the scene, while Provincial Constable Don Carruthers of Campbellford investigated the accidental shooting.

A six-picture story that tells how a convoy of British ships was subjected to an 80-minute shelling by hidden German gun emplacements along the French coast. The convoy was in the Straits of Dover when the Germans opened fire. And, as these pictures show, very few, if any, of the shells took effect. At the LEFT, TOP, the convoy makes its peaceful way through the straits before the shelling began. Second from TOP, LEFT, one shell lands between two vessels, while a second shell lands abeam of the leading ship. BELOW is a long view, probably made from the Dover Cliffs, showing the line of convoy ships, snapped at the moment two shells exploded far from the quarry. At TOP, RIGHT, a semi-closeup as two shells explode harmlessly in the water between four vessels. Second from TOP, RIGHT, a closeup as a shell lands and explodes, beneath the surface, uncomfortably close to the two ships shown. At BOTTOM, the convoying warships race around the cargo vessels laying down a smoke screen that effectually hid the convoy from sight and ended the steel barrage. Observers reported that no ship appeared damaged.

INVASION VASTLY HARDER IN SEPT. THAN JUNE

No Great Harm Done As Nazi Raiders Penetrate Outskirts of London

Premier Predicts Passing of Reich In House Address

Tells Members Casualties for August Are 1,075 Dead and as Many Wounded

London, Sept. 5 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill declared in Parliament today that the British-American exchange of destroyers and defence bases will enable the United States "to take danger by the throat whilst it is still hundreds of miles away."

The Prime Minister, speaking for a time during a general London air raid alarm, declared, however, that Hitler "no doubt will pay the United States out if he ever gets the chance."

Nevertheless, he expressed his boundless confidence that the third Reich "will pass away as swiftly—perhaps more swiftly—than did Napoleon's army, although, of course, without any of its glitter and glory."

Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons that no one must read into the British-American agreement anything more than is on its face, and he stressed that it did not affect "in the slightest degree the non-belligerency of the United States."

Nazi Used Greater Proportion

Turning to the battle of Britain, the Prime Minister declared the Germans had used a greater proportion of their air strength already than Britain, warned of heavier fighting to come and predicted:

"The whole nation will stand up to it, grim and gay."

While he was speaking the deep bleat of the London sirens sounded the "all clear."

Mr. Churchill gave civilian air raid casualties for August as 1,075 dead, slightly more than that many wounded and said 800 houses were destroyed..

He warned the people that the danger of invasion is not passed and called for "the greatest vigilance." But he insisted the problem of invasion, for Hitler, was vastly harder in September than in June.

Mr. Churchill declard a British-American agreement had been completed to the "general satisfaction of the British and American peoples." The House cheered loudly.

The Prime Minister said "there is no doubt, Hitler will not like this transference of destroyers; no doubt he will pay the U.S.A. out if ever he gets the chance."

He was referring to the 50 destoyers which the United States traded Britain for eight naval and air bases.

No Violation of Neutrality

The transfer of destroyers did not constitute "the slightest violation of International law" or affect "in the smallest decree the non-belligerency of the United States," Mr. Churchill declared.

The all clear signal sounded while the Prime Minister was speaking.

There will be no delay in bringing the destroyers into active service, and British crews are already meeting them at various ports where they are being delivered "by the long arm of coincidence," Mr. Churchill declared amid laughter.

Dispatch of the destroyers to Britain will allow the United States to "take danger by the throat whilst it still is hundreds of miles away," he said.

"That is why I am very glad that the armed air and naval frontiers of the United States have been advanced along a wide arc into the Atlantic Ocean," Mr. Churchill said.

The Prime Minister added, however, it was a mistake "to read into the official notes more than the documents appeared on their face."

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Atmospheric reflections! There are light and heat in every corner of the earth, because of the atmosphere. The sides of objects toward the sun are most illuminated, of course; but the other sides away from the sun receive some light, reflected from other objects; also from the sky, which means from the atmosphere itself. Thus the atmosphere diffuses in a most comforting way the heat from the sun. In a most efficient and artistic way it also scatters the light, creating a hazy effect, softening lines and lessening shadows. If the atmosphere were absent or absolutely transparent the shadows would be sharp and black, with intense heat in the sunlight and great cold everywhere else.

CALGARY PILOT AWARDED D.F.C.

Sidney Robert Gibbs Shot Down Three Heinkels and Damaged Five Others in One Flight

CALGARY PILOT

London, Sept. 5 (CP Cable)—Acting Flt. Lt. Sidney Robert Gibbs, born at Calgary in 1916, today was awarded the distinguished Flying Cross after an exploit in which he destroyed three Heinkels and damaged five others while on a long distance reconnaissance flight to Tromsoe, Norway.

The citation said Gibbs was captain of a Sunderland flying boat detailed in August to carry out a reconnaissance of the Arctic port region.

It added that Gibbs brought his machine safely home after a flight of 15 1-2 hours with valuable information on shipping in the Tromsoe area.

"His excellent reconnaissance work includes locating of survivors of the Andania and guiding a destroyer to the rescue," it continued. "His perseverance and unflinching devotion to duty have proved invaluable."

One-Fourth Under Arms in Britain "American Equipped" Says Executive

Clark M. Eichelberger Lists Needs of Britain and What U.S. Could Proffer

PUBLIC STATEMENT

New York, Sept. 5 (AP)—One man in every four now under arms in Great Britain "is American equipped," Clark M. Eichelberger, executive director of the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies, said tonight.

He declared that United States shipments of arms and ammunition to Britain in June were of "even greater importance" to Britain than the trading of 50 overage destroyers. During June, he said, Britain obtained 80,000 machine guns, 700 field guns, 500,000 rifles and "mountains of ammunition" from the United States.

All shipments, he declared, "were handled in strict compliance with the Neutrality Law."

Eichelberger made public a statement of the committee, based on a report from John L. Balderston, the Committee's Washington observer.

The statement said "Fifty destroyers were not enough," suggested that Britain might be given the United States army's secret bombsight and listed the following war supplies or war services needed in Britain and which the United States could proffer:

List is Detailed

1. At least a score of motor torpedo boats to combat similar German craft in the English Channel and the North Sea.
2. An indefinite number of long-range flying boats for varied sea patrol work involving great distance for instance, submarine spotting and guiding rescuers to sinking ships.
3. Long range bombers, known as flying fortresses, to permit the British to reach new German industrial plants now being set up by the Nazis as far east as Poland, out of the range of present British bombers.
4. The entire output of tanks in this country for a least a few weeks for use in an undisclosed Mediterranean area.
5. Use of American airfields in Texas and Southern California to train pilots for the Royal Air Force, at least during those months when effective training is hampered by cold weather in Canada.
6. Another 250,000 Lee-Enfield rifles.

MILITARY ALLY

Hungary Has Restored Age-Old Natural Barrier to Invasion of Central Europe from East

(By Max Harrelson, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Satu-Mare, Transylvania, Sept. 5—(AP)—Hungary's regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, astride a white horse, led the Hungarian army into this Transylvania city early today, beginning occupation of the war-lost territory Hungary regained by the Vienna fiat of Germany and Italy.

The triumphal entry into this old frontier city started the Hungarian army's push toward the eastern Carpathians, ages-old barrier to invasion of central Europe from the east.

The 72-year-old regent thus symbolically inaugurated Hungary's new and enlarged role as the military ally of the Rome-Berlin axis in protection of the Danubian basin against Russia.

Home Guard Officers Must Wear Battle Dress

London, Sept. 5 (CP).—The War Office has clipped the wings of those blimps who emerged from their arm chairs as home guard officers. Retired generals and other high ex-officers no longer will appear among their colleagues in all the magnificense of their former uniforms.

War Secretary Anthony Eden announced the uniform ban in the House of Commons after Geoffrey Mander (Liberal, Wolverhampton East) asked if Eden was aware of the harmful effect created in certain Home Guard areas by frequent appearance among them of generals, colonels and other ranks wearing their former uniform with the Home Guard badge.

The practice was by no means general. Considerable criticism resulted, however, in some areas when those veterans of former wars resurrected their old uniforms from the mothballs and appeared in sharp contrast to their fellows who were clad in the denim battle dress provided for the Home Guard.

Orillia, Ont., Sept. 5—(CP)—Three persons were injured today when an automobile operated by Margaret Paris of Orillia crashed through a level crossing barrier into the side of a moving freight train here. Howard Beverley Kay, 39, of Sunderland, Ont., was most seriously injured with head wounds, a nose fracture and severe arm lacerations. John J. Clarkson, 47, of nearby Little Britain, owner of the car, suffered a dislocated hip and cut. Miss Paris suffered head bruises and shock.

Canadian Contingent, Largest Force Yet Sent Arrives Safely in Britain

New Arrivals Given Close-up View of Britain Transformed Into Theatre of War — Canadians Are Impressed With "Business as Usual" Attitude of British People

By EDWIN JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Northern British Port, Sept. 5 (CP Cable)—Thousands of sun-bronzed Canadians guided safely past lurking dangers, sped through the beauty spots of Britain to camp today where they will join the growing Empire Force already poised for action in defence of the Motherland.

The contingent which reached port was the largest that has sailed from Canada to date. It embraced units representing every branch of the Services, including several pilots and technical experts for the Royal Air Force, the first graduates of the Empire air scheme, nursing sisters, and naval officers and ratings. There was a goodly percentage of men from the United States.

Enroute to their destination the new arrivals were given a close-up view of Britain transformed into a theatre of war. They had their first glimpse of the damage wrought by enemy air raiders. They passed through zones guarded by balloon barrages and saw something of the defensive network that girds the land. But what impressed the Canadians most was the calm, buoyant "business as usual" spirit of the populace.

Stirring scenes were enacted aboard transports as the convoy glided to anchor in the harbor bustling with activity after what was described as a smooth, uneventful voyage. As the naval escorts bade farewell to their charges, bands on the troopships struck up the martial strains of "Rule Britannia", "Land of Hope and Glory," and "The Maple Leaf Forever," while cheers thundered across the rippling waters.

Behind Statement Lies a Story Of Intense But Ordered Activity By British Anti-Aircraft Units

London, Sept. 5—(CP)—"An enemy bomber was shot down by anti-aircraft batteries early this morning."

Behind the formal statement that yet another Heinkel or Dornier has been destroyed, lies a story of intense but ordered activity by anti-aircraft units.

First comes the message, brief and to the point: "Enemy aircraft approaching at position X. Height 12,000 feet. Warn all batteries in area."

Within 30 seconds, the anti-aircraft crews are at their allotted stations, in lonely fields, by quiet country lanes, among the rough bents of coastline which at first might seem deserted. Guns are loaded. Quick firing Bofors, 3.7s and big 4.5s are ready to load the sky with menace.

As yet there is no sound, only the silence of waiting.

Suddenly, a searchlight shoots a long pencil of light into the sky. Another thin beam appears towards the west, then another and another.

From far up in the silent sky, faint but unmistakeable, comes the sound of engines. In the beams of the searchlights, a speck is seen flying towards the east. The enemy is "held."

Predictor Plays Part

Nearby is the predictor. It is ready now to play its part. Its complicated collection of knobs, lenses and dials can do the work of four men, telling the gunners where to direct their fire.

Dramatically, without warning, firing levers are rammed over, there is a reverberating boom and a shell leaps into the air, to explode with an orange flash thousands of feet in the darkness above. Other guns take up the challenge. The noise is deafening.

The invading aircraft, still held by searchlights, is flying toward the east, orange-white flashes in its wake. Guns still boom, though the wounds of the exploding shells now are more distant. Strange falling lights are seen in the sky.

The gun crew wonders. Again there is silence. This time they are waiting for the news which may tell of success.

A telephone rings and a voice speaks.

"An aircraft, believed a Heinkel 111, reported down in flames in a wood about 12 miles from position X. Looks like one of your batteries. Good show."

LACK OF DIRECT ASSAULT MAY BE DUE TO R. A. F.

N.Y. Herald-Tribune Thinks Delay Due to Damage Caused by British

BRITAIN STRONG

New York, Sept. 5—(CP) — The New York Herald Tribune, reviewing the military situation at the opening of the second year of war, said today: "The one most striking fact was that the promised direct assault on Britain had not been launched."

Germany's "month of intensive air preparation" for an attempt to invade Britain had not impaired "Britain's moral and material powers of resistance," the Herald Tribune said, "while Herr Hitler now seems pretty clearly to admit that the answering blows of the R.A.F. have been of real effect."

Of Hitler's "sudden outburst" yesterday, the Herald Tribune said "His jocular talk about deeds instead of bluff strongly hints, at least, at a growing need among the Nazi leaders to counter the fact that the promised deeds are not being performed; the references to a long war, contrasting markedly with all the recent propaganda outgivings about a swift destruction for Britain, sound almost as if they were preparing the German public against unpleasant truths; while the fact that the leader felt it necessary to speak at all is perhaps the most impressive testimony so far to the profound practical effect of the Anglo-American agreement."

Rumanians Told New Government Will be Based Along Nationalistic Lines

By ROBERT ST. JOHN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Sept. 5—(AP)—Haggard from the struggle to preserve his dismembered, anarchy-riven realm, King Carol II, of Rumania surrendered his vast powers of state today to a new strong man and was authoritatively reported to have consented to banishment of red-haired Magda Lupescu.

Government quarters expressed belief that Carol might abdicate soon.

Madame Lupescu, his long-time friend, was reported already aboard the royal yacht, now anchored at Istanbul. She was said to have left Bucharest four days ago.

With the coming of dawn, the 46-year-old monarch who had lived down the name "Playboy Prince" with a decade of strong-handed rule, reached a "royal understanding" with a tough, strategy-minded general, Ion Antonescu, whose price for succor was a transfer of power.

Rule Changes Hands

With what Gen. Antonescu called "royal graciousness," Carol signed a public declaration which was a clear acknowledgment that the essence of rule had changed hands and Antonescu proclaimed a nationalistic program "to heal the wounds, collect our strength and assure our future."

Carol found himself only the figurehead ruler of what had been left of Rumania after vast territorial cessions under pressure, to Russia and more recently to Hungary, which had the backing of the Rome-Berlin Axis.

Manchester Industrial Area Unscathed by German Bombs

Press Correspondent Continues His Survey of English Districts and is Amazed by His Findings

NOT A FACTORY HIT

By TAYLOR HENRY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Manchester, Eng., Sept. 5 (AP)—The great Manchester industrial area—one of the world's most densely populated—is functioning normally despite three weeks of sporadic bombing by German night raiders.

On an unimpeded tour of this area I have been unable to find a single factory that has been hit. All were working full blast.

Cotton mills, steel and iron works, chemical factories and rubber plant officials said they have not lost an hour's production.

When I started out, I hired a driver and picked the streets myself so there would be no chance of a loyal Briton hiding evidences of damage from a foreigner.

At the end of three hours I still wasn't satisfied and called for official help at the local office of the Ministry of Information. There my personal observations were confirmed.

"Not a factory has been hit in the whole area," the office director said. When I expressed amazement he produced his official log book and handed it over for my inspection.

It showed that while literally thousands of bombs had been dropped, most of them were incendiaries which were put out quickly.

The total damage done has been a few persons killed, some dozen houses demolished, farm fields set on fire and village windows shattered.

Life in Manchester goes on in the stolid Lancashire way. No work is stopped when warnings are sounded now. People get off the streets but production goes on. Factories post lookouts to sound the final warning if things get too hot. But so far that hasn't been necessary.

German Air Waves Aimed at Many British Objectives

Nazi Planes Met by Intense Anti-Aircraft Fire and British Fighters

London, Sept. 5 (CP)—Heavy German air waves, coming from many directions and aimed at widely-spaced objectives, penetrated today to the outskirts of London with bombs, and rained explosives on another town in northwest England.

The Air Ministry said preliminary reports indicated no great harm was done in London, but gas and water mains were broken, a hospital was hit, and another narrowly missed during the attack in the northwest.

One Messerschmitt fighter crashed in a thickly populated southeastern area during air fights over the Thames Estuary that resulted when British fighters went up to repulse a many-pronged thrust at London. Another German fighter also was shot down.

Farm Workers Flee

No one was hurt from the crash, but one woman was wounded by a stray machine-gun bullet as dogfights swirled over the fields. Farm workers were forced to take shelter as metal rained from the skies.

Both incendiary and explosive bombs fell in the London area, but most of the raiders were dispersed before they could unload, and British fighters chased them back across the channel.

In the Thames Estuary area many bombs fell in and near a town but both casualties and damage were slight. Anti-aircraft fire was so fierce that despite a brilliantly burning target visible for a distance of 50 miles and despite the boldness of the raiders, the Nazis failed to penetrate to over the target again.

Village Church Destroyed

An old village church in a southeastern district in the London area was totally destroyed by a direct hit by high explosive. The tower crashed and hardly a wall was left standing. Debris was hurled hundreds of yards, some of it becom-

Cobalt Resident Killed at Napanee

Napanee, Ont., Sept. 5 (CP).—L. V. Coffey of Cobalt, Ont., suffered fatal injuries and two Toronto residents were severely hurt near here early today when the car in which they were travelling left the road and crashed into a tree.

The injured are: Don Wilson of Toronto Garage, driver of the car, whose condition is said to be critical, and Miss Caroline Wilson, whose injuries have not been determined.

Coffey died half an hour after the accident in an ambulance on the way to hospital in Kingston.

It is believed the car got out of control on a curve.

Damaged Airdromes Quickly Repaired After German Raid

London, Sept. 5 (CP).—Repairing Royal Air Force airdromes damaged in enemy air raids isn't causing officials any sleepless nights.

In most cases damage has been mended within a few hours. Where buildings have been hit reconstruction has only meant a few days' work.

Here's a typical instance of what happens after a raid, according to an air expert. An air field had six bomb craters after the Nazi machines had unloaded their "eggs".

"Squads of men filled the craters within half an hour, using earth taken from the surrounding country," he said. "They stamped it down and rolled it and the field was shipshape again."

In another raid a wooden hut where officers' quarters were situated was demolished. Airmen had cleared away the wreckage and a new building was ready for use in two days.

FO. J. W. KERWIN SERIOUSLY HURT

Wounded in Action but Condition is Not Critical—Wife Resides in Belleville

Ottawa, Sept. 5 (CP)—Flying Officer John William Kerwin, Belleville, Ont., has been seriously wounded in action with a Royal Canadian Air Force unit overseas, but his condition is not considered critical, according to official advices received Wednesday at R.C.A.F. headquarters.

Flying Officer Kerwin's wife, Mrs. Thelma M. Kerwin, lives at 31 Ridley Ave., Belleville, Ont., and his father, W. H. Kerwin, lives at 283 Chaplin Crescent, Toronto.

Born at Toronto on May 7, 1918, Flying Officer Kerwin was educated at Malvern and North Toronto Collegiates and at Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont. He enlisted in the R.C.A.F. on Jan. 3, 1939.

Flying Officer Kerwin, one of the most popular pilots to graduate from the Trenton Base of the Royal Canadian Air Force, was "seriously wounded during an enemy action, but is not in a dangerous condition" according to official information received by his wife, the former Thelma Deshane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Deshane, 31 Ridley Avenue.

The wounded officer was married to Miss Deshane last March.

FACES CHARGE OF ESCAPING FROM JAIL

Albert Ritchie, Bancroft, who escaped from the Hastings County jail two weeks ago, was formally charged today by Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn, with unlawfully escaping from jail after being convicted on another charge. Ritchie will face the charge in the near future. The maximum sentence is two years.

Ritchie made his sensational dash for freedom by climbing to the attic of the jail and lowering himself from a window by means of an electric wire. Falling some 25 feet he injured a foot and an arm and was taken to hospital. At present he is in custody in the jail.

He was awaiting removal to the Ontario Reformatory after being sentenced to nine months on charges of theft when he made his break for freedom.

COAL TENDER AWARDED

The tender of Harry Smith Coal Company to supply the county buildings with coal during the coming winter was accepted by the Finance Committee of County Council, officials annoufced today.

The Mother's Allowance and Old Age Pensions Board of the Council holds its regular meeting this week when several applications will be dealt with.

29 INMATES NOW IN THE COUNTY JAIL

Twenty-nine "guests" are enjoying the hospitality of the county in the county jail at present. This is a low figure for this time of the year. Four of the inmates are awaiting trial on serious offences.

SKILLED MECHANICS IN GREAT DEMAND

From all parts of the province are coming requests for skilled mechanics, machinists and airplane workers flooding the local Employment Bureau with applications, officials stated today. The requests call for the skilled artizans by the dozen at the highest wages offered in over a decade. The local supply, however, is pretty well cleaned up, and local industrial films are themselves being forced to send to other parts of the country for their skilled help.

EXPECT NO BIG DEMAND FOR TOMATO PICKERS

Predictions that there will be no great demand for tomato-pickers this year, were voiced by Employment officials today. The crop is only an average one according to present estimates and the farmers willingness to co-operate with the government to every extent, is expected to result in a light call for outside assistance.

JUMPS OFF LOAD, FRACTURES WRIST

While in the act of jumping off a load of grain to shut a gate when threshing at a neighbor's on Monday, Glenn Bamber, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bamber, fifth concession of Sidney, had the misfortune to slip and strike his arm on the roadway, suffering a fractured wrist. The young lad was taken to the office of Dr. P. V. Helliwell, Foxboro, where the fracture was reduced.

Three Destroyers Given to England Leave Boston Harbor

Boston, Sept. 5—The first three of 50 United States destroyers swapped to Great Britain in exchange for naval and air bases were on the high seas today, apparently headed for a Canadian port, after sailing in "Indian file" out of Boston harbor.

Nine others of the over-age vessels were undergoing minor repairs and paint jobs at the 141-year-old Boston navy yard. Unofficially, it was reported that four of them might sail today and that others might arrive here in the meantime.

Manned by American skeleton crews of about 60 men each, who will be replaced by British tars, the first three vessels backed from their navy yard berths at three-minute intervals and then sailed single file into the Atlantic yesterday.

Officials at the yard, maintaining their policy of silence regarding the aged, but trim craft, declined to identify them or reveal their destination, although it was generally understood they were bound for Canada.

READY FOR TROUBLE

Lovely, Ky., Sept. 5 (AP).—Shrill out, air raid sirens—John Hale and Palmer Trimble are ready. They have constructed what they believe are bomb-proof shelters in this isolated eastern Kentucky Mountain section. Hale, last war veteran, built his safety vault under a huge rock cliff on a steep hillside; and Trimble built his of reinforced concrete in a cellar deep under his store.

WHITE POWDER FOUND

London, Sept. 5 (CP).—German aircraft dropped a white powder on streets in a Welsh district today. It first was reported to be mustard gas in solid form, but the Press Association said it was "officially informed there is no truth whatever in that suggestion."

BRITISH SEAMEN TELL GRIM TALE DISASTER, DEATH

100 SHIPMATES LOST

Baltimore, Sept. 5 (AP).—Thirty-seven haggard and dishevelled British seamen, eight of them injured, told a grim tale today of disaster and death in the war at sea.

Landed here unexpectedly last night by the Swedish freighter Eknaren, they were the sole survivors of crews of two British vessels, the 4,000-ton freighter Blairmore and the Royal Navy sloop Penzance, both torpedoed and sunk Aug. 24 about 700 miles off the Irish coast. More than 100 of their shipmates were lost.

Their stories, pieced together indicated the eight injured men were the only survivors of the Penzance. These, burned, cut and dazed, were among the Penzance sailors taken aboard the Blairmore when it sped to the flaming warship's aid—only to be torpedoel in turn a few minutes later by the same U-boat. With twenty-nine Blairmore survivors, they were rescued again by the Eknaren.

Secretive Voyage.

So secretive was the Eknaren's voyage that Capt. John H. Taylor, the British consul here, said he knew nothing of the rescue or that the freighter would dock here until late yesterday.

Customs and immigration inspectors, caught equally unaware, put a tight guard around the freighter until the injured men were taken off and quarters arranged for the Blairmore's officers and crew. Capt. Taylor issued strict orders to the seamen against giving information of "military value to the enemy".

Despite their double-torpedoing and painful injuries, the Penzance survivors put up a cheery front. OnOe, his face a mass of powder burns, told a hospital attendant:

"We were torpedoed once, and they had just fished us out when another torpedo got the rescue ship and down we went again."

Seventeen Hours At Sea.

The 37 survivors were seventeen hours at sea in two of the Blairmore's lifeboats before the Eknaren sighted them.

Capt. Eric Kallstrom of the Eknaren bade a personal farewell to each seaman and officer, including Capt. Hugh Campbell of the Blairmore who still was wearing a dirty, torn uniform coat.

"When you got out of those boats, I felt as happy as you did," the jovial Swede told the survivors. "I'd be only too happy to meet you again but let's hope things will be different next time."

In a restaurant where the men were taken for dinner after leaving the Eknaren, a sailor drew more shouts when he cried:

"Three cheers for the 50 destroyers!"

Most seriously injured of the Penzance survivors was 23-year-old Charles Allen, brought ashore in a stretcher and placed under as anaesthetic immediately at hospital. His face and eyes appeared burned.

DELORO WINS OVER BANCROFT BY 9-8 SCORE

Smelters Advance in O.B.A. as Carl Casey Hits and Pitches Homesters to Victory

Marmora—Though allowing their opponents to amass a total of seven runs in three innings, chiefly through errors, Deloro emerged victorious from their second intermediate B series game with Bancroft on the smelters' enclosure on Wednesday afternoon, by the score of 9-8. The first game in the northern village on Saturday afternoon was won by Deloro by the score of 6-1. The game opened with the batteries as follows: Bancroft, Stringer and Murray; Deloro, S. Callery and Brown. T. Murray replaced Stringer in the 6th and Casey took over the pitching from Callery in the eighth. A good-sized crowd witnessed an interesting encounter. After an indifferent display for the first half of the game Deloro took on new life in sixth as Jack McInroy, pinch-hitter with a neat double, brought in three runs. A fine rally in the ninth was led by Vic Knowles of the home team who singled and stole second. M. Callery singled and Knowles came home on a passed ball. Casey's single brought in M. Callery with the winning run. As winners of North Hastings, Deloro will now meet the winners of South Hastings in home and home games. Deloro was represented by the following lineup: Hunter, r.f.; Gray, s.s.; Brown, c.; Knowles, 3b.; M. Callery, c.f.; Wright, 2b.; S. Callery, p.; Gazley, l.f.; Townson, 1b.; Casey, p.; McInroy, r.f.

Unscheduled Landing Made by Planes on Uncompleted Airfield

Workmen at the new Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School, now in the process of construction stared out of unbelieving eyes the other day when out of the low foggy "ceiling" that hung over the field like a cloudy pall, there appeared a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber.

The pilot, who, it was later discovered had found landing impossible at the Trenton base due to the fog, circled slowly over the new field, zoomed slightly once then flattened out to land perfectly on one of the partially completed runways.

Government officials present at the school when the plane landed expressed their pleasure at the sudden unlooked-for test of the new runways although the surface coat has yet to be applied.

The pilot notified Trenton authorities, and an hour later he received orders to "take off" for his home base. This was accomplished without mishap. In the meantime two Finch trainers had also availed themselves of the better visibility here and landed on the field to await the clearing of the weather.

Construction work on the new bombing and gunnery school is proceeding apace and at present is up to schedule, officials stated.

Ottawa Man Fails To Produce Registration Card

The first charge of failing to produce a National Registration card, under the recent Dominion of Canada regulations following the national registration of Canadian manpower, was preferred against Thomas Scollard of Ottawa at the police station here today.

Scollard was apprehended in a box car at the local Canadian National Railway yards by C.N.R. police early last evening and turned over to Constables Taylor and Ellis. Scollard was in an alleged intoxicated condition and found to be in possession of a bottle of native wine. This morning when he appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, on a charge of intoxication, Scollard was asked for his National Registration card by Chief Kidd. Failure to produce the card resulted in a charge of refusing or neglecting to produce his National Registration card upon demand. Scollard was remanded to the custody of the county jail until Friday for trial.

Otherwise activities in and around local police circles were serene. Two bicycles, belonging to Vernon Flindall, 84 Gordon Street, and Seward Coon, 54 Geddes Street, were stolen from their parking position at the upper end of Front Street yesterday presumably by joyriders.

With Sergeant Arthur Harman indisposed as the result of illness, P.C. Ellis is acting night sergeant this week.

AIR FORCE BANDS NOW IN PROGRESS OF ORGANIZATION

Flying Officer Norman Gilchrist Assumes Task of Organizing and Training Bands

The smart Royal Canadian Air Force band now playing at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto is the forerunner of a number of bands in Air Force blue destined to lead the marching feet of Royal Canadian Air Force units all over Canada.

The Air Force bands are now in process of organization. Full bands of brasses and reeds will be organized at first, based on a central band at Ottawa, which will provide a training school for other bands to come. A number of trumpet and drum bands will be organized as well to lighten the tedium of Air Force marches.

Flying Officer Norman Gilchrist left a Toronto brokerage firm to assume the task of organizing and training the R.C.A.F. bands. He studied music in Canada, the United States and Europe and became a concert pianist and a professional music arranger.

Wins High Praise

The central Air Force band recently won high praise for its performance at the graduation of the first class of students from No. 1 Wireless School at Montreal and in the Air Force route march the same day.

The fine showing of the band at a number of official functions in the capital and elsewhere led to suggestions that a number of similar organizations be formed to the credit of the Air Force in other parts of the country.

The brass and reed bands will average around 30 pieces each. The bandsmen will be turned out smartly in Air Force blue uniforms and equipped with gleaming silver instruments.

All R.C.A.F. band work must be voluntary. A talent search within the Air Force has been in progress for some time, and all prospective recruits to the Air Force are being urged to mention any musical experience they may have had. It is pointed out, however, that musicians are not being recruited into the Air Force as such. R.C.A.F. bandsmen must be skilled tradesmen first and musicians second. All applicants must have trade qualifications or other specialized requirements for R.C.A.F. service.

The bands will be trained by qualified bandmasters and led on the march by smart, experienced drum majors. Musicians in the R.C.A.F. who do not find places in the bands will have an opportunity later to play in R.C.A.F. orchestras to be organized at the various stations and training centres.

R.C.A.F. Employee Given Two Months For Petty Thefts

Culminating a series of petty thefts at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, J. Morlock, an employee at that station, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today on charges of theft.

Major Hammond, A.P.M., at the Air Station, told the court that petty thieving had become much too prevalent at the Trenton base of a late date, but that the Air Force authorities had finally gained control of the situation. Morlock was charged with the theft of several small articles of men's jewelery but when he sought leniency in the matter of sentence His Worship refused to heed his pleadings.

"This stealing from comrades must be curbed and although you have a previous clean record, I'm afraid an example will have to be made in this case, simply as a warning to others," explained Magistrate Butler as he imposed a two months' sentence upon the accused youth.

Two charges of speeding, preferred by Motorcycle Patrolman Harry Caldwell, concluded today's court proceedings. Hurry Norman, a Toronto motorist who apparently was living up to his Christian name was fined $12.00 and costs for speeding. A bail bond of $15.00 taken from the accused was confiscated and forfeited to cover the fine and costs when he failed to respond to his name today. John W. Budd was the other speedster to pay the minimum fine for speeding.

BOBBY BIDDLE SEVERELY CUT

Ralph Cooper and L. Canniff Also Injured When Motor Car Rolls Over in Ditch

Picton, Sept. 5—A car accident on the West Lake road late Tuesday night sent three persons to the local hospital and injured another. Bobby Biddle, son of Chief of Police Bert Biddle, was the most severely hurt, sustaining a severe gash on the head, over the eye, as well as cuts and bruises. Ralph Cooper and L. Caniff also suffered cuts and severe bruises and are receiving treatment at the hospital. L. Hudgin escaped with a cut finger and bruised arm.

The body of the car was almost torn from the chassis as it rolled over, the top being demolished and all the glass smashed. The occupants were lucky to escape with their lives.

The car driven by Cooper, overturned on a corner as he leaned down to turn on a light switch which had been accidently turned off. After travelling in the ditch for some distance, the car overturned. Help was soon on the scene and the occupants rushed to the hospital.

That's No Way to Treat Constipation!

Doning with cathartics may give temporary relief, but the real way to handle constipation is to get at the cause. Common constipation often results from a lack of "bulk" in the diet. "Bulk" doesn't mean the amount of food you eat, but a particular kind of food that helps to form a soft "mass" in the bowels and thus aid the bowel movement.

If you are troubled this way, just try eating Kellogg's All-Bran. It only takes a small amount—an ounce a day is enough for most people—but you must have it regularly and drink plenty of water. All-Bran is a crisp, tasty cereal which gives you two things you need . . . "bulk" and the intestinal vitamin B_1. See how much pleasanter life can be when you are "regular." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in London, Canada. At all grocers.

"BUSINESS AS USUAL"

Business, industry, professions and labor, Belleville's third line of home defence is showing itself to be as capable of taking care of an emergency as did the second line, the non-permanent active militia. On Monday of this week, upward of five hundred young men abruptly stepped out of their home-life character and left for military camp training, creating tremendous vacancy in the everyday life of the city.

Had such a thing happened in normal times, it would have created a furore. But these are not normal times. The country is at war, and emergency must be met with emergency. Belleville business and industry are playing the game with an admirable sense of duty. Employers have adapted themselves to the new, if temporary, order of things and are doing a remarkable job. In many places business executives have rolled up their sleeves and gone smilingly "to work." One jeweller is faced with the task of running his business with three inexperienced young girls. Six key men of an important manufacturing company went with the militia. Foremen and youthful understudies are taking their places. A prominent butcher lost the services of four of his employees. Today he is behind the counter serving customers and cutting meat. Women of the city have stepped into the breach with all the courage and fortitude of their English cousins. One man's wife is now his secretary. Another is weighing sugar in a grocery. A socially prominent young lady is driving a truck.

It is such courage and adaptibility to fill in, in an emergency, that wins wars. Belleville's third line of defence has exhibited a remarkable tenacity of purpose that coincides with that of its representatives overseas and in military camps. But tolerance on the part of the general public should be shown. Inconveniences experienced in everyday business, industrial and professional life should be overlooked. It is the part of the general public to "playup, and play the game" regardless of small personal sacrifices. Be tolerant and being such, one can lend a helping hand to those who by force of circumstance are left behind, trying in a manner little short of heroic, to keep the wheelss of business and industry turning while the "boys" are away.

A GENTLE HINT

In a fine effort to attract as many American dollars as possible to Canada, the Canadian Travel Bureau is having a notice included with dividend cheques that are being mailed to citizens of the United States. Following is a typical example of one of these:

"The enclosed cheque represents your share of the earnings of your investment in a company carrying on business in Canada, a country doing everything possible to make effective her part in a terrific war against an enemy that threatens the democratic institutions and ideals for which Canadians live and are fighting. Since you have a stake in Canada, perhaps you would consider making a worthwhile contribution to the Canadian economy and war effort by spending some of your Canadian income in Canada on a vacation."

There must be a considerable number of Americans who are interested in Canadian companies, particuand an appeal of this kind should certainly bear results. The Bureau is to be congratulated on its resourcefulness.

BUY WAR BONDS

On Wednesday the campaign to publicize Canada's second war loan was launched from coast-to-coast. Prominent government speakers joined in the appeal to Canadians to give their wealth to help in the fight against Germany.

The first war loan was an outstanding success and over $200,000,000 was raised with ease. Last year it was estimated that the war expenditures for Canada would run to about one million dollars daily. Now the nation is getting into its stride in the production of armaments and training of soldiers and airmen and the cost has mounted to two million dollars a day.

It is possible to raise only a portion of the huge annual expenditure by taxes, the balance must be obtained by borrowing from the people. The Government has arranged during the past few months for everyone to join in a common effort by issuing War Savings Stamps and Certificates. No one need get the idea that only those with a large surplus of cash can participate in the loan. Bonds of small denomination will be issued and their purchase by people of small means is as much a patriotic duty as those in better circumstances. In that way the burden can be spread over the greatest number without undue hardship. There is, also, the added satisfaction that one has performed a duty to their country that is invaluable. It is everybody's duty to back up the men who are doing their share in the army, navy and airforce.

So let us put this loan over in such a manner that Canada will not be embarrassed for lack of the funds so vitally necessary to carry on the war to a victorious conclusion and show the world that Canadians can always be depended upon to do their share in everything they undertake.

KING CAROL YIELDS PORTION OF POWER

In a report today from Bucharest, King Carol is said to have yielded supreme power to Gen. Antonescu before the latter would consent to form a new government. The banishment of Madame Lupescu was, also, another condition demanded by Antonescu.

A new government along nationalistic lines is promised by the new premier, thus another nation is to be governed along the same lines as Germany and Italy.

The trouble for Carol has arisen since the time he agreed to cede a portion of Transylvania to Hungary and which has caused much dissatisfaction throughout Rumania. The people of that unhappy land were apparently shocked by the King's action and to save the country from anarchy the King has been forced to accept a strong man to lead the army and the government.

In looking back on recent events it will be remembered that the way Rumania has been forced to act by the Axis powers in the handing over of Transylvania came as less of a shock than might have been felt had the world not been used to the Hitler technique in dealing with such problems. It is the blunt one of force and his aid, Duce, backed him up, though the basis of Rumania is the old Latin population settled by the Romans along the Danube seventeen centuries ago. But distant relationship does not draw a sympathetic plea from Mussolini who is all Fascist and grabs for what he can get.

recent events, is a tragic spectacle. Her King Carol indicated that as he spoke of the experience as being the saddest in his career.

It is the Axis attempt at solution for the Balkans, probably intended as only temporary. But no one believes Hitlerism and Mussolinism have any solicitude for Rumania or any other state and no one believes they would not grab anything they can get.

Meanwhile this brace of dictators have to fight Britain. They were probably getting uneasy about the turn in the Balkans at their rear door and so moved with characteristic violence to make Rumania pay the price.

London Spectator.

Captain Ervine-Andrews, who received his V.C. from the King on Tuesday, heard of the award, I believe, for the first time in a BBC news bulletin. When the name was read out one of them turned to him with the remark, "Some relation of yours, I suppose?"

Bases in Cocos Islands Advocated By Edward Izac

Washington, Sept. 5—(AP)—Acquisition of bases in the Galapagos and Cocos Islands to protect the Panama Canal in the Pacific was urged today by Rep. Ed. Izac (Dem. California).

"With the perfect screen which the new Atlantic and Caribbean bases will afford," Izac told newsmen, "all we need now to make our defence set-up virtually complete are bases in the Galapagos and Cocos Islands.

"But we should lose no further time in obtaining them."

Spokesmen for a Congressional group which has advocated such action, Izac indicated that the destroyer-base exchange with Britain would bring a renewed campaign for facilities on the Pacific Islands.

Naval Secretary Frank Knox at San Francisco yesterday said there had been "some discussion" on the subject of the possible lease or purchase of the Galapagos from Ecuador and the Cocos from Costa Rica.

Officials here however indicated that no negotiations were in progress and Speaker John Bankhead reported after a White House conference yesterday that "there is nothing more in sight on any more bases."

Manahan was not caught in the falling pile of sand but his companions were buried in it. He immediately gave the alarm and help soon arrived. The only portion of Cassidy which was visible was his head, but nothing could be seen of Cushing. Cassidy told the rescuers not to mind about him, but to get Frank Cushing. However, it took only a short time to rescue Cassidy, but it took fifteen or twenty minutes to get Cushing out and when found he was unconscious. Medical aid soon brought him around and to day he is about as usual. It was a narrow escape as he was buried in sand to a depth of five or six feet.

A Sharp Lesson

A Berlin correspondent of the New York Times says British air raids on that city "have certainly brought home to the residents of Berlin some comprehension of what modern warfare, with its sudden explosive death from the skies, means". Also, he says, they have "shattered the myth" that the German capital was so well guarded by anti-aircraft batteries that no enemy bomber could get within striking distance. That myth died quickly when Berliners huddled in shelters for hours this week as British airplanes circled the city, when military objectives in the Berlin area were shattered by the Royal Air Force.

These raids seem, in fact, to have awakened the Berliners from their drugged dreams. Lulled by the Goebbels propaganda machine they have been awaiting expectantly news that the German troops were in London, that the war was triumphantly over. They are not told, of course, about the difficulties. They have been assured that the British fleet is destroyed or in hiding, that the Royal Air Force is smashed and impotent. But the sion over their capital, the smash of bursting bombs, brought them back sharply to reality. Now, says the Times correspondent, the Germans "are beginning to believe the war may not be over this year, as they have hitherto confidently expected".

German officials and German newspapers are bursting with indignation over the raids. They whine and cry about the barbarity of this kind of warfare—a warfare they started and have waged with murderous zeal. They whine, of course, because they have been hurt and because they know they are going to be hurt a great deal more.—Ottawa Journal.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

(By D. E. Burritt Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Two sturdy fellows just turned their backs as bombs fell near them in a British park. They were bronze statues of soldiers which were turned completely around by force of the explosions. Scarred, but no damage.

"Don't worry," read a sign in a shop window, "it may never happen." But it did happen and after bombs had knocked in some windows, the signs were changed to read: "Don't worry—Hitler has missed us again."

Windows were smashed and the alarm clock in the room of eight-year-old Sidney Fletcher burst into pieces as a bomb fell outside his house. Sidney escaped injury—and he managed to wake up without the aid of the clock.

Villagers of one community had gathered at the wedding of one of their favorite sons and were leaving the church when a flaming Junkers 88 crashed nearby. They all raced to the scene and managed to help two of the three-man crew out of the wreck. The other was cremated.

A grey-haired Sergeant-Major of the first Great War dug his way through debris that had engulfed the village public house where two elderly women were known to have been sleeping. He found them trapped in their bedroom and carried them to safety. Then he tried to make a further search but was restrained by police only a few minutes before the walls collapsed.

Unarmed farmhands ran to the spot where a German bomber crashed to find one man dead and the other three dazed. The youthful pilot gazed at his rescuers and asked "are you British?" Advised in the affirmative, he said "thank God," and gave himself up without hesitation.

Even internment camps are not immune to German bombings and apparently the inmates want the best protection. Two interned aliens each sent a cheque for 5 pound ($22.25) to a Spitfire plane fund while another cheque for 12 pound, 10 shillings was received from "Italian detainees" at an Edinburgh encampment.

Falling bombs are old stuff to 85-year old Granny Willows who saw them drop back in the hectic days of the first Great War. "I feel younger than ever," she told neighbors who ran to her home after a bomb exploded in her garden. "Why I think I shall live to be 100."

Bad enough for police to have to be on duty all through air raids but it was more than annoying for officers from one police station. They trooped in after the "all-clear" to relax at a game of billiards, only to find a piece of shrapnel had blown through the station window and dug a furrow across the table top.

Bombs did what burglars never tried to do in a bank in the "London area." The explosion burst open the strongroom—"contents of which were collected by demolition squads."

Ernest French grabbed a heavy blanket and leaped to cover with his sleeping eight-year old son when he heard the approach of a screaming bomb. The ceiling collapsed, the windows were blown in and the bed covered with debris—but father and son were unscratched.

TWO DESTROYERS REPORTED SUNK, THIRD DAMAGED

Admiralty Announces Naval Vessels Were Victims of Torpedoes or Mines

TOTAL LOSS NOW 32

London, Sept. 5—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that the destroyers Ivanhoe and Esk had been sunk by torpedoes or mines and that the destroyer Express had been damaged.

The Admiralty announcement, issued Thursday afternoon, said:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that the destroyers H.M.S. Ivanhoe (Cmdr. P. H. Hadow, R.N.) and H.M.S. Esk (Lt.-Cmdr. R. J. H. Couch, R.N.) have been sunk by enemy torpedoes or mines.

"A German communique issued today claims to have sunk during the last few days five British destroyers, including the Express, Esk and Ivanhoe.

"The truth is that, apart from the Ivanhoe and Esk, no other British destroyer has been sunk although one destroyer, H.M.S. Express (Capt. J. G. Bickford, D.S.C., R.N.), was damaged but is safely in port.

"The next of kin of all casualties have been informed."

These losses bring the total of Britain's loss in destroyers to 32, a figure believed surpassed by new building—apart from the 50 United States craft now being delivered.

Hydro Considering New Development On Madawaska River

Toronto, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission officials said today they are considering a new $5,000,000 development on Madawaska River as a source of power to meet demands for expanding war industries. The proposed development would provide 150,000 horsepower.

Surveys have been made of the site which lies at High Falls near Calibogie where a 10,000 horsepower plant now exists. The new development would be designed to feed sections of eastern Ontario where power resources are said to be smaller than in other parts.

Officials said no decision has been reached on the project but the development will be necessary should demands for power increase.

SWEDISH SEAMAN SAYS BRITISH AIR ATTACKS NO FUN

Pilots Are Not Backward When it Comes to Dive-Bombing — Plane Made Several Attacks

FACTORY DEMOLISHED

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— A Swedish seaman gave the Swedish newspaper "Ny Dag" an account of a British bombing of a German Baltic port in which he told of the Royal Air Force pilots making determined and successful attacks on military objectives.

The account, as translated and issued by the Ministry of Information, follows:

"I have been torpedoed once while in the North Sea and that certainly was a dreadful experience but I had never seen or heard the real war break loose before this last trip. The first night that we lay in a German Baltic port there was an air raid alarm and so it continued for nearly every night of the three weeks that we were there.

"And what a bombardment we went through. They (the Germans) lie in their official war reports when they say that the enemy's aircraft caused little damage and did not hit military objectives. It is certain that the English are not backward when it comes to the question of using their dive bombers. We saw that for ourselves one night when hell broke loose a couple of hundred yards from our boat. And that was from an attack by one English plane."

Crew Knew Its Job.

"But those on board it knew their job. This was acknowledged by the Germans. When we spoke to the soldiers the day after they all hoped that the British bomber was able to get back safely home. They acclaimed it as a brave adversary.

"Most of us were asleep when we were awakened by a noise as if the world were breaking in pieces. It was caused by all the A.A. guns around the aircraft factory near the harbor firing at once. No alarm was given which showed that the attack was a complete surprise.

"We looked in vain for a long time for any machine but at last saw a large bomber appear between the clouds. They hid themselves again and played hide and seek with the A.A. batteries for a quarter of an hour. Then they dropped a flare which came down near the aircraft works and bathed it in light.

"Then they dropped and then came the dive. It began with the worst engine noise I have ever heard and the aircraft dropped like a stone towards the factory buildings. Two hundred metres from the ground it turned sharply and let fall some bombs. We heard the cries of the A.A. men as they were swept off the factory roof.

Not Satisfied.

"The Englishmen were apparently not satisfied. They withdrew to the clouds for another fifteen minutes and let fall a further flare. The factory again shone out and we could see the damage done to one of the buildings. Then the racing of the engine was heard again and we knew what that meant. The A. A. guns fired for all they were worth but nothing touched the diving aircraft.

"The English seemed to be more content but they did not give up. For one hour and 40 minutes the solo machine made continuous attacks and dropped its well-aimed bombs. Towards the end most of them were dropped outside the factory and the morning after we found the places marked with red flags. This precaution was advisable as the bombs exploded from time to time. Of the whole range of factory buildings there was only a steel skeleton left but in the war report for that day the British bombardment was described as without object."

"Death Legion" May be Formed In Rumania

(By Daniel De Luce, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cluj, Transylvania, Sept. 5—(AP) — Unconfirmed reports from the Transylvania border today said that 3,500 demobilized Rumanian soldiers have volunteered for membership in a "death legion" to resist Hungarian occupation of the territory.

The men were said to have pledged to return to the concrete forts of the Carol line in the vicinity of Oradea which is not due to be turned over to Hungary until tomorrow.

Behind the fortress walls volunteers were reported ready to fight "to show the world that Rumania has courage."

A Rumanian official here asserted he had heard nothing of any organized resistance, but reports in Hungarian and Rumanian circles said a Colonel Strat would head the "death legion."

This, it was said, was regarded by the Rumanian general staff as "a purely private undertaking."

R.C.A.F. Writing Gallant Chapter In Defence of the British Skies

Pilots Have Bagged at Least Ten Since They Went Into Battle Twenty Days Ago

ALWAYS SMILING

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Royal Canadian Air Force Station, Somewhere in England, Sept. 5 (CP)—There is a chapter in the gallant defence of the British skies from the Nazi poachers being written by the daring young men of the Royal Canadian Air Force, who have bagged at least 10 German machines since they first flew into battle 20 days ago.

They went into the skies yesterday and came back from a tangle with 12 Germans miles over a London suburb, their spirits high and at least two of the raiders to their credit. A young fellow from London, Ontario, got one, a Montrealer the other.

There may have been more of the Germans who never reached home but in the R.C.A.F., as in the Royal Air Force, they count only those they're sure of.

Answer Cryptic Message

The boys were sitting around in their hut when the station's operation post telephoned: "On your toes, boys." The cryptic message meant the Nazis were coming. Then, in a few minutes, came the word that sent them racing to their Hurricane fighters and off to battle.

"Scramble angels, 18," said the man who answered the phone a second time. It meant to get up to 18,000 feet.

They lifted off the ground in four groups of three. Only the faint drone of motors reached those waiting anxiously below. Then they started coming back, one at a time.

"Red", from Montreal, was out of his cockpit first, a grin on his face telling of the success of the battle three miles in the sky.

Take On Dozen Nazis

The Canadians had found an even dozen German Messerschmitt fighters, Jaguar fighters and bombers. The sun "at their elbow," as the redhead put it, "and smack in Jerry's eye," they dived into the raiders.

The London boy, a blond, ruggen-jawed youth of 20, burst through the circle the Nazis formed and poured his machine-gun bullets into several machines. One went over in flames, another rolled over "like a very sick gull," but the second one didn't and could except as a "probable." The successful Montrealer saw flames break out in the Messerschmitt he hit "smack in the belly" with two bursts.

Nazis Turn Tail

Every one of the Canadians got into the fray before the Germans turned tail for home. Eleven of the R.C.A.F. squadron checked in at their own station. Flying Officer Bill Sprenger came down on another airdrome from where he telephoned the squadron to put its worries at rest. Bill had set his machine down to cool off an overheated motor.

The boys called it a "duck soup" battle, duck soup because it was 12 against 12 and the last time they were out nine of them had fought 50 Germans and, even at these odds shot down four without losing a man.

They went on to lunch after all the planes checked in and then back to their huts to wait again for the word: "Scramble angels."

John Harmon, Barton MacLane and Ben Welden as seen in "I Was a Convict," now shewing with the added western "Lucky Cisco Kid," starring Cesar Romero and Mary Beth Hughes. Also extra added "Squadron 992" 5th of the Canada Carries On series.

Nine Married Women Do Auxiliary Flying

London, Sept. 5 (CP)—Nine married women, two of them mothers, are flying Royal Air Force aircraft from factory to maintenance unit and from there to R.A.F. squadrons.

They are among the women's section, now numbering 18 pilots, of the air transport auxiliary. Commander Gerard d'Erlanger is in charge of the unit and says of the women: "They work hard, fly conscientiously and take no risks. I think these qualities were ingrained in them."

Some of the women are allowed to fly the Miles Master, the monoplane with which the R.A.F. train their fighter pilots in the stages before they are graduated to Hurricanes and Spitfires.

Another is Mrs. Grace Brown, 42, who has a boy of 10, and who astonished R.A.F. pilots in France last Christmas by landing on a rough advance field with a consignment of blood for transfusions.

That act made her the first woman to pilot an airplane to France on active service.

Then there are Mrs. Margaret Fairweather, sister of Leslie Runciman, Director-General of the British Overseas Airways, and daughter of Lord Runciman; Mrs. Gabrielle Patterson, who before the war was appointed on the guild of air pilots to test instructors in the air; Mrs. Alan Butler, Mrs. M. K. Wilberforce, Mrs. L. Lambton and Mrs. V. Preston.

C.N.E. OFFICIALS GREATLY PLEASED WITH ATTENDANCE

Receipts 10 to 20 Percent Higher Than Last Year Despite War

Toronto, Sept. 5 (CP)—Barring bad weather, Canadian National Exhibition officials said today they believed that this year's two-week fair will smash all records of the last 12 years in attendance and cash receipts.

Average increase in cash receipts, taking into consideration all business such as floor sales, the midway, grandstand and other attractions, is reported to be 10 to 20 per cent higher than last year. Total attendance up to today is 1,302,000, a decrease of 3,000 up to the same day last year. Attendance was held down this year, however, by cold, wet weather during the early days of the exposition—largest annual fair in the world.

This Saturday—closing day—also has been authorized as a second "Children's Day" when the youngsters enjoy special privileges such as obtaining entertainment, candies, food, etc., at half the regular price.

The bride wore a charming frock of robin's egg blue sheer, with gray accessories. She carried a bouquet of asters, delphiniums and larkspur. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Peter Murray, Belleville, who wore dusty rose with blue accessories and corsage of cornflowers and gardenias. Mr. Carman Bushel, Belleville, cousin of the groom, was groomsman.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch, to the bridesmaid a locket and to the groomsman a cigarette lighter.

IMPROVE SOUP STEW or GRAVY with BOVRIL BOUILLON CUBES

Mr. and Mrs. Evans left on a wedding trip to Toronto and western points, the bride travelling in a navy blue sheer with gray accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Foxboro.

MUNROE—VANGEESON

Crofton (Special)—A pretty wedding took place at Bongard's Church at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when Ada Alexandra, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vangeeson, became the bride of Mr. Donald Blake Munroe, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Munroe. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. C. Burr, uncle of the groom.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a gown of white crepe with embroidered cap and veil and carried a bouquet of red and white roses. Miss Evelyn Vangeeson, sister of the bride, wore a pale green gown and carried yellow tea roses.

Mr. Charles Wood was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a buffet lunch was served at the home of the bride to the near relatives and friends. Later Mr. and Mrs. Munroe left on a short wedding trip to Toronto Exhibition, the bride travelling in blue crepe with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside at Frankford where the groom is an employee of the Bata Shoe Company.

American Designers Show Fall Clothes

New York, Sept. 5—(AP)—A pair of white bird's wings perched on the bosom, a new neckline which falls in a narrow "V" to the waist, and slim dinner dresses with their skirts slit up to the knee had the American style world today in a flutter.

Those were among the highlights at one of the most scintillant fashion shows ever held in the United States—last night's showing of Bergdorf Goodman's American-designed collection.

Accompanied by music and the tinkle of champagne glasses, in the manner of Parisian style shows before the war, mannikins paraded in 300 originals in one of a series of major showings on upper Fifth Avenue.

Everyone turned out in the nearest thing she had to "an original," one of the designers fainted in the excitement, and admittance was by invitation only—as would-be gate-crashers learned to their dismay.

Suits and daytime dresses were simple, beautifully fitted, usually with slightly flared skirts and squared shoulders.

For evening, the imagination ran riot with luxurious fabrics, skirts either stem-like and slit to the knee or bouffant and billowy, and startling transparent effects obtained by posing black lace bodices on a flesh-colored base.

The Stars Say

For Friday, September 6

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN INTERESTING, exciting and productive day, with much real progress toward high goals, according to the lunar and mutual aspects. Large issues are at stake and will be engineered with energy, initiative, determination, hard work and perseverance. New as well as old enterprises should respond to such tactics, under the high potencies of planetary impetus.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a productive, progressive and prosperous year, with much accomplished in a big way, by maintaining a sane and even course of action. The forces and faculties will be keyed to bold initiative, but since there are indications of counter currents it is recommended that reserves or resolution, patience, determination and hard work be drawn on.

A child born on this day will be splendidly endowed with energies and faculties to assure it a more than ordinary success in a professional, literary, scientific career, where foresight and brilliant intellect count.

MISS EDNA LIDSTER, TRENTON, INJURED

When the automobile in which she was riding hurtled a farmer's fence and turned over twice in a ploughed field, Miss Edna Lidster, 24, of Trenton, sustained severe body and limb bruises and is suffering from internal injuries in the Belleville General Hospital today.

The accident occured at the junction of highways near Carrying Place early today when an automobile, said by Provincial Police to have been driven by a man named Nicholson, failed to negotiate the curve at the intersection. Other occupants in the vehicle sustained minor injuries, which were treated in Trenton.

Provincial Constables Patterson and Burton investigated the accident early this morning, while Dr. Brebnear attended the injured woman in the hospital.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Lucky Cisco Kid"

A bandit steals the Cisco Kid's name! A crooked judge frames him and a lovely senorita crosses him up! But that is very unlucky for them because the colorful caballero is at his fightin'est in "Lucky Cisco Kid." Cesar Romero has the title role in the 20th Century-Fox adventure film, said to be the best to date in the series which is now playing at the Capitol.

In the strong supporting cast are: Mary Beth Hughes, Dana Andrews, Evelyn Venable and Chris-Pin Martin. H. Bruce Humberstone directed. John Stone was associate producer. And on the same program:

"I Was a Convict"

"There's larceny in all of us, and we've got to learn that we can't get away with it."

These are the words of Clarence Kolb in the Republic Picture, "I Was a Convict," and the thought contained in that statement, forms the basis of the film's drama.

Kolb is seen as a millionaire who serves two years in jail for income tax evasion. In prison, he studies the problems of the more unfortunate convicts, and decides they deserve a chance to rehabilitate themselves after leaving jail.

Kolb's faith gradually transforms MacLane, but a series of circumstances arise to place MacLane under suspicion of both grand larceny and kidnaping.

"Squadron 992"

The extra added attraction depicts the thrilling pictorial story of Britain's air defences....new links in the chain of her aerial armour. Men from the Dominion train to defend the Mother Country!

The News and 8th chapter of the serial "Buck Rogers" closes the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Lady In Question"

Delightfully different! Refreshingly youthful! Incurably romantic! These are perhaps the best words to describe this enchanting and excitingly new kind of love story "The Lady In Question" which is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and which co-stars Brian Aherne and Rita Hayworth.

"The Lady In Question" is one of those delightfully different films, possessed of an excellent and charming story which is a refreshing departure from routine, played by a cast of splendid performers and directed with understanding and great good humor by a man who knows his business.

Charles Vidor, director of "My Son, My Son" makes "The Lady In Question" a gay, exciting drama of domestic difficulties which are focussed around Miss Hayworth and Brian Aherne.

Excellent as are the co-stars, they are supported by a cast equally as fitted for the various roles in this charming love story. Glenn Ford is seen as the son; silent screen star Irene Rich makes a brilliant appearance as Aherne's jealous wife; Evelyn Keyes is excellent as their daughter and Edward Norris as the "boy friend" turns in a stellar performance.

We enthusiastically and unhesitatingly recommend that you see "The Lady In Question". We believe it to be the surprise hit of the year.

"Walk Upstairs And Save"

"Three Stooges Comedy"

Hilarious fun and laughs in the latest Three Stooges comedy, "Rockin' Thru the Rockies" is also now to be enjoyed at the McCarthy Theatre where this special added attraction is presented in addition to the ~~feature~~, "The Lady In Question." The opening chapter of the new chapter-play, "Terry and the Pirates" is also presented and offers a new type of exciting screen enjoyment which will find favor with everyone.

AT THE BELLE

"The Mortal Storm"

A motion picture as timely as tomorrow's headlines flashed across the screen last night when "The Mortal Storm" opened an engagement of three days at the Belle theatre.

Characterized by brilliant performances upon the part of an outstanding cast, this film is designed to make audiences think. In brief, it tells the story of a family, a happy family, which suddenly finds itself beaten divided against itself and helpless against a regime of terror which sweeps down upon it.

Margaret Sullavan, who may always be depended upon for a sterling performance, surpasses anything she has done previously as the hapless heroine, Freya Roth. From start to finish she lives the life of the girl she portrays with sympathy and deep feeling.

The same rule applied to James Stewart in his role of Martin Breitner. Stewart's sympathetic handling of an unusual type of character puts him in line for an acting award.

The surprise of the piece, however, comes in the person of Robert Young, who for the first time in his screen career, essays the role of a villain. It is a credit to this young man's acting to state that his characterization is believable, even likable, in spite of the things he is forced to do. One gets the impression that here is a lad misled rather than a dyed-in-the-wool menace.

Morgan as Professor

Adding even more to this production is the work of Frank Morgan as the professor and scientist, Viktor Roth. After his performance in "The Shop Around the Corner," it was difficult to associate him with his stuttering comedy roles. After "The Mortal Storm" such an association will not only be difficult but impossible. This role, easily the most gripping and dramatic of his entire career, stamps him definitely for more of the same type in the future.

So much for those who head the cast. Add to these flawless performances by such players as Robert Stack, Bonita Granville, Irene Rich, William T. Orr, Maria Ouspenskaya and Gene Reynolds, and in some degree you will be able to sense the power which lies behind this truly great production.

"Squadron 992"

A special extra attraction on the same program is the latest issue of the screen series, "Canada Carries On," the title of the new film is "Squadron 992" the thrilling pictorial story of Britain's air defences—new links in the chain of her aerial armour, men from the Dominion's train to defend the mother country. A film of exceptional interest to every Canadian. The entire program will be repeated tonight and Friday, matinee daily.

While playing in a football match in India, an athlete was removed from the game by plain clothes policemen and arrested on a charge of murder.

Margaret Sullavan and Robert Young in "The Mortal Storm," a story of love and sacrifice—not war—now on the Belle screen with James Stewart and Frank Morgan featured.

VOMITING

Doctors are continually being asked why babies who seem quite healthy and well, vomit. This summer I myself have had dozens of letters from mothers asking me just that question. It is a question to be expected in summer, for hot weather is one reason for children vomiting. This is particularly true when the child has too many clothes on, and is uncomfortably warm as a result.

Another thing I have noticed over a good many years is that the breast fed child rarely vomits unless nursing too fast. My correspondence bears this fact out.

Playing with the baby too soon after he has been fed is one sure way to upset a child's stomach. Yet I've seen fathers and uncles pick a child up right after his meal and bounce him up and down like a ball, then be greatly surprised when the child throws up his meal.

These causes of vomiting I've noted above are more or less feeding faults. When a doctor is called to examine a baby who vomits regularly after eating, he suspects something more serious. I nearly always look first to see if there is any mastoidal condition, or disease of the ears, that is causing the trouble. If these parts are all healthy and normal, I make my next exploration to the kidneys. These come in for a very careful examination, because they are often the cause of the child's upset condition.

I always feel that in all cases of vomiting it is best to look for evidence of infection first. Once you have gone carefully over all the places where infection might be lurking, then you can turn your attention to feedings and surroundings and handling to see if any of these are at fault.

Occasionally a doctor runs across a child who seems to be able to vomit at will. You nearly always find that such a child is of the definitely nervous type. We also usually find that the mother of such a child is nervous too, and communicates this nervousness to him by continual fussing and handling.

Sometimes a person's stomach will refuse to keep food down, because it wants a rest. I know we occasionally see that even in children. In the Quintuplets, for example, Cecile was ill after breakfast. I looked her over, checked all sources of infection, and was convinced that there was nothing organically wrong. I prescribed a rest, with water to drink at half-hour intervals. Dinner time found her quite recovered, and ready for food. All that was wrong was her stomach needed a rest. And considering what our stomachs go through I often wonder that they don't demand a rest oftener. . . .

BETHANY W. M. S.

On Wednesday, August 28th, Mrs. Wm. Clarke opened her home for the regular Red Cross sewing bee and Bethany W.M.S. with twelve members present. Proceeds from the dinner were $4.25.

At 2.30 the president called the meeting to order and opened the worship service with a hymn. The secretary gave her report and business was discussed. Mrs. Geo. Sills read the Scripture lesson. The worship service was closed with silent prayer for "peace, friends, epemion and for missionaries in every field."

Mrs. George Hamilton, group leader, was in charge of the program which opened with a hymn and a reading by Mrs. Wm. Clarke, "The Removal Slip." Mrs. A. Miller sang very nicely "My Task" and Mrs. (Rev.) Armstrong gave a short talk on Christian Stewardship. A hymn was sung followed by the National Anthem and prayer by Mrs. J. Ritz. Twelve members and one visitor were present. Offering $2.74.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DRIFTING ALONG

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 25 years of age and in love with a man of 28. We've been going together for three years and he hasn't had a steady job in all that time, but does have employment now and then. What worries me is that he has never said a word about marriage, though he has said that he would never marry unless he was certain he could afford it.

I have a good position and a fair salary. I like good things, but if he would only mention marriage I would lay aside a certain sum each pay day toward a start in housekeeping. I want a home in which I can have my mother with me. I'm anxious to have things settled and at the same time I worry about the future. Although I've gone out with other men, I never enjoy myself as I do with this young man.

I'm certain that we love each other and that we could be happy together.

In a case like yours, sometimes the best policy is frankness. You can let this young man know exactly how you feel about the uncertainty of the future. It may be that his unemployment is the reason he does not ask you to marry him. He may be waiting for the time when he can get a good permanent position with a future.

Then again, he may be one of those men who enjoy the friendship of a girl for years with no thought of marrying her. It's best to have this definitely settled. But is it wise, when you want to make a home for your mother, to consider marrying a man without a job?

DOMINEERING MOTHER

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm engaged to young man and we're very much in love with one another. He's handsome, generous, and a beautiful dancer. He has everything. But his mother is trying to interfere and I'm afraid is going to spoil everything. Here's what she's doing.

When we set the date for our wedding, she immediately wanted to take charge, brushing my family and me aside. Of course, I showed some resistance and was rather blunt about the way I felt. He took his mother's side, for which I could not blame him naturally. And then it was all off—even our engagement—for an unhappy period of four months.

We've made up again, and I'm once more wearing his ring. We don't mention his mother at all, but she seems to hang like a sword over our heads. What do you advise?

Beth.

My dear Beth, I suggest you say very frankly to the man that if he feels towards you as he used to—and apparently he does as you are wearing his ring—that you would like to take this matter up with his mother. Tell him that wedding arrangements are very properly and by long established customs, almost wholly in the hands of the bride's family.

CHANGEABLE PERSONALITY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am very much in love with a girl, who has two personalities. Sometimes she's a wonder; you can't imagine how fascinating she can be. And then, for no cause whatsoever, she turns and becomes terribly trying.

I try to get her to tell me why she is that way, but she only turns on the sulks, or even flies into a rage, and says that I'm too stupid to understand. But what is there to understand? When she is mean like that, I wish I had never seen her, and when she is sweet I think I'm the luckiest man in the world.

Wondering.

A good name for this girl would be "bittersweet". If you think her "sweet" side is more valuable to you than the "bitter", then you're that much to the good. Very often it's the other way round. If you keep on going with this girl, it might be well to cultivate good-humored philosophy.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BECKMAN

MAKING TRAIN TRIPS WITH CHILDREN EASIER

Those active minds and hands and feet of children are never more active than when they are traveling on a train. New adventures, new surroundings, new people, new social adjustments, new standards of "good behavior."

You can't expect these small travelers to "sit quiet" and to "be good" and to "look out of the window" four hours at a time. Naturally they want something to occupy their minds and their hands, something to entertain them. And if you prepare for this very human need, you will make them happy, make yourself happy, and make your fellow passengers comfortable.

For the child old enough to read, an entertaining new book (with pictures!) will absorb his or her attention. A book or magazine or "funnies" is an excellent recipe for a contented child-traveler.

The especially wise mother or father plans a "surprise" to be produced at the psychological moment when time begins to hang heavy. An intriguing new toy, an exciting game, an engrossing puzzle. Or, for a little girl, something new to sew or crochet for her doll's wardrobe.

We cannot, of course, expect children to abide by adult train behavior. But, on the other hand, we have no right to allow them to annoy other passengers, as alas, we too often see done by thoughtless mothers and fathers. Some adult's idea of entertaining children on trains is to allow them to eat continually. Why worry, their smug manner implies, if the cute little darling puts smeared fingers on the seat, dress or coat of a passenger? Why worry if the children dash noisily and boisterously up and down the train aisle?

Well, why not worry a bit about the comfort of other persons? That's decency, let alone courtesy.

If you do your job of thoughtful planning of entertainment and decent control of your children's manners, you'll prove that your children's manners began at home and charmingly went a-travelling with them.

Courtesy Tip

"Beautiful behavior is the finest of the finest arts."

Don'ts May Build Fear In Children

By Garry Cleveland Myers Ph.D.

It is disheartening to hear so many parents shout at little children, "Don't run among those weeds, you might step on a snake!" Or, "Throw down that dirty thing, it will bite you!" The thing might be no more harmful than an earthworm, lady bug or caterpillar. Warned constantly against the lowly creatures, the child soon learns to attack and kill them, being in constant fear of most small living things as harmless as kittens.

With due caution concerning the very few harmful creatures, we should train our children to enjoy observing them and being kind to them. I have seen a little child treated to watch a group of ants for half an hour, or a toad eating his dinner, or having an earthworm crawl between his fingers or toes to the youngster's great delight. Why not?

Living Animals in School

The school is doing much good for wise education in this direction. In classrooms from coast to coast I have seen almost every kind of living animals, wild and domestic, including dogs, cats (even a lamb), chickens, pigeons, rabbits, white rabbits, squirrels, turtles, frogs, tadpoles, snakes and many others.

Always the children learn to handle these creatures with proper care and to feel kindly toward them. Primary children dictate stories about these animals in their midst which the teacher prints on the board for their reading lesson. I once found third-grade children writing imaginary stories to a rabbit of their room. In upper grades and junior high animals such as rabbits and white rats are bred. Accordingly the children get wholesome education about the "story of life," and acquire a tender attitude toward the expectant animal mother.

Children Unafraid

Several months ago I visited a second-grade room in a rural school in Utah. The children were eager to show me all the creatures they had in their terrarium. Crowding about it, a group of youngsters held their begging hands outstretched for a garter snake. Each was supplied by the patient teacher. Some gently wrapped these harmless long creatures about their necks. It was then that I, for the first time in my life, mustered up enough courage to take a live snake in my hand. I supposed these little children would protect me. Always before I had hoped my own children, who handled such snakes freely, would never ask me to take one. For some reason I hardly can understand, they never did.

When one of my boys was about five he and I were walking down a country road one day when, startled, I suddenly stopped. A dead garter snake lay across road. Apparently the lad did not observe my fright for he tenderly picked up the dead snake and laid it in the grass by the side of the road with the remark, "Poor thing, maybe it will live again." His childhood experiences were of course, very different from what mine had been.

Yankees Also Bite the Dust Being Taken Into Camp by Washington Senators

GIANTS LOSE 2-0

Dodgers and Cardinals Maintain Margins Behind Reds by Winning Night Games

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Detroit Tigers, creaking with old age at nearly every joint, have turned the American League Pennant scramble inside out again.

They crushed Cleveland Indians, 7-2, yesterday with almost unbelievable ferocity while Washington Senators pounced on New York Yankees, 6-5. Between the two upheavals the whole championship outlook was covered with confusion.

The Tigers made 11 hits, including three home runs, off Bob Feller in seven innings and had the youngster so befuddled he literally didn't know which way to turn. Bartell stole second once, while the Iowa speedster was going through his complicated windup, and Bob couldn't get settled down enough to throw to first when Campbell hit a bounder at him.

The Indians lost slugging Hal Trosky indefinitely because of a leg injury he suffered by tripping over third base. He hit a homer and a single and scored both Cleveland's runs.

Gehringer batted in four of Detroit's runs with a homer and a double and Hank Greenberg and Campbell also hit circuit drives.

The victory lifted the Tigers back into second place, three games back of the Tribe.

Victims of Southpaw

The Yankees were victims of Lefty Joe Krakauskas, the Canadian boy who hadn't won a game all season until yesterday. He was in frequent trouble, but tight in the pinches, and twice set down the champs without a score after they had loaded the bases.

Boston Red Sox hovered close to pennant contenders by sweeping two extra - inning games from Philadelphia Athletics, 6-5 and 5-4. In the first, Joe Cronin singled with the bases loaded. In the second, Tom Carey performed the same service.

St. Louis Browns continued to make trouble by whipping Chicago White Sox, 4-1, with Bob Harris scattering eight hits.

In the National League, the champion Cincinnati Reds copped their 33rd one-run victory with a 3-2, 12-inning verdict over Pittsburgh Pirates in a night game. The always reliable Bill Weber singled home a run that meant the ball game.

Win Night Encounters

Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals maintained their margins behind the leaders by winning night encounters. Luke Hamlin pitched the Dodgers to a 3-0 shutout over the last-place Phillies, keeping seven safeties well paced. Max Lanier performed the mound chore for the Cardinals, holding the Chicago Cubs scoreless for seven innings, but getting help from Clyde Shoun in the ninth before winning, 4-2.

One of the season's finest pitching duels was rendered by Dick Errickson of Boston Bees and Carl Hubbell of New York Giants as the Bees scored a 2-0 shutout. The only runs of the game came on a homer by Eddie Miller in the seventh inning.

PROMISING HURLER

Snapped as he sent in his fast one here is Dick Hearn, 22-year-old Chicagoan, who is playing hob with the batsmen of the Florida state league. Young Mr. Hearn chalked up his 305th strike-out by fanning 16 Deland batters on August 29. This feat also marked his 22nd victory of the season. The league record was 233 strikeouts. Hearn is a right-hander, 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighing 185 pounds. He is regarded as one of the most promising hurlers in the minors.

YVON ROBERT DEFEATS BROWN

Professional Wrestler Scores First Win as a Boxer in Montreal—Purses Held Up

Montreal, Sept. 5 (CP)—Yvon Robert won his first fight as a professional boxer here last night when he scored a knockout over Natie Brown of Washington, in the second round. But the idol of Montreal wrestling fans decided after the fight that "I'm going back to wrestling."

Referee Bert Light counted out Brown after two minutes and 25 seconds of the second round. As Light reached the "10" Brown was just rising from one knee, his hands pressed to his groin, groaning "He fouled me."

The upshot of the evening's card was that two purses were confiscated, and Brown's was held up pending a meeting of the Montreal Athletic Commission. There was no definite date set for the meeting.

Mickey McAvoy of New York, Robert's coach and trainer, had his purse confiscated after he failed to come out for the second round of his bout with Oliver Shanks, formerly of Edmonton. In another preliminary, George Leslie of Charlottetown had his purse confiscated because the Commission did not feel he had been hit hard when he was counted out in the first round of his bout with Montreal's Larry Bouchard.

Chairman Dave Rochon of the Montreal Athletic Commission said the confiscated purses would be turned over to the Red Cross.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

If the Cleveland Indians fail to win the American League championship this season, Oscar Vitt's charges will be the first club in the 40-year history of the league to blow the flag in the last month of the season. It is an amazing thing, but in every American League race up to this year, the club which was first on September 1st also has won the pennant. It seems to be an old American custom. Several clubs which were first on September 1 lost the lead during the month, but eventually regained it and were the ultimate winner. The Boston club of 1903, the Tigers of 1908 and the Indians of 1920 were teams which lost the lead in September, but later finished right side up.

Twenty years ago the Yankees knocked the Indians from the top perch on their last western trip, taking their series in Cleveland, but Speaker's club regained the lead and topped New York by three games at the finish.

No such September 1st rule follows in the National League, but despite the upsets of recent years, the club which can go into the ninth month in front must be considered a top-heavy favorite. In the 40 years of this century, seven clubs which were first on September 1 have been beaten out, including three New York clubs and two Pittsburgh teams. The clubs suffering these humiliations were the 1908 Giants, 1914 Giants, 1921 Pirates, 1930 Cubs, 1934 Giants, 1935 Cardinals and 1938 Pirates. The last-named club, took the worst flop, blowing a seven-game lead of September 1, with Terry's team of 1934 a close second. They kicked away a five and one half game lead, most of it in the last week of the season.

The Deloro "Smelters" once a power in the old C.O.B.L. and once intermediate baseball champions of this province, have returned to the baseball wars once again. Yesterday the Smelters put Bancroft out of the running in the intermediate O.B.A. playdowns, as they beat the "Northerners" 9 to 8 after having won the first game of the series last week. The Smelters now meet the South Hastings "Combines" in the second round of the O.B.A. playdowns and it has been proposed, that the Combines' initial baseball appearance in the O.B.A. be here at the Fair Grounds next Wednesday afternoon. At any rate "Doc" Empson's charges are definitely certain to get into action over the week end and even at this late date Belleville ball fans are going to have the opportunity to see the odd game on the home diamond in 1940. The "Combines" signed several local players including Jack Kelleher, Russ Collins, Alex Simpson, "Speedy" St. Louis and will use Chuck Barriage on the firing line.

Delore had quite a tussle disposing of Bancroft yesterday, Carl Casey, former Belleville C.O.B.L. pitcher being in the hero role. Carl got the moneyed hit in the ninth inning, that drove in two runs to knot the count, after having gone to the rescue of Callery, the Delore starting pitcher, whose deliveries failed to baffle Bancroft yesterday. With the count standing something like 7 to 2 Casey went to the Delore mound and not only halted the visiting Bancroft nine, but came through with his timely hit to win his own ball game. It should prove quite interesting to watch Casey face his old teammates, when Delore and the local district "Combines" meet in the next round of the O.B.A. race. With softball all through for the season and no baseball having been seen here this year, a goodly crowd will doubtless be on hand to see the next series, especially the game scheduled to be played here next week.

Do you remember when Bobby Pearce defeated Bill Miller of Philadelphia by 15 lengths for the world's professional single sculling championship at Toronto six years ago today. The Australian-born sculler from Hamilton, Ont., increased his lead with practically every dip of his oars.

Do you know that the Dodgers could have had Max West and a pitcher (could it have been Dick Errickson?) for the same price Larry MacPhail paid for Joe Medwick?...Although Ernie Koy, one of the four players sent to the Cardinal organization, along with 125,000 smackers, has been outhitting Medwick by 35 points ever since the transition, don't put the slug on MacPhail or Leo Durocher. If you, or you, or you had had it to do, and the coin to turn loose to top off a flag contender, you would have grabbed Ducky Wucky, too—a big name and a star who still has time to prove up to his shimmering exterior.

Professional wrestling opens the fall season at the arena come Monday night, when three heavyweight bouts will top the opening card headed by the Greek adonis Nick Pavick.

It was the Detroit Tigers who gained ground in the torrid American League heat yesterday, the Indians and Yankees losing ground in defeat. Home runs won for the Tigers as Schoolboy Rowe bested Bobby Feller and the Tigers gained second place just three games behind Cleveland; the Yankees are 3 1-2 games astern the Indians. Feller's No. 1 fireball proved no mystery to the clubbing Tigers as Gehringer, Greenberg and Campbell all blasted circuit blows for the Tigers. Down at Washington it was the Canadian-born moundsman, Joe Krakauskas, who halted the Yankees in their bid for a fifth consecutive American League title. Strangely enough it was Krakauskas' first victory of the season. However, the Yankees can make up for lost ground today as they have a doubleheader with the Senators, while Detroit is clawing away at the Indians trying for another scalping in a single encounter.

Cleveland Excited Over Indian's Prospects of Pennant; Officials Preparing for First World Series Since 1920

(By Walter L. Johns, Central Press Canadian Sports Writer)

Bobby Feller, Al Smith and Al Milnar

Cleveland, O., Sept. 5 — While Cleveland's hard-boiled baseball fans still keep their fingers crossed and hope for the best in the way of a pennant for the Tribe, city officials believe the American League pennant race is all over but the shouting and are preparing for the first world series in 20 years.

And this in spite of the disastrous eastern invasion of Oscar Vitt's aggregation which included four straight losses.

The pennant fever has spread even though Clevelanders are accustomed to watching an Indian team climb to the heights and then sink rapidly. Friction between Manager Vitt and the players, which came to a head in open rebellion several weeks back and then was canned for future reference, still is being reported but pennant talk rises louder on every street corner.

City officials have begun work on a new pedestrian ramp to handle what is expected to be the largest world series crowds in history if and when the games are played at the municipal stadium on the lake front. While the stadium seats but 78,000, additional seats could be installed to accommodate crowds approximating 100,000, a mark considerably over any previous blue ribbon classic outpouring.

Papers Support Tribe

The town's newspapers have awakened to the pennant chances of the Tribesmen so much so as to urge local citizenry, in front page editorials, to wire and write individual players that the home folks are behind 'em.

World series contests are being conducted in the newspapers, too, and extra space is being given to Indian games and to those of the closest contenders, Chicago, Detroit and New York.

Ticket reservations are being accepted, but not urged, and kept on file for the final word. Local bigwigs are pushing the merits of the town's No. 1 baseball broadcaster, Jack Graney, former Indian outfielder, to air the series.

Hotels are gauging their capacities, parking lot owners are going to sleep with smiles in anticipation of what may be an all-Ohio world series, for the Cincinnati Reds are out in front by a comfortable margin.

One thing is certain about the pennant outcome. If the Indians win, they will be among the most unpopular of all loop champions. This is because of their wigwam difficulties which have earned for them the brand of "cry babies" in other cities and brought down considerable criticism from baseball fans in general.

Feller Big Star

The Tribe's chances are good. The team is the favorite at the moment.

A great pitching staff, the best in the league, plus some sparkling infield play by a rookie second base combination, are given as the big reasons for the Indian showing this year.

In Bobby Feller, youthful speedball ace, the Tribe has the outstanding pitcher in baseball today. In Al Milnar and Al Smith they have two of the five leading twirlers in the circuit. The rookies, Ray Mack at second and Lou Boudreau at short, are ranked high among major league infielders, although they are up for their first full season. Rollie Hemsley's catching has been an inspiration all year. The Indian batting is nothing to brag about, but a few of the boys are over the .300 mark.

20 Years Ago

It's been 20 years since the Cleveland baseball team has won a pennant. That was in 1920, when Tris Speaker piloted the team to a league victory and then a world series triumph over the Brooklyn Dodgers. Some old time fans may recall the Cleveland lineup of those days. The pitching stars were Stan Coveleskie, Guy Morton and Jim Bagby. The Tribe had a great shortstop in Ray Chapman, but shortly before the season ended he was killed in an accident involving a thrown ball by Carl Mays. Joey Sewell, a rookie, was brought up. Bill Wamby was the second baseman. Graney and Elmer Smith were outfielders with Speaker. Steve O'Neill was the catcher.

Most of the Tribe's remaining games are at home. A few are on the road. Experts look to the last few days of the season when the Detroit club engages the Indians in what may easily be the world series of the American league.

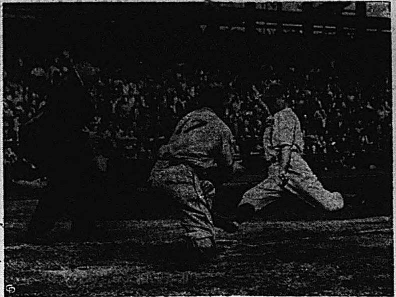
BOXING VETERAN DIES

Oxford, England (CP)—George Morley, "professor" of boxing at Oxford University for many years, died recently in Radcliffe Infirmary here at the age of 86.



"LIPPY" GOES ON AN OUTING

Maybe "Lippy" Leo Durocher didn't think it was any picnic though when he was called out at the plate in the fourth inning of the first game of a doubleheader between his Dodgers and the New York Giants at Ebbets Field. Umpire Campbell is making the decision. Dodger manager was out attempting to score from third on Walker's grounder to Giant Pitcher Schumacher who made the putout at the plate after Durocher had been run down in a "trap play." Leo was seen to be smiling broadly forgetting the "outing," during intermission, and good reason he had for the Brooks took another sock at the high-flying Giants of other seasons, trimming them 4-1.

NEWARK BEARS ASSURED PLACE IN THE PLAYOFFS

Steve Peek Hurls 12th Victory of Season by Defeating Giants 6-1

Tailend Toronto Leafs Pull Surprise by Defeating Buffalo Bisons Twice

(By The Associated Press)

Steve Peek, 26-year-old righthander of the Newark Bears, gained his 12th straight victory last night by halting Jersey City Giants, 6-1, to assure the Bears of a place in the International League playoffs. It was his 13th win of the year against four losses and advanced Newark to within 6 1-2 games of the league-leading Rochester Red Wings who were idle.

Bears backed up Peek's six-hit hurling with an 11-hit assault on Hugh East and Harry Feldman. Bud Methny paced the Bruins with a double and three singles in five trips to the plate.

The Little Giants managed to gain ground in the playoff race despite the defeat, however, when the third-place Baltimore Orioles dropped both ends of a twin bill to Syracuse.

Chiefs Come From Behind

The Chiefs came from behind with three runs in the ninth inning to take the opener, 5-4, and then coasted to a 3-1 triumph in the nightcap behind the four-hit pitching of Jack Tising. Tommy Hughes started the first game for Baltimore, but was chased in the fourth, and Italo Chelini finished. Goody Rosen's two-run homer in the first inning of the second game provided Syracuse with the margin of victory.

The tailend Toronto Maple Leafs furnished another surprise by sweeping a doubleheader with Buffalo, 3-1 and 9-3. Earl Cook tried the iron-man act for the Bisons and suffered his seventh and eighth losses of the season. He bowed to Jim Walkup in the seven inning twilight encounter, although the herd outhit the Leafs, 8-6. Tommy Heath's home run capped a three-run outburst off Cook in the second game, and Pete Angell went to the rescue when three more runs crossed the plate in the third.

Cricket Summary Jibe at Germany

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Britain's sense of humor remains unimpaired by the incessant German air raids and Hitler's threatened invasion. When France fell a group of Stock Exchange cricket enthusiasts worked out a scorecard of Hitler's conquests in the form of an account of a cricket match—Germany vs The Rest.

Here it is:—

Germany vs The Rest
A. U. Stria, run out	0
C. Slovakia, c and b Hitler	0

AS GOLFING STAR VARDON WAS TOPS

Walter Hagen Concedes Englishman First Place in His Estimate

New York, Sept. 5 (CP)—Looking back over a quarter-century of golf Walter Hagen singles out Harry Vardon of England as the most accurate player he ever saw.

Hagen's career covers most of the years since golf has been an international sport. He has seen all of the great shooters, and beaten most of them at one time or other.

"Vardon should top any all-star list," Hagen said. "He had marvelous accuracy with both woods and irons. If he could have putted, few would ever have beaten him.

"You have to think about the others," he said "There've been some fine players.

"For his length, and accuracy, too, Sammy Snead must be chosen as the driver. Gosh, he hits 'em a mile, doesn't he? And Bob Jones for the brassie. He was a steady, and the greatest of the amateurs. No one has ever been able to handle a spoon any better than Paul Runyan. He's short off the tee, you know, and has to hit a lot of those spoons.

"No one could make a mashie behave like Vardon. I like Jock Hutchinson and Chick Evans among the older players for the short irons. Jock was particularly good with the spade and Chick with the niblick. Dick Metz and Jimmy Demaret of the youngsters are just about as good.

All-Stars Clip New York Giants With 16-7 Win

New York, Sept. 5—(AP)From the surprise package the Eastern All-Stars unloaded on the New York professional Giants' proud, unbeaten exhibition record, the chief "hangover" left today was that Press clippings mean as much in football performance as the style of a player's haircut.

For the Eastern All-Stars presented a "star-less" squad of gridmen before a crowd of 39,405 at the Polo Grounds last night and they wound up with an impressive 16 to 7 victory over the Giants, who never had been whipped before in eight tussles with all-star squads from coast to coast.

Sparked by Merlyn Condit, a southpaw passer from Carnegie Tech, the Stars scored one touchdown in the second period, a field goal in the third and another six-pointer in the fourth to roll up their total. Condit produced nine points, six on a 92-yard run.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 5—(AP)—Cashing of profits in today's Stock Market served occasionally to slow down the rally which got under way late Wednesday but failed to dent leaders to any great extent.

While early advances running to 2 points or so were cut or erased in the forenoon, trends again hardened near the fourth hour. Dealings slackened after a fast start.

Stocks in front the greater port of the day were U.S. Steel, U.S. Rubber, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Kennecott, Chrysler, Allied Chemical and General Electric.

Backward were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Pennsylvania, Sears Roebuck, Dupont and Union Carbide.

Canadian issues moved forward in a body. Hiram Walker gained one point and Canadian Pacific, Dome and Lake Short Mines and Distilleries gained fractions. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, advanced 1 1-2 points.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 5—(CP)— The Toronto stock market rested behind plus signs at noon, following a week of rising prices. Interest centres in the industrials and these advanced 1.71 in the index, reflecting the bullish New York sentiment. Golds and some of the cheaper base metals encountered profit-taking and they slipped off a little from the day's high but the senior base metals made new tops on the news that the New York copper price advanced.

Investment buying was apparent in the strength of the higher-price preferred issues, including Massey-Harris, Dominion Woollens, Great Lakes Paper and Simpsons. Bell Telephone firmed 2 1-2 to 155.

Smelters advanced 1 3-4 to 38 and Nickel at 39 was up a fraction while Noranda firmed 1 1-2 to 57 1-2. Buffalo-Ankerite, O'Brien, Wright-Hargreaves, McKenzie and Gunnar were strong spots in the golds.

Western oil gainers included Royalite, Calgary and Edmonton and Pacific Petroleum.

R.C.A.F. Squadron Gives Nazi Raiders Fine Lacing, 3 Downed

Met Same Number of Enemy Planes — Took Only Two Minutes to Give Knockout Blow

MANY CLOSE ESCAPES

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A Royal Canadian Air Force Fighter Station, Somewhere in England, Sept. 5 (CP Cable)—Canada's Hurricane Fighter Squadron patrolled its "beat" on the fringe of London today with new zip and confidence after meeting an even number of Goering's raiders and giving them a severe lacing.

A dozen scrappy members of the R.C.A.F. unit commanded by Squdn.-Ldr. Ernest McNab of Regina caught the same number of Nazi fighters and fighter-bombers "just where we wanted them" in a brush three miles over Southern England and took less than two minutes to deliver a knockout blow.

Splinters Fall Like Confetti

Two and maybe three German planes were destroyd. Most of the others felt the sting of the Canadians' fire and airplane, splinters fell like confetti. They quickly turned tail for home.

A blond young skylarker from London, Ont., who shot down one Nazi in flames and clipped the wings of another, returned to the station with the main brace of one wing shattered by Messerschmitt cannon fire.

The other certain kill went to a veteran flier who is a member of a prominent Montreal family of financiers. Two bursts from his eight guns caught the Messerschmitt jaguar "smack in the belly." It fell like a fiery comet.

The toll taken by McNab's men boosted the total bag for the 18 days they have been in action to at least 10 enemy planes definitely destroyed and about half as many probably destroyed.

Two of the Canadians have had planes shot away from them.

Flying-Officer Bill Sprenger of Montreal escaped by parachute "when my instrument board started exploding in my face." He figures a cannon shell burst in his cockpit.

Controls Shot Away.

Sprenger was chasing a couple of Jerrys at 20,000 feet when another popped him from behind and shot away his controls. His Hurricane had plummeted a mile before he slipped out of the emergency hatch.

"Took me seven minutes to drift down," he said. "Only that morning I'd read of Germans shooting an English flier through the heart while he was parachuting.

"I was plenty relieved when two of our boys circled round me and convoyed me to earth."

When Flying-Officer Vaughn Corbett of Montreal kissed his flaming plane goodbye his chute harness fouled and he fell a mile head first. While still about a mile above the earth he righted himself and landed smack in a hospital ground.

Landed Without Harm.

Flying-Officer Eric Beardmore, still another Montrealer, thought he was in for it when two Germans "got on my neck, shot away a square foot of my tail and made my left wing look like a piece of Swiss cheese."

His elevator control and air speed indicator were gone but he landed without being hurt.

"There's nothing holds together like those Hurricanes," he said. "So long as your engine is turning over you can land."

Squadron-Leader McNab said his boys have already shown "they are a gang of real thoroughbreds" and the way they are standing up to the stiff test makes it obvious they are.

They are at action station for four hours, subject to half-hour call-up for the next four, then back to the station poised for immediate action for another four. The squadron's doctor, Capt. W. D. Rankin of Halifax, says the "unit's health is high-pulse normal".

No Sign of Nerves

There is no sign of nerves as the fliers loll about the station, writing letters home, reading, spinning tales, and sipping soft drinks—and I mean soft drinks.

At present they get a day's leave after four days' duty. They may get more shortly. Six young flying officers of the R.C.A.F. army cooperation squadrons are over here "sweating for action" as one of them put it and their request for transfer to the fighter squadron was granted.

They have had a thorough course of training at an R.A.F. fighter station since leaving the army cooperation units.

"They'll be up there banging away at the Nazis any day now.

Rome Communique

Rome, Sept. 5 (AP)—The text of Thursday's Italian High Command communique:—

"Three British cruisers and two destroyers navigating off the Algerian coast were violently bombed by our planes. Two cruisers were hit with large calibre bombs, and big flames were seen on the deck of one of them.

"In the Aegean Sea, a large enemy convoy escorted by naval forces was sighted and pursued during the day of Sept. 3. With the purpose of protecting this convoy at any cost, enemy naval and air forces attempted to attack our naval bases in the Aegean in the early hours before dawn yesterday. The attack was carried out by two air formations on the fields at Gadurra and Marizza, where two of our planes were struck on the ground, and by a naval formation which bombarded Scarpanto, causing slight damage to civilian dwellings and wounding some among the population. The intervention of our pursuit planes and anti-aircraft batteries soon repulsed the attack, shooting down seven enemy planes. The crews of three planes, totalling eight persons, were captured.

"With the enemy repulsed, our air forces began a counter-attack.

"Between 7 a.m. and 5.30 p.m., five successive bombing actions were launched on the enemy formations. Despite the intervention of enemy pursuit planes and anti-aircraft defences, four ships were seriously hit and damaged, and five pursuit planes shot down. Two of our planes failed to return. Some were injured aboard others.

"At the same time our mas (motor torpedo boats) hurled themselves on the naval formations, successfully attacking an enemy cruiser and two destroyers in the straight of Caso. One mas failed to return.

(There was no comment from the British Admiralty on the above claims).

"In North Africa there was intensive activity by both air forces. Enemy air raids caused light damage, one death and injuries to 11. Four enemy planes were shot down, two of them by anti-aircraft defence. All our planes returned.

"In East Africa during the enemy air raids on the field of Javello, a Hampden plane (British bomber) was shot down. One of our bombing formations seriously hit an English steamship in the Red Sea."

(The R.A.F. in Cairo has not yet reported on yesterday's activities).

TAKES DRIVING LESSON

Eugene, Ore., Sept. 5 (AP).—William B. Anderson handed over $4.77 but the robber didn't stop there. Climbing behind the steering wheel of Anderson's car he forced him to give a driving lesson. After learning how to shift gears and other details he drove off—without hesitation.

PREMIER PREDICTS

Turning to Balkan and European developments, Mr. Churchill said "no one can say how far Herr Hitler's empire will extend before this war is over. But I have no doubt it will pass away swiftly — perhaps more swiftly—than did Napoleon's army, although of course without any of its glitter or glory."

Great Deal Stronger In Year.

"We are going to be a good deal stronger next year than we are now, although we are quite strong enough for the immediate work in hand."

He said Germany's need "to obtain a decision is very great" and warned the House that Germany should be able to "magnify and multiply" her attacks during this month.

He spoke of August as a "real fighting month".

"The Germans have made a very substantial and important effort to gain the mastery and they have certainly put forth a large proportion of their total air strength than we have found it necessary up to the present to employ against them. Their attempts to dominate the Royal Air Force and our AA (anti-aircraft) defences by daily attacks have proved very costly to them," he said.

Even if the air attacks are doubled or trebled, the prime minister said, he believed the nation "can stand it" and "emerge from it stronger in the air than we were before".

Of the Balkans, Mr. Churchill said he had always thought that southern parts of Dobruja, which Rumania is ceding, ought to be restored to Bulgaria, and he had never been happy about the way Hungary was treated after the last war.

He disclosed that Britain had "almost doubled" the strength of the fleet in the eastern Mediterranean by the addition of "some of our most powerful vessels and that although the movements were known to the Italians we are unmolested."

"We must expect heavy fighting in the middle east before very long," he warned the House.

"No one must suppose that the danger of invasion is past," he further warned, and the "greatest vigilance is necessary to save our lives and our cause." But he said Britain was "very much better off than a few months ago" and if the problem of invading Britain was difficult in June it "has become far more difficult in September."

He said Britain had sent "a continuous stream of convoys with reinforcements" to the middle east and "we have every intention of maintaining our position there at the utmost strength."

After reviewing the situation in the middle east, Mr. Churchill declared that "in this way both at home and abroad we shall persevere along our course however the winds may blow."

1,075 Civilians Killed in August

Disclosing 1,075 civilians were killed in air raids in August, he said: "Our sympathy goes out to the wounded and to those who are bereaved but no one can pretend that out of 45,000,000 people these are losses which, if they are multiplied two or three times as they may be, would be serious compared to the majestic world issues which are at stake.

"Apart from minor or repairable injuries, about 800 houses have been destroyed or damaged beyond repair. This is out of a total in this island of 13,000,000 houses.

Favored Re-Examination

Mr. Churchill said he favored re-examination of the question of insurance against air raid damage particularly for the "small man."

"The actual figures of British plane losses which we have published daily for these two months (July and August) amount to 558," he said. "Our loss in pilots is, of course, happily very much less. I do not know whether Herr Hitler believes the truth of his own published figures (laughter). I hope he does.

He said the German claims of British aircraft destroyed during the month of July and August totalled the "surprising figure of 1921 British aircraft destroyed.

"It is rather like figures we have heard about our fleet which has had many ships sunk many times over."

CANADIAN

Met by Official Party

A few minutes later an Admiralty launch carrying the official welcoming party raced towards the leading transport. It was a distinguished group including Geoffrey Shakespeare, under-secretary of state for the Dominions, Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, general officer commanding the Canadian 2nd Division; Brig. C. B. Price, Maj.-Gen. P. J. Montague, Rear-Admiral Arthur Bromley of the Dominions office, Maj. G. B. Johnston, representing High Commissioner Vincent Massey, and a large number of senior staff officers from Canadian Military Headquarters and the 2nd Division.

They visited each ship in turn, scaling shaky "Jacob's ladders" while the men lining the rails sang and cheered. Once on deck, the greeters mingled with the officers and men, congratulating them on their safe crossing and inquiring about their welfare.

Informally Welcomed

From the bridge on the quarterdeck of the ship carrying the commander of the convoy, Mr. Shakespeare informally welcomed the contingent on behalf of the United Kingdom Government and "everybody in the Old Land."

He congratulated the Royal Navy for having brought yet another convoy safely to port. The mere fact that a large force of men, along with a vital shipment of arms, equipment and supplies from the inexhaustible storehouse of North America, could cross the ocean was proof that Britain is not a fortress but a powerful nation capable at all times of keeping open the communications of the empire.

"You have arrived when the battle of Britain and civilization is just about to begin," he said. "We are certainly glad to see you and personally I feel sorry for the enemy you may meet. You, on the other hand, will find that our chins are up, our shoulders braced, and the Royal Air Force on top of the world. May I wish you God speed and good hunting."

General Odlum Greeted

Introduced to the officers and other ranks by Gen. Montague as "the man who will lead you into battle proudly and efficiently," Gen. Odlum was greeted by waves of cheers and applause.

After expressing thanks for the warmth and sincerity of the greeting, Gen. Odlum addressed himself direct to his men.

"You have come here to join your comrades equipped with three vital qualities—health, strength and spirit," he said.

"I hope that we will be called on to make some sacrifices and that we will not go back until we have accomplished our purpose of defeating the enemy. We from Canada will do our duty to the limit and, what is more, we will defend Canada and Britain not, on the soil of the Dominion or the Motherland, but on German soil."

Speaking for High Commissioner Massey, Mr. Johnston declared he had never seen a finer lot of fighting men and expressed confidence that they would uphold the honor and traditions of their fellow countrymen who fought so bravely in the last war.

The commander of an eastern brigade addressed the men briefly in French.

Eager to Get Ashore

After lunch, which was served on a transport carrying scars of the Dunkirk evacuation and the Norway expedition, the party visited the other ships. They dodged along decks cluttered with rifles, kitbags, haversacks and heavier baggage waiting to be loaded onto tenders.

Everywhere the boys were lolling about, reading, playing cards and deck games, or writing home. There was a general eagerness to get ashore as soon as possible.

"Most of us have been training for almost a year," remarked Sapper R. B. Savage of Fredericton, N.B., "and we are anxious to get down to business. Don't you think we look healthy enough to take good care of Fritzy if he wants to start something?"

Gunner A. Betrand of Toronto, resting on crutches, stood nearby. Just before the unit was due to sail his ankle was fractured and he was told he must stay behind. Betrand, however, managed to "wangle" his way aboard and said he expected to be out with his chums in a week or so.

Bands Serenade Troops

While chatting with a group of boys from the west, Gen. Montague recognized a familiar face. It was Sapper R. H. Stokes of Winnipeg who had been a messenger to the former judge in the Manitoba law courts.

While the men were waiting for the order to take off for shore, regimental bands serenaded the company with the latest popular numbers and rollicking marches.

Once on terra firma, officers and men alike appeared to have but one aim requiring urgent attention. They flocked about the small crowd on the dockside asking how they could rush off a cable to tell the folks back home "everything okay." They were obliged to defer that task, however, when non-commissioned officers herded the men into their railway compartments for the long journey to camp.

As the trains pulled out, men lining the rails of a berthed luxury liner let out a chorus of war whoops. "Give 'em a whack for me," and "don't send up the balloon until we get there," were among the parting sallies heard in the medley and crossfire of shouts.

An Eastern Canadian Port — Canadian troops landed safely in England today, according to Honourable J. L. Ralston, Minister of National Defence.

On Canadian soil only a short time before, these troops had been whisked by train from far-flung corners of the Dominion to waiting transports at an eastern Canadian port. Engineers and artillerymen, bronzed from weeks spent in training camps, in fit condition to fill out the ranks of the 2nd Division of the Canadian Active Service Force, formed a substantial part of the contingent.

Units of the Royal Canadian Air Force and a large contingent of nursing sisters were included in the movement.

Shortly before their departure, Honourable Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for the Navy, called on the troops aboard ship. He wished them well on their trip and bade the men of the Navy to take good care of them while the troops cheered him.

Train After Train

Train after train steamed into the Canadian port to unload their cargoes of fighting men and nurses. With little pause the troops followed regimental bands up the gangways and into the large ocean liners waiting to take them on their long voyage.

These were strange surroundings to many of the khaki-clad youngsters. Startled eyes, never before privileged to gaze upon these huge luxury liners, opened wide to stare along far-stretching decks. Rich interiors and gleaming fixtures were a revelation. Many a booted foot tread softly, almost timidly on thick carpets.

On orders to fall out, eager soldiers scrambled in haste to ferret out secrets hidden between bulging hulls and decks. Exploration parties set out in all directions, with conversations mostly limited to monosyllables such as: "Gosh, Golly and Gee!"

Ships Minutely Inspected

Peace - time salons, smoking lounges, dancing halls converted now into mess rooms, canteens, sleeping quarters and orderly rooms are minutely inspected. Smiling tars become the object of admiring glances as they swaggeringly swab decks, coil heavy ropes, or twist dials and study gauges in the engine rooms.

The loading shoot, running deep down into the ship, claimed a big crowd of interested soldiers, who watched great gobs of freight, flour, canned goods, Canadian apples and a variety of equipment disappear into the hold.

Then the moment, longed for by many as the starting point of a great adventure, came. Ropes were cast off and the ships eased away from the docks. Lusty cheers went up, while bands played and the little harbour tugs chugged, chugged, pulling weighty loads out to sea.

Cutting through chilly off-shore winds in the wake of powerful iron-clad watch-dogs, their wide bows dipping gracefully into rising seas, the stately ships, decks jammed with waving, singing Canadian soldiers, plowed eastward and faded from view as they merged with the haze of the Atlantic horizon.

SCHOOL SCHEDULE

"The German officers have arrogantly requisitioned nearly all the public buildings, especially those best equipped. They have chased all the sick from the civil and military hospitals and have occupied our finest schools.

"Yesterday the Primary classes were to begin. The children arrived before the doors of their schools to find them occupied. They returned home crying...."

Youths Forced Into Labor Camps

But that is only in France. In Czecho-Slovakia children's free schooldays ended two years ago. Now armies of Czech youth who normally would be preparing for examinations later in the year are in forced labor camps in Germany.

Documentary files kept in Paris before the French surrender showed that in the first year of German occupation in Czecho-Slovakia 60,000 Czech and 40,000 Moravian and Slovak youths, many of them University students of Medicine, Law and Philosophy were sent into Germany to work on the land. Thousands of others left their schools to escape to France and then to England. Some of them, at 17 years became air pilots to fight against Germany.

Girls no longer are allowed higher education in Czecho-Slovakia. In a country which had 80 women members of Parliament, 1,500 women doctors and several women Senators, in which girls might even become judges and ambassadors, girls may no longer attend High School.

So too in Poland where the great University of Cracow, one of the oldest in the world, functions only in part. Of its professors some 160 were put in concentration camps and the student body was scattered. Armies of them till the soil at Nazi bidding.

Schools Destroyed

In Holland, Belgium, Denmark and Norway schools have been destroyed, educational systems disrupted and teachers driven into exile.

In Belgium and Luxembourg the Collegiates and Universities have been emptied and thousands of students have taken to the refugee roads on bicycles. Many of them fear their return to their own country for Germany has announced they must work in the fields, forests and factories to support the Nazi war machine.

Once more in Alsace-Lorraine, as after other wars between France and Germany in which the Germans gained the upper hand, the "last lesson in French" has been taught.

And in the United Kingdom aggression has made itself felt in the school room. There classes are opening and carrying on amid the sounds of air raid sirens and British fighters battle raiding Nazi planes as children struggle with the three R's.

HUNGARIAN ARMY

The first unit of 2,000 men crossed into Transylvania at Kismarja at 7 a.m. (2 a.m. EDT) as vanguard for an occupying force of 80,000.

Horthy, wearing an admiral's uniform, formally accepted the city on behalf of Hungary in a square where jubilant Hungarians threw flowers until the principals stood knee-deep in roses.

Horthy issued this order of the day:

"Another part of the injustice of (the last war treaty of) Trianon has been recitified. Let us start to take over once again new parts of our 1,000-year old heritage.

"We bring liberation to our Hungarian brothers living for 22 years in chains in Transylvania and affection to those faithful to us within our borders.

"Keep this before your eyes as you start in name of God and country. Forward to the crest of the eastern Carpathians!"

The soldiers, who had been waiting near the frontier, began moving with the first light of day. They crossed along a 150- mile line.

This was the first stage of an advance which will give Hungary 17,000 square miles of new territory and an additional population of 2,500,000 by Sept. 14 when the occupation of the territory ceded at Vienna under Rome-Berlin Axis direction is scheduled to be completed.

GERMAN AIR

ing lodged in trees. Houses were badly damaged but there were no serious casualties.

The mid-day raiders of London were met by an intense anti-aircraft fire and military sources said their bombs did no damage.

The bombs were dropped shortly after the all-clear signal was sounded for a 56-minute air raid alarm which began at 10 a.m. (4 a.m. EST).

During the warning period invading aircraft flew over the Thames Estuary, but dropped no bombs.

Rooftop watchers in London were unable to see the raiders.

Bursts of anti-aircraft gunfire and the sound of British fighters going into action were heard, however.

Machine-gun fire died away after a short period. The raiding force apparently was a small one and quickly was chased away. British fighters resumed their routine patrol of the skies.

During the alarm invading aircraft also were believed flying in the vicinity of a southwest town this afternoon.

The noise of airplane engines in the London area was heard only for a short time. The first craft were flying too high to be seen.

Parliament Committee Undisturbed

A few minutes after the alarm was sounded people in London heard the roar of distant gunfire.

The Committee on Privileges of the House of Commons met to discuss the detention of Captain Archibald H. M. Ramsay, a member of parliament, under the Defence Regulations just as the sirens wailed.

Chairman Clement R. Attlee decided to carry on, and Capt. Ramsay was brought before the committee.

Anti-aircraft fire scattered formations of raiding planes over the Thames estuary.

The raiders came back at a great height over a southeast coast town, but moved off toward the sea when British fighters took after them, no bombs fell on the town.

Four Messerschmitt 109s flying in pairs attacked a balloon barrage on their way to sea.

The leading plane shot down a balloon; its companion missed and sped low over the sea as it ran into heavy fire from the ground.

The second pair dived even lower, but failed to score a hit on the big sausages.

Brian Aherne and Rita Hayworth co-stars of the new romantic-comedy "The Lady in Question," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. Irene Rich and Glenn Ford are also featured in the important cast.

CHAPTER EIGHT

"How's the hero this morning? Hope he feels better than I do. The top of my head's coming right off."

"I haven't seen him. The Duttons took Elsie in. Mrs. Dutton's a darling."

Hugh agreed: "Met her last night. At Sonia's shindig. She's swell ..." And as he spoke, Hugh knew he'd said the wrong thing.

Suddenly Judith realized that she could not bear Hugh's scrutiny. His eyes were too sharp, he knew her too well...Hugh saw a new shadow in her deep violet eyes... So she'd finally heard the story .... For weeks Hugh had wondered how long it would be.

Poor kid! He felt a sudden rage at Aimes. What a fool Tex was!

Not that Lanning would admit he was in love with her. He just liked to be with her. He knew scores of pretty girls. Broadway was full of them. But to Judith he could talk, and he felt she listened to what he said. She was real.

When Tex was on his southern run, Hugh often took Judith to dinner. It had become a habit. He refused to admit she was becoming more and more necessary to him..

As for Judith, it never occurred to her for a moment that Hugh might be in love with her. He was Tex's friend, and hers. But today he was the last person in the world she wanted to meet. Just because he knew her so well. As for Hugh, he had an uncomfortable sense of guilt. He was afraid Judith might hold it against him, that he had not warned her about Sonia. Women were queer that way.

So both of them were obviously relieved when their train was called.

"See you in New York next week, Judith. Keep your chin up!" He squeezed both her hands and left.

Judith had little trouble in identifying Mrs. Royce. She turned out to be what Judith had hoped, a tower of strength. The car didn't move fast enough for Judith on the trip back to the Duttons. She was sure Tex would be there. If she could see him just for a moment, to reassure herself, to make her see how silly she was, everything would be all right.

But Aimes wasn't there. He had come, and gone on to the airport.

Lee reported Tex had a radio date for the afternoon, a conference with Dudley, a lot of other things.

"So that's that."

Judith forced herself to turn her attention to the situation at hand. It had been twenty-four hours since she had either seen or talked with her fast-flying husband.

However, she hoped to be free to go back to the hotel early to see if she could find Tex. But now there was no hope of that. Things had become more complicated.

The doctor had come, ordered Elsie back to bed, said she must stay there until the party left for Oklahoma the following day. For Elsie had made only one request: "I want to take Marvin back home."

She reiterated her request to Lem and to Lee while she waited for Judith to come back. It was not until after luncheon was served to the five of them, that they tried to make plans.

"What about Marvin's insurance?" his aunt, Mrs. Royce asked.

Lee shrugged: "No use asking about a flier's insurance. He hasn't any."

The poor women looked horrified. These two young men were the first fliers she had ever known outside her niece's husband.

"Is flying so dangerous?"

Lee grinned: "Insurance agents are just not air minded, that's all! They don't consider us racing pilots a good risk."

"I'll take Elsie home with me—that is until her baby comes. We haven't much, but we can manage."

There had been no word from Marvin's half-brother. Said Judith: "Now the problem is, where are we going to get money?"

Judith had $50 with her, Lee had $72, and Lem had $35. Not enough!

"The boys will just have to kick in, that's all," Lee said. Judith vetoed that idea.

"It's a waste of time. Most of them are gone. If they were here it would be simple. But you know we'd never collect. They're scattered all over."

The next thing was to find Tex. They stopped at a drug store and Judith tried the hotel without hope. Finally she rang Mr. Dudley's room, hoping Tex might be with his boss. Dudley was there.

"It's Judith Aimes, Mr. Dudley. I've got to find Tex. It's important."

"Anything wrong?"

"No, only we've got to have some money. Do you know where he is?"

"He said something about seeing Hillery Jameson this afternoon but you can't disturb him there."

"No." Jameson was an important airplane accessory manufacturer.

"Where are you now?" he added. Judith told him "You better come on down here. I'll have a check for you."

Judith could have cheered with joy. She went back to the boys beaming. They agreed that Dudley was certainly a "white guy." But when they reached the hotel, Lem and Lee refused to see Dudley.

"He's your husband's boss. You go on. You'll find us in the bar."

The door of Dudley's room was open when Judith came to it. He was sitting at his desk, his check book open.

"How much do you need Judith?" he asked.

"I think $500 should be enough."

"You can have more if you want it."

He wrote the check, tore it out and handed it to her. She folded it, saying, "You're kind."

Dudley smiled "Shall I tell you something? It wasn't so long ago I was flying racing ships myself. Now I've got an office job. I figure I got the breaks."

For the first time Judith noticed how young Dudley looked No older than Tex. She'd hardly been conscious of him as an individual before, he seemed a kind of omnipotent power who could get things done...a snappy executive.

"I figure I might be in Marvin's place today except that I was one of the lucky ones. I'm living on borrowed time. This is my way of thanking a kind fate."

Judith, listening, knew that Dudley meant what he said.

"You won't be able to get that cashed now. The banks are closed. I'll go down to the desk with you. The hotel will cash it."

So when Judith finally went to collect Lee and Lem in the bar, she had the money in hand. They went back to their round of bill paying.

It was five o'clock when the boys dropped Judith at the hotel. Judith had a sheaf of neatly receipted bills folded in her handbag.

"We'll see you and Tex tonight, Judith," Lee said as they left. "He'll need bucking up."

When Judith walked into the hotel lobby, the first person she met was Mary Hartwig. Mary was an old friend of Tex's. She'd been flying for years. Judith was fond of her.

"I've been looking everywhere for you. Come on along and have tea."

Judith hesitated. She dreaded the thought of the hotel room if Tex was not there. She called on the house phone and there was no answer. So she joined Mary.

"Come on, there are some of the girls I want you to meet. They're in the cafe. We just got through with our annual meeting."

That was more than Judith had bargained for, because she didn't feel up to meeting any strangers tonight. But it was too late to protest. They were in the dining room and some of the girls at the table were already hailing Judith.

There were a couple of girls Judith did not know, including a pretty blond girl in pale blue woolen suit across the table.

"Do you know Sonny Winthrop, Judith?" Mary was saying.

Judith managed to say something pleasant. She was suddenly conscious of looking her worst. Shiny nose. Judith's hair was stringing down under her hat. Sonny jumped into the breach with, "I'm so glad to meet you, Mrs. Aimes. I admire your husband so much." Judith felt the girls stare with acute interest.

CHAPTER NINE

"We missed you last night, Judith, It didn't seem the same with you not there." Mary was speaking — Mary who refused to believe evil of anybody. If she heard any gossip, she'd refuse to listen.

"I was sorry that you couldn't come. It was a lovely party, wasn't it, girls?" Sonia's voice tinkled!

Judith, forcing herself to look at Sonia, admitted she was everything everybody said: beautiful, charming. Conscious of her own appearance, Judith suffered agonies. She felt the curious eyes of some of the girls. She forced herself to talk. Why had she come? Mary was such an old stupid, bless her heart! It would never occur to her things might be difficult.

Sonia, taking Judith's measure, decided she was dowdier than she had imagined at first.

"But you're coming tonight, of course," Sonia was saying. "It's going to be very grand. Tex promised you would."

"It's terribly kind of you," Judith managed. "But it's impossible. You see Tex is pretty upset over Marvin Stone. He won't want to go out."

"He'll want to come, I'm sure."

Judith could have slapped her.

"Besides, Jameson is pretty important. Tex should know him better. He can do things for Tex."

Judith knew Sonia flew for Jameson's company sometimes. He had backed her cross-country race. The proprietory tone in the girl's voice exasperated Judith.

It was almost six when Judith finally escaped from Mary and the girls. Her husband, Tex, had not come. She did not even bother to turn on the light in their room, just threw herself on the bed. Her head ached badly and her heart worse.

She must have dozed off for it was dark when she heard Tex's key in the door. He did not realise at first that she was there, for he did not switch on the light either. An electric fan, flashing across the street, lighted the room suddenly and he saw her on the bed. Maybe it was only her fancy, but she thought she saw a fleeting look of impatience when he knew that she was there.

"Darling!" Judith's voice was tender as he sat down on the bed.

Tex put both arms around her and she could feel his shoulders shake. She smoothed his hair, kissed the top of his head. It was a long time before he regained his composure. The room was very quiet. Then he began to talk.

"It was awful. I saw him go, Judith. I'd turned the pylon and looked back. He was flying a sweet race. Then I saw his wing crumble and he hit." Tex's voice choked. "Then the flames."

"I know, dear." Judith tried to soothe him.

"I dont know how I got around the next pylon. I kicked the ship up too sharp and everything went black. I thought I was a goner, too." He stood up impatiently. "It's a crazy game, Judith. I'll never race again. I've lost my nerve. He's the only guy in the world I cared much about!"

Without waiting for her to speak he went over and switched on a light, took a bottle from his traveling bag, poured himself a drink, stepped into the bathroom to get ice water. When he came back his face was a mask. He was himself again.

"How's Elsie tonight?"

"She seemed better. The doctor put her to bed."

Suddenly talking seemed difficult. She wanted to tell Tex how sorry she was for the quarrel of the day before. But somehow she couldn't; he seemed very far away from her now. He talked on:

"I want to forget it. If I hadn't got stiff last night, I'd have gone nuts! It's all my fault. I shouldn't have let him get in that race, not with his ship!" He walked over to the window. "I think I'll start selling insurance!"

Judith was afraid he was going to pieces again but he added in a muffled voice: "I've seen a lot of 'em go but Marvin was the best ... better than I am. I don't deserve the breaks I get!"

Judith stretched out her hand. "Come over here and sit beside me."

He came, but he seemed suddenly to resent the fact she had seen him with his defenses down. They remained there in silence which became more and more painful until Judith was glad when the telephone rang. Tex answered. He talked in monosyllables. Judith was certain it was Sonia. When he hung up, he turned to her impatiently.

"Lord, I forgot! We've got to go out to a dinner party tonight. Some brass hats of the town!"

Judith protested. "We can't, Tex. Not tonight!" She couldn't bear that.

"Got to. I promised."

"You go. That will be all right."

The thought of dressing, sitting through interminable courses, talking to strange people, it was horrible.

"I just told them I'd bring you." There was a defiant set to Tex's chin which Judith knew so well.

"I can't do it, I can't." Judith was firm.

"I tell you, we've got to. It's being given for us. Sonny Winthrop arranged it...Jameson's giving it."

Judith still held out. "They'll understand. They know how much Marvin meant to you.

"What's that got to do with it? What do you want to do, stay here in this room and just stare at each other? I can't stand it I tell you. I've got to do something. I'd go nuts here!"

The words cut. She got up slowly. "All right."

She went to the clothes closet, got out her evening frock. She'd go. She'd look her best. If that's the way Sonia wanted it, that's the way it would be. If it was a declaration of war, Judith made up her mind she would fight. Tex was worth it! ...Was he?

KING CAROL BOWS

Where once he ruled in the manner of a mediaeval monarch, Carol today held merely such powers as the right to hand out medals, coin money, pardon criminals and lay cornerstones.

The Carol-Antonescu bargain was reached about the time that the vanguard of 80,000 Hungarian soldiers planted their banners in Transylvania, the province which Rumania won in the last war settlement and about half of which Hungary regained at Vienna last week with the backing of Germany and Italy.

Out of the all-night conference in Carol's heavily guarded palace—where shots were fired Tuesday night in a futile attempt at assassination—58-year-old Gen. Antonescu emerged today, victor in a virtual coup d'etat accomplished by words alone.

Close associates said the new dictator had fashioned his own pattern for rule, ignoring "the foolish trappings of monkey-like imitations."

One of the "general's first acts after taking oath as premier at dawn was to order the arrest of Gen. Bangliu who, as chief of gendarmes, supervised the mass execution of the Iron Guard assassins of former premier Armand Calinescu. Bangliu was Calinescu's brother-in-law.

At the same time Antonescu issued a proclamation which made clear that "persecution" of the Carol-outlawed Iron Guard, (a Fascist organization) would cease at once.

The proclamation implied that members of the Iron Guard who organized Monday night's putsch and were accused of the attempt to assassinate Carol would not be punished. Although not a member of the Iron Guard, Antonescu has its support.

In mid-morning Antonescu summoned all members of the outgoing Gigurtu cabinet to acquaint them with his plans and discuss the "state of the nation." An hour later he rushed to the German and Italian legations. At noon he issued orders regarding the Rumanian press and only then did he begin the actual work of forming his cabinet.

In Secret Session

In the long night session during which Carol and the new strong man were closeted behind locked doors, the king told his premier-designate he would abdicate if Mme. Lupescu had to be banished from Rumania, Rumanians said.

Whether he had dropped this attitude was not immediately clear.

Mme. Lupescu is bitterly opposed by both the Iron Guard and the army, organizations which have jumped to new power in the wake of popular opposition to Rumania's cession under direction of the Rome-Berlin axis of northern Transylvania to Hungary.

These events occurred swiftly today even as Hungarian troops were moving into their newly-won territory.

Government quarters expressed belief Carol might abdicate soon, especially in view of the fact he had restricted himself overnight to only minor powers. This was done upon insistence of Gen. Antonescu who, just out of imprisonment for his nationalistic political activity, had demanded that he himself assume supreme power.

Reports reached the capital that more than 150 Hungarian and Rumanian troops had been slain in armed clashes at the border town of Sighet as the Hungarians marched into northern Transylvania.

The reports said the fight began when a group of Rumanian peasants was attacked by Hungarian demonstrators.

Appeals For Calmness

Mobs of Rumanian peasants were reported armed with all manner of weapons.

In Cluj, two Rumanian students were reported killed in clashes with Hungarians, in retaliation for which five Hungarians were slain by Rumanian mobs.

Antonescu, upon assuming office, almost immediately appealed to the public to remain calm. He assured them Rumania would have "not only a new government but a new regime."

Referring to the loss of Transylvania—his own birthplace—he said: "We will not place a veil of forgetfulness over this, but instead a veil of justice."

Leaving the palace at dawn, the General told Rumanians they could expect an entire new basis for government along Nationalistic lies.

Carol himself had called the General—a long-time political enemy—simply to become Premier and stave off fast-developing trouble stemming from popular opposition to Rumania's cession of half of Transylvania to Hungary under direction of the Rome-Berlin axis.

But Gen. Antonescu remained adamant throughout the night in insisting he would accept authority only upon his own terms—the supreme power he was granted.

Carol reserved for himself only the right to confer decorations, commute the sentences of criminals, negotiate conventions with foreign governments, name diplomats, coin money and collect taxes.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was late for supper again and I hurry up ran in the house trying to remember if I had a good excuse and only remembering bum ones, and pop and ma were half ways through already, ma saying, Well I must say, what do you think this is, a civilized orderly home or the Potts Hotel?

Being sourcastic, and I said, Well G wizz, ma, jimminy, pop, I couldn't help it, I can tell you exactly what happened.

Of course, you always can, ma said, and pop said, If you have a bonna fide excuse we'll listen to it. After all we're still living in a democracy where even the humblest gets a fair trial ending in a comfortable prison cell with a quaint little window, and not a dictatorship where you get hussled off without a hearing to a bleak concentration camp with bob wire furniture. Do I understand you to suggest that you were unavoidably detained? he said.

Yes sir, some man was painting a lady's face on a big high wall, and I had to stay there and watch him, didn't I? I said, and ma said, If you did you're the only one in this populated world that knows why. Such a pretence of an excuse, she said.

Well now let's not be hasty, I think I see his point, pop said. He means that this painter at any moment might of been overcome by a devilish instinct to paint a mustash on the lady, so obviously it was Benny's duty to wait and watch so he could warn him that he was jeppardizing his job and the bread and butter of his innocent family, he said, and I said, G, pop, that's right, and it was a avvertizement for Venus Hair Remover, so that would of made it all the worse.

There, what did I tell you, he has an air tight hair tight alibi, pop said, and ma said, O, I might of known what would happen when 2 of a kind get together, sit down and eat your supper.

Wich I did feeling lucky.

CAROL ABDICATES; MICHAEL PROCLAIMED KING

Molotoff "Bread Baskets" Reported Dropped on London in Nazi Raids

Dictatorial Powers Given Antonescu Michael's First Act

King Carol Likely to Join Magda Lupescu, Who is at Istanbul Aboard Royal Yacht

Bucharest, Sept. 6 (AP)—It was said on high authority this afternoon that Rumania's abdicated king, Carol II, had left Bucharest this morning by special train for Constanza to board a royal yacht where Magda Lupescu was reported waiting for him.

Carol was believed by some to be enroute to Egypt. But there was no confirmation of this, and other observers supposed he might seek exile more distant from his dismembered Balkan realm—possibly some place in America. Switzerland had been suggested earlier as a place of refuge.

Bucharest, Sept. 6—(AP)—King Carol II surrendered to demands of Rumania's new military dictatorship today and abdicated in favor of his 18-year-old son Michael, who immediately was proclaimed his successor as figurehead monarch.

Michael's first act was to sign over full dictatorial powers to Gen. Ion Antonescu, the iron-willed army leader who had assumed supreme power only 24 hours before. Gen. Antonescu issued an order that the Rumanian army must take an oath of allegiance to King Michael by 6 p.m. (12 noon E.D.T.)

Carol, whose loves and escapades as Crown Prince earned him a worldwide reputation as a playboy, thus handed back the throne—this time stripped of its authority—to the son from whom he had taken it in a coup in 1930. Michael then had ruled for three years as the world-famed "boy king".

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Atmospheric reflections! There are light and heat in every corner of the earth, because of the atmosphere. The sides of objects toward the sun are most illuminated, of course; but the other sides away from the sun receive some light, reflected from other objects; also from the sky, which means from the atmosphere itself. Thus the atmosphere diffuses in a most comforting way the heat from the sun. In a most efficient and artistic way it also scatters the light, creating a hazy effect, softening lines and lessening shadows. If the atmosphere were absent or absolutely transparent the shadows would be sharp and black, with intense heat in the sunlight and great cold everywhere else.

Says News of Latest C. A. S. F.'s Arrival Bungled by Censor

London, Sept. 6 —(CP—Cable)— The Daily Express columnist William Hickey today described as "another military censorship muddle" the release of news of the latest Canadian contingent's arrival before Canadian newspapermen covering the event had reached London with their stories.

"It seems that on Wednesday night the Nazi radio alleged that a ship transporting Canadian troops here had been sunk," Hickey wrote. "To offset this 'someone' decided suddenly to release the news of the Canadians' safe arrival—thus in effect enormously lessening the propaganda value of the news since the main stories were still unwritten."

Hickey said: "It is time responsible Dominion correspondents were treated with some consideration."

U. S. ARMY, NAVY TO DIRECT WORK

$275,000,000 Federal - Aid Highway Work Will Benefit Both Services

Washington, Sept. 6—(AP)—The United States army and navy will direct nearly all of next year's $275,000,000 Federal-aid highway work.

John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, said today that in the interest of national defence he would concentrate the 1941-42 program on roads and bridges certified by the war and navy departments to be of strategic importance.

Emphasis, he said, would be placed on reinforcing routes for operation of heavy new mechanized and motorized military units.

Carmody said the army and navy road program probably would take almost all the $137,500,000 Federal-aid appropriated by Congress plus an equal amount from the States—a total of $275,000,000.

The program, he continued, resulted from a survey of defence highway needs conducted by the Public Roads Administration and State Highway directors at the request of President Roosevelt. He said the survey report will be presented to the White House, perhaps next week, and operations will begin as soon as Mr. Roosevelt signs the new Federal-aid Act and approves the survey.

LITTLE EVIDENCE SEEN OF DAMAGE IN BRITISH CITIES

Nationwide Survey by Assoc. Press Shows Negligible Damage in All Big Centres

Staff Permitted to Go Freely Anywhere They Wished and Photograph What They Pleased

By HUGH WAGNON
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 6 —(AP)— A nationwide survey by the Associated Press, completed today, shows that Britain is tending to "business as usual" despite the damage and death inflicted by German air raiders.

From the white cliffs of Dover to Land's End on the south coast, in the industrial midlands and the great harbors of Hull and Liverpool, Portsmouth and Southampton, Bristol and Plymouth, our staff were permitted to go freely to see for themselves the extent of damage—and the lack of it.

Dover, focal point of attack by air and artillery across the Channel, is surprisingly free of extensive destruction. The inhabitants are

Blenheim Bombers Can Take Punishment

London, Sept. 6—(CP)—Just how much punishment a Blenheim bomber of the Royal Air Force can withstand is instanced by the Air Ministry News Service which tells of one pilot plunging into the sea on a return flight from Germany. The report says:

"For a few moments the airscrew churned the water and the air intake scooped up gallons. Then the craft bounced upward and both engines picked up again. The pilot was able to fly the bomber safely home, although the airscrews were bent, the tail wheel missing, the bomb hatch stove in, and the shield, cowlings and air intake wrecked.

"Another Blenheim which had been flying over Rotterdam, meeting the full fire of ground defences, came back to its squadron station although the port oil tank was punctured, and the fuselage considerably damaged. Yet both engines functioned normally and the aircraft was back in service two days later.

FORM CORDON ABOUT BUSH

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 6 (CP) — Officials of the Burwash reformatory said today 20 guards from the jail farm have formed a cordon about a section of bush near Pickerel, Ont., where two prisoners who escaped yesterday are believed to be hiding.

The two men, William Kollogee, 22, and Charles Laws, were seen before dawn on railway tracks near Pickerel and fled into the rocky bush country.

Latest Contingent of Canadians Occupies Camp During Air Raid

Major Dispersal Operation Continued in Orderly Way Despite Nazi Bombs

A REAL THRILL

By EDWIN JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Sept. 6—(CP Cable)—To the accompaniment of the piercing wail of air raid sirens, the latest contingent of the Canadian 2nd Division marched into camp today, heads high and singing.

Although it was their first experience of an air raid alarm, they had already become aware of the fact that they are now in the active theatre of war, where death falls from the skies on soldiers and civilians alike.

On the long journey from the port of disembarkation many of them saw enemy planes caught in the beams of searchlights and heard the crash of bombs in the distance and the rumble of anti-aircraft defences. But they got a real thrill today enroute to their billets.

Two Alarms Heard

The alarms—there were two—came while the Canadians were in the midst of a major dispersal operation which continued on its orderly way despite the drone of Nazi bombers overhead. Those without steel helmets were ordered into shelters but the men went underground reluctantly. All wanted to see what was going on overhead.

Within a few minutes British fighter patrols were buzzing around while another squadron went after the raiders, flying too high to be seen without fieldglasses. The Germans hovered around for a while, then sped off southward without dropping any bombs.

High Tribute Paid

High tribute to the morale of the new arrivals was paid by a man who knows his soldiers—Maj. C. N. Mitchell, V.C., of Montreal.

"The tactics the Germans are at present employing are not likely to worry our men or keep them from the tasks they have in hand," he said. "They are positively the finest soldiers you could find anywhere."

His remarks were underlined by Sgt. A. L. Evans of Washington, D.C., a member of the Royal Canadian Engineers who won the Mili-

Formation of Canadian Armored Division May be Expedited

Several Hundred Obsolete U. S. Tanks May be Transferred to Canadian Government—Immediate Need is Tanks for Training Purposes

Ottawa, Sept. 6—(CP)—Formation of a Canadian armored division may be expedited considerably if several hundred obsolete United States tanks are transferred to the Canadian Government.

The National Defence Department has already authorized the formation of an armored brigade and Defence Minister Ralston hopes the brigade may grow into a division.

The immediate need is tanks for training purposes as Canadian factories are now working towards the production of modern service tanks. If the American tanks become available soon the training of the men to operate the tanks can proceed while the factories are getting into production and turning out the requisite number of new tanks for service.

Have Limited Number

At present Canada has a limited number of the latest model of British light tanks. These are in use at the armored fighting vehicles training centre at Camp Borden. There are not enough, however, to give a full course of training to a brigade. If older tanks were available for training these modern light tanks might be withdrawn from training and used at some strategic defence point.

The United States tanks are of the French Renault type and were built for the First Great War.

Officials here are without detailed knowledge of them but they are believed to be in the light tank class and weigh about 10 tons. That would make them a bit heavier than the modern light tanks now in Canada. The United States tanks, however, are probably considerably slower and less heavily armed than the present Canadian tanks but those qualities will not materially detract from their value as training vehicles.

Commander in Washington

The new Canadian tank brigade will be under the command of Col. F. F. Worthington who has been stationed at Camp Borden in com-

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The staff of a newspaper awaited news of an air raid and the stage was set for urgent messages. A telephone bell tinkled and the receiver was snatched off. This was the message: "A wee bit of golf here, old man, from St. Andrews, Scotland. Here are the names of the semi-finalists in the Eden tournament."

Two loud thunderclaps sent a frightened woman scurrying into a St. Leonards' shelter. "It's all right, missus," said an errand boy at the entrance, "it's not Hitler. It's God. He won't hurt you."

Even air raids have their compensation. A number of hotels in the London area serve free drinks during alarms.

At one airdrome not far from London, pilots of a fighter squadron returning from a job loop the loop for each plane they have brought down. The more usual method of announcing a success is a "victory roll."

"Something tells me I shall never see you again," said a letter from his sweetheart found in the pocket of a German sergeant pilot shot down in the Southeast. He died of his wounds.

At the burial of nine German airmen in a village cemetery, the coffins were borne on the shoulders of Royal Air Force members. British soldiers stood at attention beside the graves while an R. A. F. chaplain conducted the service.

A cemetery in the Southwest has been hit by bombs three times in a month.

Ordered to put up his hands after crashing in a northeast mining district, a Nazi made a remark in German that the miners regarded as a sneering reference to their working togs. One of the miners promptly punched him on the nose.

SOLDIERS KILLED HITCH HIKING BACK TO CAMP

Fred Atkins and Murray Allen of Grey and Simcoe Foresters Victims of Accident

MOTORIST HELD

Midland, Ont., Sept. 6.—(CP)—Hitch hiking back to camp from their homes in Penetanguishene, two members of the Grey and Simcoe Foresters, C.A.S.F. Camp Borden, were struck by a car and killed at Waverley last night.

The men, Fred Atkins, 20, and Murray Allen, 20, were running to catch an eastbound car driven by Clifford Brown of Hillsdale which had stopped to pick them up. They were on the gravel shoulder of the south side of the road when they were struck by an eastbound car driven by Ike Wysoglad, of Barrie.

Wysoglad is being held under a nominal charge of reckless driving. A military inquiry into the fatalities will be held.

FISHING TUG MISSING

Erie, Pa., Sept. 6 (AP)—The fishing tug Ethel J., carrying a crew of five men, was reported missing in Lake Erie today. The 45-foot craft was due in port about 9 p.m. E.D.T. yesterday after a 24-hour trip to fishing waters some three or four miles out.

The United States coast guard boat Dix early today started a search for the missing tug. Officials said there was no bad weather on the lake and suggested the Ethel J. either broke down or sank.

ADMIRAL HORTHY ENTERS ORADEA

Regent of Hungary Will Remain With Troops Until Occupation Completed

Budapest, Sept. 6 (AP)—Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary, entered the City of Oradea (Nagy-Varad) at noon today, marking the second stage of the occupation of the Northern Transylvania territory returned to Hungary by Rumania.

The Magyar army also will occupy Mayszalonta today.

The Regent will remain with the army until the occupation is completed Sept. 13.

News of Rumanian events—including abdication of King Carol II—was received calmly here but a "watchful attitude" was being maintained, an official spokesman said.

Should Rumania's internal situation get beyond Rumanian control, it was said, the safety of the Hungarian minority in Southern Transylvania and that in the northern portion not yet occupied might be endangered.

FARMERS ADVISED NOT TO INCREASE EXPENDITURES

Hon. J. G. Gardiner Says This Winter and Next Year Will be a Difficult Time for Agriculture

SPEAKS IN TORONTO

Toronto, Sept. 6 (CP)—Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Agriculture Minister of National War Services, said in an address here today that nearly-complete information from the recent National Registration of Canadian adults shows more than 1,000,000 single men between the ages of 19 and 45 of whom at least 300,000 between the ages of 21 and 27 will be available to fill all military draft requirements during the next year.

He said that by tonight the Department of National War Services will have compiled "all the necessary information necessary to placing 1,000,000 single men in training if necessary."

Giving his address at the Livestock Day luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition, Mr. Gardiner addressed his preliminary remarks to farmers and said he had had "unpopular" statements to make. The first was that "this is not the time for the farmer to increase his expenditures and hence not the time for business to be booming in agricultural areas."

Experience had shown that farmers never enjoyed prosperity

Woman Attacked By Two Soldiers Police Allege

Toronto, Sept. 6. — (CP)—Pte. Frank Babin from Camp Borden, was arrested here yesterday and was charged with having assaulted and beaten Mrs. Annie Kerr, causing her bodily harm, in a lane here early Sunday.

Mrs. Kerr is in hospital suffering from facial and body injuries but her condition is not regarded as dangerous. Police said the woman was attacked by two soldiers on Jarvis Street after she had alighted from a street car at the corner of Dundas. When she resisted after being forced into a lane, the two men struck her, knocked her down and then kicked her.

Police found a kit bag in the lane. Investigation of the case is continuing.

Growing Intensity Of Nazi Attacks Seen in Day's Raids

Hospital in Kent Hit Killing a Few Patients And Two Nurses

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 6 (CP Cable)—Nazi raiders high in the sky thrust at the London area during the morning rush hour today following a night alarm of record length and a brief dawn "alert". A fourth alarm of the day was sounded at the lunch hour.

The defenders shot down 34 German planes during the morning. Nine British aircraft were lost but six of their pilots were saved.

The Air Ministry said that intensive air battles resulted in turning back attacks on several airdromes as the Germans attempted to force their way up the Thames Valley toward London, but that only slight damage was done to one factory in the area.

A row of 40 houses was damaged in a dawn raid in London. Splinters killed a woman in that attack.

Later reports indicated 350 bombers and fighters had crossed the coast to make the first of the series of attacks on London and the southeast.

The growing intensity of the Nazi attacks on Britain followed within a few hours Prime Minister Churchill's warning that raids in September would probably "magnify and multiply."

Roof-top observers heard the booming of anti-aircraft fire and the sound of explosions. At a tremendous height over one district of the London area white streaks of smoke were visible though planes could not be seen.

Many Dogfights

It was an uncanny experience to watch the intricate smoke patterns woven. The manoeuvres suggested that a dogfight was in progress.

"It seemed as if a skein of white wool were suspended over the London area," said one eye-witness.

Though the early morning warning came as Londoners were on the way to work, most persons trudged on refusing to take shelter.

The Press Association said that Molotoff "bread baskets" may have been dropped on the capital for the first time during the night raid. The agency's roof-top reporter described seeing "a rosy glow in mid-air which faded with a deafening explosion and brilliant streaks across the night sky."

Honeymoon Car Turns Over in Ditch

Struck by a motor car travelling in the opposite direction, an automobile driven by A. W. Owen of Toronto, crashed into the ditch and turned over along Highway No. 2 east of Marysville late yesterday. Both Mr. Owen and his wife sustained injuries and were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Owen sustained a fractured left shoulder, facial lacerations and was suffering from shock, Dr. C. R. Stobie revealed after examination at the hospital, while Mr. Owen was cut by flying glass also.

Provincial Constable Patterson investigated the crash and was informed that a motor car driven by Moses N. Baer of New Dundee, Ont., was attempting to pass a third vehicle travelling in his same direction when Baer's car sideswiped the Owen automobile forcing it into the ditch, where it turned over. Strangely enough, both parties concerned were "honeymooning."

Vichy Government And Tokyo Reach Preliminary Agreement

Hong Kong, Sept. 6 (AP)—Authoritative Hanoi quarters reported today a general agreement governing military facilities to be granted the Japanese in French Indo-China was reached last night between French Governor-General Admiral Jean Decoux and Japanese Major General Issaku Nishihara.

Details of the agreement were not announced. It was said negotiations were continuing.

Reports yesterday had said a preliminary agreement had been reached between Tokyo and Vichy giving Japan a "limited" right to land her troops and supplies at Haiphong and move them over the Indo-China railway to the border of Yunnan, southwest China, for the campaign against the Chinese.

That preliminary agreement, it was said, was made subject to negotiation of details at Hanoi.

The call is for $300,000,000 and the Government is promising investors a 3.125 per cent yield on their money, a fraction lower than the yield on the first war loan last January.

This new borrowing is on 12-year three-per-cent bonds which are to be sold at $98.75, which works out to 3.125 per cent.

In addition to the $300,000,000 bonds offered for cash, a further amount will be issued for conversion of outstanding 4 1-2 per cent bonds which matured Sept. 1. These are believed to total about $70,000,000. Somewhere in England, Sept. 6—(CP Cable)—To the accompaniment of the piercing wail of air raid sirens, the latest contingent of the Canadian 2nd Division marched into camp today, heads high and singing.

Although it was their first experience of an air raid alarm, they had already become aware of the fact that they are now in the active theatre of war, where death falls from the skies on soldiers and civilians alike.

On the long journey from the port of disembarkation many of them saw enemy planes caught in the beams of searchlights and heard the crash of bombs in the distance and the rumble of anti-aircraft defences. But they got a real thrill today enroute to their billets.

Two Alarms Heard

The alarms—there were two—came while the Canadians were in the midst of a major dispersal operation which continued on its orderly way despite the drone of Nazi bombers overhead. Those without steel helmets were ordered into shelters but the men went underground reluctantly. All wanted to see what was going on overhead.

Within a few minutes British fighter patrols were buzzing around while another squadron went after the raiders, flying too high to be seen without fieldglasses. The Germans hovered around for a while, then sped off southward without dropping any bombs.

High Tribute Paid

High tribute to the morale of the new arrivals was paid by a man who knows his soldiers—Maj. C. N. Mitchell, V.C., of Montreal.

"The tactics the Germans are at present employing are not likely to worry our men or keep them from the tasks they have in hand," he said. "They are positively the finest soldiers you could find anywhere."

London, Sept. 6 —(AP)— A nationwide survey by the Associated Press, completed today, shows that Britain is tending to "business as usual" despite the damage and death inflicted by German air raiders.

From the white cliffs of Dover to Land's End on the south coast, in the industrial midlands and the great harbors of Hull and Liverpool, Portsmouth and Southampton, Bristol and Plymouth, our staff were permitted to go freely to see for themselves the extent of damage—and the lack of it.

Dover, focal point of attack by air and artillery across the Channel, is surprisingly free of extensive destruction. The inhabitants are

Blenheim Bombers Can Take Punishment

London, Sept. 6—(CP)—Just how much punishment a Blenheim bomber of the Royal Air Force can withstand is instanced by the Air Ministry News Service which tells of one pilot plunging into the sea on a return flight from Germany. The report says:

"For a few moments the air-screw churned the water and the air intake scooped up gallons. Then the craft bounced upward and both engines picked up again. The pilot was able to fly the bomber safely home, although the airscrews were bent, the tail wheel missing, the bomb hatch stove in, and the shield, cowlings and air intake wrecked.

"Another Blenheim which had been flying over Rotterdam, meeting the full fire of ground defences, came back to its squadron station although the port oil tank was punctured, and the fuselage considerably damaged. Yet both engines functioned normally and the aircraft was back in service two days later.

FORM CORDON ABOUT BUSH

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 6 (CP) — Officials of the Burwash reformatory said today 20 guards from the jail farm have formed a cordon about a section of bush near Pickerel, Ont., where two prisoners who escaped yesterday are believed to be hiding.

The two men, William Kollogee, 22, and Charles Laws, were seen before dawn on railway tracks near Pickerel and fled into the rocky bush country.

Formation of Canadian Armored Division May be Expedited

Several Hundred Obsolete U. S. Tanks May be Transferred to Canadian Government—Immediate Need is Tanks for Training Purposes

Ottawa, Sept. 6—(CP)—Formation of a Canadian armored division may be expedited considerably if several hundred obsolete United States tanks are transferred to the Canadian Government.

The National Defence Department has already authorized the formation of an armored brigade and Defence Minister Ralston hopes the brigade may grow into a division.

The immediate need is tanks for training purposes as Canadian factories are now working towards the production of modern service tanks. If the American tanks become available soon the training of the men to operate the tanks can proceed while the factories are getting into production and turning out the requisite number of new tanks for service.

Have Limited Number

At present Canada has a limited number of the latest model of British light tanks. These are in use at the armored fighting vehicles training centre at Camp Borden. There are not enough, however, to give a full course of training to a brigade. If older tanks were available for training these modern light tanks might be withdrawn from training and used at some strategic defence point.

The United States tanks are of the French Renault type and were built for the First Great War.

Officials here are without detailed knowledge of them but they are believed to be in the light tank class and weigh about 10 tons. That would make them a bit heavier than the modern light tanks now in Canada. The United States tanks, however, are probably considerably slower and less heavily armed than the present Canadian tanks but those qualities will not materially detract from their value as training vehicles.

Commander in Washington

The new Canadian tank brigade will be under the command of Col. F. F. Worthington who has been stationed at Camp Borden in com-

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The staff of a newspaper awaited news of an air raid and the stage was set for urgent messages. A telephone bell tinkled and the receiver was snatched off. This was the message: "A wee bit of golf here, old man, from St. Andrews, Scotland. Here are the names of the semi-finalists in the Eden tournament."

Two loud thunderclaps sent a frightened woman scurrying into a St. Leonards' shelter. "It's all right, missus," said an errand boy at the entrance. "It's not Hitler. It's God. He won't hurt you."

A married couple saw their second home demolished before their eyes in a Midland raid. The other, in India, was razed during the Quetta earthquake.

Even air raids have their compensation. A number of hotels in the London area serve free drinks during alarms.

At one airdrome not far from London, pilots of a fighter squadron returning from a job loop the loop for each plane they have brought down. The more usual method of announcing a success is a "victory roll."

"Something tells me I shall never see you again," said a letter from his sweetheart found in the pocket of a German sergeant pilot shot down in the Southeast. He died of his wounds.

At the burial of nine German airmen in a village cemetery, the coffins were borne on the shoulders of Royal Air Force members. British soldiers stood at attention beside the graves while an R. A. F. chaplain conducted the service.

A cemetery in the Southwest has been hit by bombs three times in a month.

Ordered to put up his hands after crashing in a northeast mining district, a Nazi made a remark in German that the miners regarded as a sneering reference to their working togs. One of the miners promptly punched him on the nose.

SOLDIERS KILLED HITCH HIKING BACK TO CAMP

Fred Atkins and Murray Allen of Grey and Simcoe Foresters Victims of Accident

MOTORIST HELD

Midland, Ont., Sept. 6.—(CP)—Hitch hiking back to camp from their homes in Penetanguishene, two members of the Grey and Simcoe Foresters, C.A.S.F. Camp Borden, were struck by a car and killed at Waverley last night.

The men, Fred Atkins, 20, and Murray Allen, 20, were running to catch an eastbound car driven by Clifford Brown of Hillsdale which had stopped to pick them up. They were on the gravel shoulder of the south side of the road when they were struck by an eastbound car driven by Ike Wysoglad, of Barrie.

Wysoglad is being held under a nominal charge of reckless driving. A military inquiry into the fatalities will be held.

FISHING TUG MISSING

Erie, Pa., Sept. 6 (AP)—The fishing tug Ethel J., carrying a crew of five men, was reported missing in Lake Erie today. The 45-foot craft was due in port about 9 p.m. E.D.T. yesterday after a 24-hour trip to fishing waters some three or four miles out.

The United States coast guard boat Dix early today started a search for the missing tug. Officials said there was no bad weather on the lake and suggested the Ethel J. either broke down or sank.

ADMIRAL HORTHY ENTERS ORADEA

Regent of Hungary Will Remain With Troops Until Occupation Completed

Budapest, Sept. 6 (AP)—Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary, entered the City of Oradea (Nagy-Varad) at noon today, marking the second stage of the occupation of the Northern Transylvania territory returned to Hungary by Rumania.

The Magyar army also will occupy Mayszalonta today.

The Regent will remain with the army until the occupation is completed Sept. 13.

News of Rumanian events—including abdication of King Carol II—was received calmly here but a "watchful attitude" was being maintained, an official spokesman said.

Should Rumania's internal situation get beyond Rumanian control, it was said, the safety of the Hungarian minority in Southern Transylvania and that in the northern portion not yet occupied might be endangered.

ANYTHING FOR PUBLICITY

FARMERS ADVISED NOT TO INCREASE EXPENDITURES

Hon. J. G. Gardiner Says This Winter and Next Year Will be a Difficult Time for Agriculture

SPEAKS IN TORONTO

Toronto, Sept. 6 (CP)—Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Agriculture Minister of National War Services, said in an address here today that nearly-complete information from the recent National Registration of Canadian adults shows more than 1,000,000 single men between the ages of 19 and 45 of whom at least 300,000 between the ages of 21 and 27 will be available to fill all military draft requirements during the next year.

He said that by tonight the Department of National War Services will have compiled "all the necessary information necessary to placing 1,000,000 single men in training if necessary."

Giving his address at the Livestock Day luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition, Mr. Gardiner addressed his preliminary remarks to farmers and said he had had "unpopular" statements to make. The first was that "this is not the time for the farmer to increase his expenditures and hence not the time for business to be booming in agricultural areas."

Experience had shown that farmers never enjoyed prosperity

Woman Attacked By Two Soldiers Police Allege

Toronto, Sept. 6. — (CP)—Pte. Frank Babin from Camp Borden, was arrested here yesterday and was charged with having assaulted and beaten Mrs. Annie Kerr, causing her bodily harm, in a lane here early Sunday.

Mrs. Kerr is in hospital suffering from facial and body injuries but her condition is not regarded as dangerous. Police said the woman was attacked by two soldiers on Jarvis Street after she had alighted from a street car at the corner of Dundas. When she resisted after being forced into a lane, the two men struck her, knocked her down and then kicked her.

Police found a kit bag in the lane. Investigation of the case is continuing.

Growing Intensity Of Nazi Attacks Seen in Day's Raids

Hospital in Kent Hit Killing a Few Patients And Two Nurses

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 6 (CP Cable)—Nazi raiders high in the sky thrust at the London area during the morning rush hour today following a night alarm of record length and a brief dawn "alert". A fourth alarm of the day was sounded at the lunch hour.

The defenders shot down 34 German planes during the morning. Nine British aircraft were lost but six of their pilots were saved.

The Air Ministry said that intensive air battles resulted in turning back attacks on several airdromes as the Germans attempted to force their way up the Thames Valley toward London, but that only slight damage was done to one factory in the area.

A row of 40 houses was damaged in a dawn raid in London. Splinters killed a woman in that attack.

Later reports indicated 350 bombers and fighters had crossed the coast to make the first of the series of attacks on London and the southeast.

The growing intensity of the Nazi attacks on Britain followed within a few hours Prime Minister Churchill's warning that raids in September would probably "magnify and multiply."

Roof-top observers heard the booming of anti-aircraft fire and the sound of explosions. At a tremendous height over one district of the London area white streaks of smoke were visible though planes could not be seen.

Many Dogfights

It was an uncanny experience to watch the intricate smoke patterns woven. The manoeuvres suggested that a dogfight was in progress.

"It seemed as if a skein of white wool were suspended over the London area," said one eye-witness.

Though the early morning warning came as Londoners were on the way to work, most persons trudged on refusing to take shelter.

The Press Association said that Molotoff "bread baskets" may have been dropped on the capital for the first time during the night raid. The agency's roof-top reporter described seeing "a rosy glow in mid-air which faded with a deafening explosion and brilliant streaks across the night sky."

Honeymoon Car Turns Over in Ditch

Struck by a motor car travelling in the opposite direction, an automobile driven by A. W. Owen of Toronto, crashed into the ditch and turned over along Highway No. 2 east of Marysville late yesterday. Both Mr. Owen and his wife sustained injuries and were rushed to the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Owen sustained a fractured left shoulder, facial lacerations and was suffering from shock, Dr. C. R. Stobie revealed after examination at the hospital, while Mr. Owen was cut by flying glass also.

Provincial Constable Patterson investigated the crash and was informed that a motor car driven by Moses N. Baer of New Dundee, Ont., was attempting to pass a third vehicle travelling in his same direction when Baer's car sideswiped the Owen automobile forcing it into the ditch, where it turned over. Strangely enough, both parties concerned were "honeymooning."

Vichy Government And Tokyo Reach Preliminary Agreement

Hong Kong, Sept. 6 (AP)—Authoritative Hanoi quarters reported today a general agreement governing military facilities to be granted the Japanese in French Indo-China was reached last night between French Governor-General Admiral Jean Decoux and Japanese Major General Issaku Nishihara.

Details of the agreement were not announced. It was said negotiations were continuing.

Reports yesterday had said a preliminary agreement had been reached between Tokyo and Vichy giving Japan a "limited" right to land her troops and supplies at Haiphong and move them over the Indo-China railway to the border of Yunnan, southwest China, for the campaign against the Chinese.

That preliminary agreement, it was said, was made subject to negotiation of details at Hanoi.

Call is for $300,000,000 and Loan Will Go on Sale on Monday

LOWEST BOND $100

Ottawa, Sept. 6 (CP)—The mobilization of Canadian dollars will advance another major step next Monday when subscriptions open for Canada's second war loan.

The call is for $300,000,000 and the Government is promising investors a 3.125 per cent yield on their money, a fraction lower than the yield on the first war loan last January.

This new borrowing is on 12-year three-per-cent bonds which are to be sold at $98.75, which works out to 3.125 per cent.

In addition to the $300,000,000 bonds offered for cash, a further amount will be issued for conversion of outstanding 4 1-2 per cent bonds which matured Sept. 1. These are believed to total about $70,000,000. For conversion purposes these bonds will be valued at $100.25 and the difference between that price and the price of the new issue will be paid the subscriber at

TAKES TO DITCH TO AVOID COLLISION

Claiming he was forced to swerve his automobile into the ditch to avoid collision with an oncoming truck, an automobile driven by George Ferguson, Glen Miller, struck a telephone pole on Highway No. 33 north of his home last evening. Motorcycle Patrolman J. J. Hatch investigated and found that the pole had been snapped off at the base as the result of the impact. Ferguson told the investigating officer that a truck loaded with wood had forced him off the highway, but the driver of the truck had failed to stop after he had crashed into the ditch and struck the pole.

Musical Composition By Reg. Hinchey Played At Concert in Coliseum

E. Reg. Hinchey, who is rapidly becoming one of Canada's outstanding arrangers and composers, was signally honored in Toronto the other day when he was elected to the executive of the Ex-Members Association of the Belleville Kilties Band.

The annual meeting was held in the Prince George Hotel and was attended by members who came from the far-flung corners of the continent. Special guests were members of the famous Goldman Band, now playing at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Further tribute to Mr. Hinchey's ability was paid at the grand concert held in the Coliseum on Saturday night when the Toronto Symphony Band, under the direction of Addison Laidlaw, another member of the Belleville Kilties, opened their program with the Belleville composer's march "Our Country's Finest."

Belleville and Mr. Hinchey received the plaudits of 20,000 people when the number was announced by the master of ceremonies.

Mr. Goldman, leader of the famous New York band also paid tribute to the Belleville composer when he requested Mr. Hinchey's arrangement of the popular war song, "There'll Always be an England." He intimated that it will be used on the Goldman broadcasts in the near future.

O. S. D. Pupils Exhibit Varied Gifts At Toronto "Ex."

Exhibits of decorated wedding cakes, linoleum cuts, canned fruit, and shoes in the process of being made, are a few of the varied exhibits in the booth at the C.N.E. of the Ontario School for the Deaf. They are the work of pupils at the school which is located at Belleville.

The school has an enrollment of about 350, ranging in ages from 5 to 21. "We will have about 40 five-year-old beginners this fall," said R. H. Vaughan, in charge of the exhibit. "In addition to an extensive academic and vocational training, there is a vigorous sports program. Last year the Deaf school won the Eastern Ontario six-man football championship for secondary schools."

Many of the products of the crafts taught the boys and girls at the school are on display, and include furniture, printed booklets and programs from the printing department of the school.

"The deaf children are about six years retarded," said Mr. Vaughan, "which makes their high school entrance age about 18. In addition to the school training, we have a placement officer who is constantly endeavouring to place the graduates in positions wherever possible. —Globe and Mail.

B. C. I. Registration Down 100 From Last Year

Total registration at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School at the present time is approximately 100 less than the maximum number of pupils registered during the last semester it was revealed this morning by Principal P. C. MacLaurin.

The fact that many of last year's pupils who would have ordinarily returned to school this fall, had obtained positions was responsible in some measure for the decreased attendance, but it was expected that when the N.P.A.M. returned from camp at Petawawa that attendance would pick up, as considerable numbers of the older male students were with this force.

Also attributing to the smaller attendance this year was the fact that many farmers' sons were staying at home helping with the farm work. Quite a number it was revealed had registered at school on the opening date and then asked for leave of absence to work on farms.

A change in the curriculum at the Collegiate has resulted in more students taking advantage of vocational classes this year than last, said Mr. MacLaurin. In other years it has been customary for all grade 9 pupils to take the one general course before branching off into vocational studies during the second year, but this semester, the general course has been discontinued and Grade 9 pupils may go right into vocational classes when entering the Collegiate. "As a result," stated Principal MacLaurin, "this year we have two separate vocational classes instead of the Grade 9 general."

NO BED OF ROSES FOR THE 30,000 GOING TO CAMP

Trainees Will be Given Thorough Groundwork on Requisites of a Soldier

IN CAMP 30 DAYS

(By Ken Clark Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 6 (CP)—Being a combination Sergeant-Major and uncle to 30,000 young Canadian civilians who will go to camp about Oct. 9 for military training is no bed of roses, it is admitted at Defence Department headquarters here. But, says a department spokesman, it is a profoundly interesting and significant job.

About Oct. 9 these men, single and 21 years old, or childless widowers of that age, will be launched on a compulsory 30-day period of training. What happens to them after they pass medical examinations and receive transportation to one of 39 camps, is the department's affair. Here is how it is going to work out, according to present plans.

Arriving at camp a man will be given a second medical examination in order to make sure that his first has been fair to himself and others and that no contagious diseases are brought in among his fellows. Those found unfit will be given transportation home with provision for meals en route.

Given Regular Kit

Those who pass the examination will get their kit, the regular outfit of the non-permanent active militia. Underwear, socks and boots will be new; battle dress, great coats and caps will be new for the first 30,000 called for training.

A man keeps his boots and underclothes when he leaves the camp, but there is a regulation about hanging on to the boots in case he is called up again. Between each camp period of 30 days all top clothing will be cleaned, sterilized and pressed so it will be as good as new for the second outfit.

Issued with the kit will be the badges of the N.P.A.M. unit with which the camper becomes associated. This association will depend, in the case of those from rural districts, upon what unit of the N.P.A.M. operates in his part of the woods. City men will be divided equitably among the units of their cities. But the department emphasizes that any man may transfer from one outfit to another later on.

25 Men in Each Hutment

Outfitted, a man will be assigned to quarters. There will be probably 25 men in each hutment (a kind of apartment house hut) with a non-commissioned officer. The officer, incidentally, will have 24-hour oversight over his detail. He will live with the boys, mess with them, be an uncle in the new military life. The civilian clothes will be in a box under each man's bed, a real bed.

After that comes enrollment and at the end of the period of training enrollment documents will be stamped and filed. Four out of a hundred of them will have a notation that they have been made a lance-corporal and when it comes to picking officer material for the N.P.A.M. in post-camp affairs these notations will have some influence.

Given Sound Start

Once enrolled the life of the camp begins. The department admits it won't be all beer and skittles, but it is fully realized that it is impossible to take a man off a desk and make him into an athlete in two weeks or a month.

"You can't make a recruit in 30 days," the spokesman said, "but you can give him a sound start. You can give him an introduction to military life so that he won't forget the basic factors in training. And the training will be common to all three branches of the service, Navy, Army and Air, so that afterwards if he wants to join any of them he will have something to begin with."

A vital point in operation of the plan is the kind of officer material selected for the permanent staffs of the camps. For officers commanding, older men have been preferred, those between 40 and 45. It was felt that these men would have a more mature attitude than their juniors.

LITTLE EVIDENCE

repairing homes and even building new ones in the face of Nazi air squadrons which daily roar overhead.

At the great naval base of Portsmouth, raiders once succeeded in dropping a bomb in the courtyard of the barracks but little damage was done and no one was hurt. Most of the fatalities there have been among civilians.

At Southampton, police gave me carte blanche not only to go where I pleased but also to photograph what I pleased. One bomb had set fire to a cold storage warehouse and a few houses had been wrecked here, but the streets were filled with shoppers. The shops and great fruit and meat storehouses were amply supplied.

Plymouth and Bristol, although frequently attacked, showed little evidence of bombings.

Around the Greater London area, the heaviest toll has been taken in the matter of sleep. High explosive and incendiary bombs have caused negligible damage—and that chiefly to residential property. Many of the fire bombs have been extinguished quickly by A.F.S.—Auxiliary Fire Service—workers.

Liverpool, still one of Britain's busiest ports, has been the target of numerous fire bombs, some of which started small fires on the docks, but these soon were extinguished.

A survey of the towns and countryside, however, gives the impression that the damage is of infinitesimal proportions, and even if the whole story could be told it would only add minor specific details to what already has been told in broad outline.

AN ENCOURAGING SPEECH

The speech made by Prime Minister Churchill to Parliament on Thursday should make very encouraging reading for everyone. In it he expressed great confidence that the might of Britain will eventually conquer the Germans, "perhaps more swiftly—than Napoleon's army, although, of course without any of its glitter or glory." Some time ago in an address he said, "The road to victory may not be so long as we expect." Can it be that he has some thought in mind about the war not lasting as long as we have been led to expect?

Despite the air losses that have been suffered since the first of July, he stated that today Britain has more planes and better equipped ones than at that time and that if the Nazi raids are doubled or trebled Britain will "emerge from the attacks relatively stronger in the air than before." This shows how little damage has been done to British factories despite the German claims. The attacks, while they have been severe, have not been as bad as the British Premier expected. Out of 45,000,000 people only a thousand have been killed by the enemy and only 800 houses destroyed out of 13,000,000 during the month of August which is certainly a pretty small percentage.

Mr. Churchill is having a survey made of the damage done to private property with the idea of compensating those who have suffered loss and who are not able to replace the loss out of their own funds. This suggestion will meet with universal approval in Britain and shows that the Government is applying humanitarian principles in times of stress though it is something that it could easily have shelved because of other greater problems at hand.

It appears, also, that the populace, of those cities most often the objects of attack, is to get an improved arrangement of air-raid warnings. Hitherto, residents of areas over which enemy aircraft were flying to other objectives or returning with bomb racks empty, had to submit to alarms and hurry to shelter. Apparently Mr. Churchill feels that a lot of these warnings are unnecessary if proper precautions are taken. The problem is being studied by experts and changes will probably be made soon. It would seem that this may add a greater element of risk to those in the danger zones but it will also be more satisfactory than spending considerable time daily in shelters and will not affect factory production to the same extent as previously.

The Prime Minister warns that, just because stormy weather is approaching the country will be more free from direct assault, is no reason for relaxing the vigilance that has been maintained up until now. We have seen how France viewed her position with considerable complacency up until the time of last spring's attack but she paid dearly for her slackness. Churchill does not intend that the country shall ever be taken by surprise and that can be done only by treating the situation as if the enemy intended to attack immediately.

It may inferred from the deft touches of humour that the British leader injected into his address that he felt optimistic over the position of the country and the defence it is putting up against the Nazis. If he, with his vast knowledge of the general situation, can feel so confident over the conduct of the war then, we believe, that the cause for liberty and freedom is well on the road to victory.

A CONVINCING SPEAKER

In speaking to the New Zealand troops in England on Wednesday, Prime Minister Churchill stated in part, "We in these islands are now bearing the accumulated weight of malice and tyranny of the enemy. Of all the wars that we have fought, none has been more noble or righteous than this, and from none shall we emerge with a greater sense of duty done."

The Prime Minister has a genius for putting thought-provoking phrases in a few words and all of us will agree that no war has been "more noble or righteous than this," for Britain went into this war in order that Hitler might be stopped in his campaign to bring the world under his control. She has everything to lose and in the winning just the moral satisfaction that she would be safe from tyranny and that men of all nations would enjoy the freedom to which all are entitled. Britain wanted no territorial advantages for the Empire provided her will all the raw resources necessary for a great industrial nation. Mr. Churchill possibly may have had these thoughts in mind when he made the above statement.

It is not only his speeches which are always interesting but it is over the radio that he excels. We do not believe there is any man in public life today who can put so much punch into his radio addresses as the British Prime Minister. Most of us regard them as the best tonic of the war, for he speaks with assurance, frankness, and when he speaks of Hitler his voice fairly grates as when he said in one of his earlier addresses that the Empire would continue the war until the "smear of Hitler was wiped from the brows of men." There is some intangible thing in his voice that carries with it a tone of conviction that is very heartening and perhaps that is one of the reasons the response to his addresses is so eager. He says the things that most of us would like to say and he says them in a way that delights his listeners as no other speaker can. We hope Mr. Churchill will find the time to talk to the world soon again over the air.

"JUST WHERE WE WANTED 'EM"

Roaring through the cloudless blue of Britain's skies twelve young Canadian pilots, members of Canada's first R.C.A.F. unit to go into action in England, got an equal number of Nazi raiders, to quote their leader "just where we wanted 'em." The Canadian Hurricanes, their guns spitting a staccato challenge, swept into action and within a few minutes three raiders went down to flaming deaths while the remainder turned tail for Germany with battle-inspired Canadian fighting eagles on their tails. In their first engagement Canada's Galahads of the clouds proved their merit. In the bullet-swept blue they roared into action with all the eagerness and enthusiasm of a Bishop, Barker or a Collishaw. They might have been in a football huddle, a hockey conference or a baseball conclave. They had a job to do and they did it. And in doing it they lived up to the glorious traditions handed down to them by their gallant predecessors of the R.C.A.F. and the R.A.F. They have won their golden spurs in their first jousting in the arena of the air. Like the Black Prince of old they will go on to further victories, and enhance the glorious deeds that won for Canada's flyers of the last war the name of the "best in the world."

"Just where we wanted 'em." In that simple expression perhaps was injected all the eagerness, enthusiasm and anxiety to meet the enemy that is the goal over the horizon for every Canadian pilot. In those swift moments of tense action were released the pent-up feelings gathered in months of training. It was their supreme moment. And with its coming they felt the glory of battle, of personal contact with an enemy who recognizes none of the sporting ethics of combat; to whom an enemy is an enemy whether aged man or toddling child. Perhaps there was a fierceness in their attack that could not be denied. The song of battle surging in the very blood of them kept time to the whining struts of their Hurricanes. And one can readily imagine the smiles on the faces of these fresh-faced young Canadians as they bent over controls or the releases of machine-guns.

"Just where we wanted 'em" may be a prophetic remark. In the not too distant future, the hope of the civilized world is that the fighting forces of Britain and her allies, may, like the young Canadian airmen, suddenly zoom into a concerted action that will end forever the menace of Nazism and its accompanying horrors.

MONTANA HEARD FROM

Letter in Chicago Daily News.

—Sir: — England is fighting our battle and her navy is our first line of defence. Why are we not over there helping her hammer and tongs? Are we going to wait until the last Englishman is down before we wake up?

Politicians tell us they will never vote to send our boys to die on foreign battle fields. Our boys have been sent to foreign fields several times for less reason than exists now. They invaded Canada in the days of '76 and in 1812 and the lack of success of those raw levies should be an argument for training now. In 1804 our fleet knocked a ramshackle fort about the ears of the Dey of Tripoli, which caused that worthy to let our commerce alone thereafter. We invaded Mexico, Cuba, and China during the Boxer uprising, to say nothing of sending two million troops to France in 1917-1918. But we had red blood in our veins then.

ENGLISH AS SPOKE

Minneapolis Star Journal.

The English language is still an untamed force, especially in America — a frisky, unpredictable critter that professors can't lasso and lexicographers can't get under more than partial control.

New words like jitterbug, okie, corny and deadpan must make the scholars blanch, but they belong to the lusty tradition of older words, now perfectly respectable, which have graduated from slanguage and become part of our common vocabulary — like mugwump, copperhead, tinhorn sport and cardsharp.

Canada has recently coined a new word, more proper than these but just as strange at first sight: embus, meaning to board a bus. We don't know whether that will stick or not. Why hasn't entrolley ever entered the vocabulary? Why do we entrain but not emplane?

There are countless inexplicable and illogical quirks in our temperamental English language. The undertaker has become a mortician or a funeral director, and cabins for tourists have become motels, but a grocer remains a grocer. A tremendous flop is a floperoo, but what is a tremendous wow—a woweroo?

LEGIONNAIRES IN BRITAIN

London Times.

One of the proudest units in the growing army of free Frenchmen who have elected to fight on under General de Gaulle is a regiment, or half-brigade as it is called, of the Foreign Legion, which won fame long ago as being among the finest warriors in the world. This force, which under French officers includes men of most nationalities — even a few Englishmen — was the first to enter Narvik when the Allies threw the Germans out in May, and, with the enemy "running like rabbits", as one of them said, they were sorely disappointed when the order came to withdraw.

Most of the regiment then went back to France and attempted to establish a line in front of Rennes; but they were caught up in the full tide of retreat and after only three days escaped in disgust without having fired a shot. Now, encamped on a wide heath in the south of England, they are ready for service again.

The men from the Norwegian campaign are typical examples of the Legionnaires of legend. Many of them have seen 20 years' service in Morocco, Algiers, and China, everywhere within the French Empire where trouble has brewed, and as they went by with their automatic arms in brisk, compact detachments they looked ready for plenty more.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

THE ANXIETY STATE HAS SYMPTOMS SIMILAR TO GOITRE

When a recruit for overseas service was extremely nervous, had a rapid heart beat, and his fingers trembled when held out in front of him at the height of the shoulders, we had him sit down and read a paper or book for a few minutes.

If after this rest he still had the nervousness and rapid heart beat, he was rejected and advised to consult his physician about a metabolism test. If the metabolism rate (rate at which body processes work) was above normal, it was believed that an early goitre was present and rest and perhaps iodine should be the treatment.

That a constant anxiety state can cause many of the same symptoms as goitre is now known. The high metabolism rate which heretofore has been the deciding factor in pronouncing a case goitre, can be raised by the anxiety state. When these "anxious" patients take the test, they are so upset, anxious about themselves and the test that they do not get quieted down sufficiently for a "fair" test. More than an apparently restful state of the body is necessary; the mind must also be at rest, an almost impossible condition with these nervous, anxious patients.

How, then, can a physician decide that anxiety, not goitre, is causing the metabolism rate to be high?

Dr. Gilbert M. Beck, in New York State Journal of Medicine, states that if the patient has cold, clammy hands, it is the anxiety state, not goitre. Also, if the pulse rate is normal in the morning after a good night's rest, it is not goitre as goitre keeps the pulse rate high all the time.

In the anxiety state also, the individual is so upset that he has little or no appetite, whereas in goitre the body processes are working so rapidly that there is a natural demand for food and the patient has a good appetite.

Difficult breathing, flushing of the skin, perspiration of the hands and feet, a slight rise in temperature and inability to withstand much heat are found both in goitre and in the anxiety state.

The lesson then is that when there is doubt about a condition being early goitre or the anxiety state because so many of the symptoms are alike, these two or three differences should be remembered. The goitre patient is hungry and 'always' has a rapid heart beat, whereas the anxious patient has a poor appetite and 'sometimes' has a normal heart rate.

Gibraltar Unconquerable

(United Correspondents)
(B-19)

General Franco's claim to Gibraltar and attacks upon the famous fortress by Italian and German airmen have led to discussion in the international press as to whether this "Key to the Mediterranean" can stand up against the resources of modern military science and, especially, whether Gibraltar can be made safe against air attack.

In the British press two eminent experts with a close personal knowledge of the fortress, have described these fears as unfounded. Both are former Governors of Gibraltar, Sir Alexander Godley and Sir Edmund Ironside. In their view Gibraltar cannot be successfully attacked either by sea or from the land. Nor is there any danger from the air.

Gibraltar owes its invulnerability to the caprices of nature, namely its peculiar configuration and rocky character. Even the climate contributes to its defence — wind currents and air-pockets threaten hostile airmen with disaster.

Gibraltar — a tiny peninsula connected with the mainland by a narrow isthmus — is three miles long and one mile across. The rock rises perpendicularly to a height of 1400 feet, forming a defensive work which no bombs can hit unless hostile aircraft expose themselves directly to the fire of anti-aircraft guns built into the rock. The isthmus is not only protected by impregnable barriers against attack from the land side. It is also defended at sea by the British Navy — and from both sides — from the Mediterranean and from the Bay of Gibraltar. True, the Germans have placed heavy artillery on the African coast, near Ceuta in Spanish Morocco. But this is within range of Gibraltar's guns. Even if the Germans could bombard Gibraltar with long-range artillery placed both in Spain and at Ceuta, the damage would not be great. For Gibraltar is at the same time a subterranean town, cut deep into the rock, with casemates, galleries, chambers, barracks, cellars and tunnels, which not only can accommodate the whole population but also provides room for enormous stocks of ammunition, petrol, food and water.

Aware of the importance of Gibraltar, the British Government has for months been taking measures to make the fortress even stronger than it has always been. Women and children have been evacuated and, apart from a strong garrison, only about 15,000 people remain. The Rock bristles with artillery and anti-aircraft guns, and no hostile aircraft dare fly over it at the low altitudes necessary to bomb the harbour and "Europe Point". Thus German and Italian pilots, who are extremely keen to visit Gibraltar, are obliged to drop their bombs from a height beyond the range of the anti-aircraft guns perched high up in the cliff. This small island of rock offers them no target and most of their bombs fall in the sea.

Little hitherto has been recorded of the subterranean works cut deep into the face of the rock. But one English military writer records his impressions of St. Michael's vault, one of the many underground chambers which form a long chain in the defence system: "The sight of these gigantic works with their vast accumulation of war material prompts the belief that Gibraltar is impregnable. It is stronger than at any time in its history."

One of the most striking episodes in Gibraltar's varied history is the Spanish siege of 1779 to 1783. The besieging Spaniards numbered 400,000 against a garrison of only 7,000. But the small force of defenders was under the command of a brave and resourceful soldier, Sir George Augustus Elliot, later Lord Heathfield. The siege continued almost uninterrupted for three years, but the rock held firm.

For Mussolini Gibraltar has acquired a fatal significance. The Straits of Gibraltar, through which pass all those articles, especially petrol and food, of which Italy is in urgent need, are guarded by an unsleeping sentry.

Old Court Custom Halted by War

(Montreal Gazette)

A time-honored procedure in the London Criminal Courts has been abandoned for the duration of the war, "The Londoner" writes in his letter to the Royal Gazette and Colonist Daily, Hamilton, Bermuda.

Before the four courts of the Central Criminal Court—familiarly known in London as the Old Bailey—were thrown open, the keepers used to enter and strew the dock with sweet herbs, rose-petals and cinnamon.

Judges in procession to the Courts were accustomed to carry small branches of fresh flowers in their hands every day from the beginning of May until the end of September.

In the City Criminal Courts, this has been the custom for about 300 years. It is a grim reminder of the pestilences of the Great Plague and Newgate jail fever.

Now, for reasons of economy — the cost of the herbs and flowers amounts to £3 a day—the ceremony is to be abandoned.

In the year 1665 London was swept by the Great Plague, one of the most terrible visitations which ever waited on a big city. It became the custom for those who could afford it to carry with them quantities of rue and rosemary to keep off infection, and the custom eventually spread to the courts.

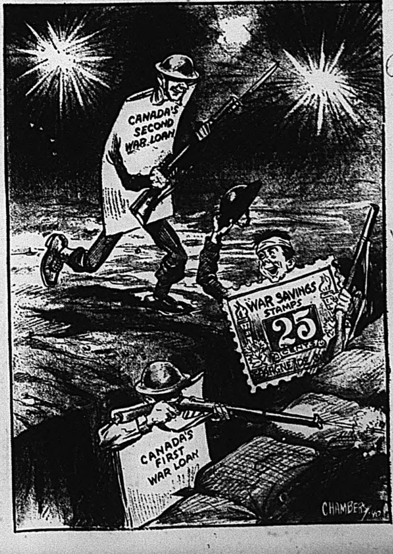
The carrying of posies of spring flowers from May 1 to September 30 has its origin in the attempt to keep down the stench of the unwashed prisoners of other days.

The present handsome building of the Central Criminal Court occupies the site of the ancient Newgate Gaol. This was a place of incarceration for more than seven centuries. It was finally pulled down in 1902 to make a site for the present edifice.

While the foetid Newgate prison continued to exist, the courts occupied the adjacent Sessions House. Prisoners had only to be brought a few yards for trial and all the time the air of the court was heavy with the pungent odors of prison and prisoners.

The British government has received another £88,000 ($391,000) from the East India Fund for British War Services, making the total so far £176,000 ($783,000)).

2nd War Loan Reinforcements



Picton and District

Major Howard Graham Named New Commanding Officer 1st Battalion H. & P. E. Regt.

Promoted to Rank of Lieutenant - Colonel According to Cable Received Here

IN GREAT WAR

Picton — When their car was forced off the road by another car which failed to allow sufficient room to pass, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Farragher and Mrs. Ella Cochrane of Cherry Valley were shaken up and the car considerably damaged. The accident occurred on the Picton-Cherry Valley road, a mile west of the town limits.

Plans are being made for Picton Fair, which is being held on Sept. 27 and 28. Directors held a meeting Wednesday night to make plans. It was decided to hold a black and white Holstein day as was the case last year. The horse race committee was given permission to arrange a good program.

Howard Graham Promoted

A cable received here this week announced, that Major Howard Graham had been promoted to the rank of Lieut-Colonel and made Officer Commanding of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He is the third to act as O.C. of the regiment since it was mobilized for service last September. Lt.-Col. Sherman Young went overseas with the unit and was invalided home this spring, being succeeded by Lt.-Col. Salmon, who held office until recently when he was given other duties. Col. Graham was attested with the 115th battalion in the last war and served overseas. Since 1923 he has been associated with the regiment, taking courses which well fit him for his new office. He graduated from Osgoode Hall in 1921 and until last September practised law at Trenton. The appointment is popular locally.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is known as the 'Fighting Unit' of the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade, according to a letter received this week by Philip Dodds from Capt. Arthur Norrington. He states the unit has gained an enviable reputation overseas. When he wrote on August 19 the men were under canvas and he had seen some thrilling dog-fights between the R.A.F. and Nazi planes with the British planes and pilots easily demonstrating their superiority. He stressed the fact, that letters from home are eagerly looked for and urged that more be sent the men.

Reeve Acting Mayor

Reeve H. S. Colliver was appointed acting Mayor at the council meeting Wednesday night, while Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon it at camp with the N.P.A.M. for two weeks. Council heard a complaint from H. R. Jenkins, that roosters in the hennery of William Brown on Queen Street kept the residents of the neighborhood from getting any sleep in the early morning hours, and he asked that some action be taken. Clerk F. L. Ward humorously asked if they could not get around the objection by going to bed with the hens and getting up with them. Council asked the clerk to look into the matter of keeping a hennery in the town. The report of the relief administrator showed that relief costs in August amounted to $306 compared with $428 a year ago. There were 46 persons receiving relief.

Observe Day of Prayer

Rev. F. M. Wootton it at Richmond where he has taken over the charge of his son, Lieut. the Rev. A. M. Wootton who is with a unit at Cobourg. The charge includes Stittsville. Rev. F. M. Wootton is a former pastor of Picton United United Church and on retiring came to Picton to make his home. He will fill the post for an indefinite time.

All town and county churches are observing the day of prayer and intercession on Sunday. In Picton, the Legion is parading to the Baptist Church.

There are some two hundred pupils registered at Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute. This is fewer than usual due to the fact that some are at the N.P.A.M. camp and others are working on farms and in factories.

Weights of Cheese Must be Clearly Marked on Boxes

Canadian cheese is reaching the United Kingdom in boxes upon which the weights and other markings are difficult to decipher, it was revealed in a letter read at Thursday evening's Belleville Cheese Board meeting. The letter was addressed to Mr. J. L. Irwin, local cheese grader, from Dominion Dairy Products, Grading and Inspection Services at Ottawa, stating that complaints from the United Kingdom had been received in reference to the box markings being undecipherable.

The conditions under which cheese is being handled in the United Kingdom at the present time are entirely different from what they have been during peace time it was pointed out. Under these circumstances cheese are being stored in warehouses never previously used for this purpose and with insufficient lighting facilities being provided in some cases, inaccuracies have occurred owing to the weights on the boxes being indistinctly marked.

This being a matter of particular importance, graders were asked to check the markings on the boxes very carefully and not to allow any cheese to go forward unless the boxes were clearly marked. This applies to all marking, but particularly the weights of the cheese. Weights on boxes should always be marked with a stencil at least one inch high and from one-half to three quarters of an inch wide.

Mr. Irwin was instructed to inform all factory owners and cheesemakers that in future the weights of the cheese must be more clearly marked on the boxes.

Some Destroyers Given to Britain Arrive in Canada

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 6 (CP)—A group of United States destroyers—part of the 50 warcraft to be turned over to Britain under the destroyer-defence base exchange—arrived in port out of the dense fog along the coast today.

The trim men-of-war were the first of the over-age vessels to reach an empire port. They will be manned by British crews and brought into the conflict as swiftly as possible.

(Under an agreement reached by the two nations, Britain will receive 50 destroyers from the United States in exchange for leases for the establishment in Newfoundland, Bermuda and the British West Indies of naval and air bases for the protection of the western hemisphere.)

The gray destroyers came out of the misty Atlantic to move through the anti-submarine gates into the smooth waters of the harbor early in the morning. More destroyers were scheduled to follow swiftly.

The transfer of the destroyers from United States officers and men to the British command will proceed under well-arranged plans that will have the vessels speeding to their appointed battle stations as soon as possible.

WEDDINGS

HEWITT—COBLEY

A quiet wedding was solemnized in Trenton on Wednesday afternoon, August 28, when Marjorie Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Cobley, Trenton, became the bride of John T. Hewitt, only son of Mrs. Hewitt and the late Thomas Hewitt of Barrie, Ont. Rev. P. J. McLellan officiated at the ceremony which was performed amid a setting of multi-colored gladioli. Wedding music was played by Leslie Hearts.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked charming in an afternoon frock of aqua crepe with chocolate brown accessories and corsage of cream roses.

Mrs. H. M. Chambers sister of the bride, was matron of honor becomingly attired in dusty rose sheer, matching accessories and corsage of Talisman roses and bouvardia. Harry Simpson of Trenton was best man.

At the reception Mrs. Cobley received in navy blue and white ensemble with a corsage of crimson roses. A buffet luncheon was served by friends of the bride., Mrs H. Simpson and Mrs. R. Laidlaw.

The happy couple left by motor on a trip to Muskoka Lakes. For travelling the bride donned a beige box coat with matching fox collar.

On their return they will reside at 71 Murphy Street, Trenton.

RUSH—FARRELL

In a very quiet ceremony in the Church of Assumption, Erinsville Monday, August 26, Rev. B. L. Farrell P.P., Railton, united in marriage his sister, Miss Elizabeth Mary Farrell, daughter of Mrs. Marcella Farrell and the late John Farrell, and Mr. Charles Rush, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rush.

In the sanctuary was Rev. J. A. Powell, P.P., Erinsville, and the mass-servers were two nephews of the bride Joseph Farrell, Read, and Patrick Farrell, Copper Cliff. Miss Louise McGuire played the wedding march and music and Mr. John Killoran sang several solo selections during the mass.

NEW HIGHS are being reached by some of the new hats. One autumn model, done in deep sapphire blue velvet, looks like a stovepipe. It has a deeply flared back.

TO ONE SIDE goes the drapery of many a smart frock. A delightful evening dress is of pastel pink crepe, the skirt draped high, with where it ends with free-swinging graceful rounded folds to one side, panels bordered with baum marten. High neck and long sleeves.

A TONIC to the wardrobe is a dash of red. Black suede pumps with red pipings and red lining the ornament at the throat are offered for late afternoon wear. Nice with red suede gloves to match.

She spoke to nobody. Nobody spoke to her. "Stiff necked" they called her. And the one man she was interested in never even noticed her.

One day she heard two other women discussing her. She heard about her dingy, shabby appearance, her lack-lustre drabness. Then she knew why she had to seek refuge behind her high hat demeanour.

She bought a tin of Nugget Shoe Polish. She shined her shoes. She fixed up the rest of her clothes to match the gleaming appearance of her shoes. She looked herself over in the mirror. She smiled. Today she's married—but her first love is still Nugget. —Advt.

Forcing Food On the Baby

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

I do sometimes wish that some pediatricians could read about 1,000 typical letters I receive on problems mothers face to get their babies to eat. Then more of these pediatricians would become interested in the psychology of appetite and would realize they don't do enough when they tell the mother what to feed the child and how much; that they also need to show this mother how to cultivate an appetite in the child for this food, how to lead the child to want to eat it. Then fewer doctors would give such advice as the mother in the letter below says was given her.

Forcing Food on Child

"Dear Dr. Myers: I am at my wit's end as to what to do about getting my baby to eat. She is eleven months old. . . . The doctor told me to force her to eat. When I did she became ill; he said not to pay any attention to her sickness, just to go ahead feeding her. This morning I did just that, and when it was time for her to eat lunch she refused. She didn't become ill, but she wouldn't swallow the spinach or beets. She would push them out of her mouth just as fast as I would put them in. And she was crying and getting upset and so was I. I just had to stop feeding her because I was almost hysterical."

Although it is true that a very slight amount of resistance to a new food might be overcome by pushing a tiny bit of it into the baby's mouth, by gradual adaptation; yet if this child,s resistance increases instead of diminishing this food grows more repellant and the child's resistance to all food may increase.

The trouble is the mother expects the baby to eat what she offers and all of it right away. She is told what he should have and how much. Then if the child doesn't chose to eat it she proceeds to force it into him. Moreover, her unhappy emotions increase all the while and in turn increase the child's resistance and decrease his appetite. If she is to succeed she will not bother about how much the child eats today nor about his weight now. She will think only in terms of cultivating gradually his appetite so he will be eating well and weigh enough a month or two hence.

Bq GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SUBSTANTIAL returns may be expected on this day in token of sound and stable ventures developed by steadfastness, prudence, persistence and hard work. The "fruit of works" should be demonstrated by advancement and solid support from superiors, old-established institutions and those in authority.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look forward to a year in which there will be substantial recognition and rewards for earnest past labors, fidelity and sterling character. This may be attended by some drastic activity surprising and exciting moments, in which elders, superiors and old institutions or organizations may figure, but be not carried away in possible upheavals to the point of eccentric behavior.

A child born on this day should be richly endowed for success and happiness in life, achieving place and power by its own sterling qualities, splendid mental abilities and gracious personality.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall the Dead Rule the Living?

Five thousand dollars cash immediately and $65,000 in a trust fund await a California woman, under the terms of a will recently filed, but the lady must not be married and must not marry henceforth if she accepts the trust fund.

The will states that in the event of the marriage of the lady "to any other person than myself, either prior or subsequent to my death", the bequest shall go to someone else.

This type of will is not new, but the taboo against marriage is not invoked usually unless in the case of a husband or wife. Some excuse may be found for a man who knows he is married to a scatter-brain, and that she will probably accept the first proposal of marriage, offered in her widowhood, and that his children will have a hard time to get an education or the start in life that he worked early and late to give them.

The same line of argument may be true in the case of a woman with a philandering husband, a skirt-chaser who just can't help himself, and who will bring in, as a stepmother to lord it over her children, the first possessing female he meets. She argues! Why should I leave every cent my father left me for some other woman to enjoy, while my own sons and daughters go without?

But for the dead hand to reach up from the grave and prevent the marriage of someone to whom one is not bound by matrimonial ties offers a new aspect as a study in jealousy.

The best definition of jealousy offered by specialists who make a study of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings" is that it's a form of fear. Victims of the green-eyed monster fear he or she will not measure up to the hated rival.

But what has a dead man to fear? In death he might be generous. All of us hope that in death we may not be concerned with those embittering emotions which confronts us in our daily life. Even the agnostic hopes for forgetfulness in which the cares of a distraught world shall not intrude in the long sleep.

Why this vigilant guarding after death, this watchfulness, this demanding exclusive worship and love? Why not trust the fate and be generous?

As a companion-piece, it's pleasant to think of another type of will which old Washington, D. C. cherishes. It was made by a Russian Minister Plenipotentiary (we didn't rate ambassadors then). He married a girl much younger than himself. In his will he made substantial provision for her second husband "if my beloved wife should marry," and marry the lady did. But old Washington still speaks affectionately of the Russian aristocrat who knew how to be generous after death.

GOOD MANNERS

PERIODIC CHECKUP ON YOUR TABLE MANNERS IS ADVISED

Every once in a while it's a very wise plan to check ourselves on certain table habits that we find so unpleasant in the other person. For example:

Noisy chewing and swallowing or (horrors!) chewing with open mouth.

Reaching across the table (or worse, across a neighbor's plate) for food or salt.

Holding aloft a forkful or spoonful of food which has been arrested in its passage enroute to the mouth, in order perhaps to answer a question or to listen to a remark of a neighbor.

Hunching over the table, so that the chin almost touches the rim of the plate. A straight line may be the shortest distance between two points, but, at dinner, a reasonably straight back is "fair to behold."

Churning the food about the plate, making a sort of coarse puree of it.

Cutting up the entire piece of meat, or all of a service of any kind of food, before one begins to eat it.

Stacking a fork so that its load quivers precariously enroute to the mouth.

Buttering a slice of bread held in the open palm, or cutting the slice into pieces with a knife.

Using the fingers to assist in pushing foods onto the fork.

Not wiping the mouth with the napkin before lifting a glass to the lip, leaving a smeary imprint on the glistening surface.

"Tucking" the napkin into the waistcoat or bodice.

Leaning the knife or fork (or both) against the side of the plate, handles resting on the table. Once a knife or fork or spoon is picked up from the cloth, it must not again touch the cloth.

Sucking a huge, or even small, spoonful of ice cream, and drawing it into and out of the mouth.

Wiping silver on the napkin. (This is an absent-minded habit a man may fall into who habitually lunches "down-town" where the silver may not be invariably spick-and-span. But a hostess' mortification at this spectacle may well be imagined.

Blowing on soup that is too hot, or tilting the plate forward and scraping noisily and avariciously for the last drop.

Making unpleasant noises when sipping liquids from a spoon.

"Crooking" the little finger as one eats or drinks. An affected gesture, ridiculous to behold.

Harpooning a piece of bread from the bread-tray with the fork.

Putting an olive into the mouth and sucking it.

Drinking soup from the tip of the spoon.

Leaving a spoon standing in a cup.

Concentrating on eating to the disregard of all conversation.

Holding the knife and fork in the hand when one passes the plate for a second helping.

MELROSE W. I.

The regular meeting of the Melrose W. I. was held on August 29 at the home of Mrs. Lorne Weese. There was an attendance of 42, including a number of visitors and an especially interesting program was carried out with Mrs. R. Macfarlane as convener.

Some items of business were dealt with. By a unanimous vote, the remaining "jam" tins are to be filled with honey. Anyone can contribute 36 cents and have a tin labelled as a donation to the Red Cross from that particular person. The matter of a donation towards the refrigerator for the "Hostess Home" at Trenton was voted down. The majority felt the Red Cross funds could be put to better use, especially at this season when cooler weather will soon be here.

The small quilt completed at the last meeting, is to be sold since an offer has been made for same.

A motion carried by which a second donation of $25. is to be made to the Red Cross from the funds on hand raised for war service work.

Following the singing of "O Canada" Mrs. Wm. McMechan gave a reading entitled "The Patchwork Quilt." Miss Bernice Robinson then gave an instrumental on the piano after which Mrs. S. Demill gave a humorous reading, "Bargain Day". Mrs. L. Weese played a piano solo. Mrs. R. Macfarlane gave the topic paper "The Institute as a Factor in the Community" dealing with each subject of study for the year in a very splendid way and concluding with a short poem which emphasized the benefits gained by meeting together and exchanging thoughts and experiences. Bertha Smith gave the current events of the month.

The roll call, to which only a few responded, was "An embarrassing Moment". Collection received amounted to $4.11 besides a generous amount for Red Cross. In the absence of the president, 1st vice president, Mrs. Roy Badgley acted in a very efficient way.

The hostess and conveners served refreshments. Red Cross supplies were distributed and the gathering dispersed after a short social time together.

WALLBRIDGE W. I.

The August meeting of the Wallbridge Women's Institute was held in the Town Hall on Wednesday with twenty-one present. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Sam Nicolson. Mrs. L. Ketcheson and Mrs. E. Lane will be sent as local Leaders of the Project of meat cooking at Stirling.

A letter of thanks was read by Mrs. J. White from Mr. Ed. Spencer thanking the Institute for flowers sent them at the time of their bereavement. A minute of silent prayer was observed in memory of the late Mrs. Spencer as she was one of their most faithful workers and will be greatly missed by all. Mrs. Jim Sine gave a report of Red Cross work done since April until August: 53 pairs of pyjamas; 98 pairs of socks; 7 shirts; 12 quilts; 1 wool blanket; 6 night gowns; 6 pairs of panties; 7 baby dresses; 7 blankets; several pieces of clothing such as sweaters, pants, coats and caps were donated. It was decided to give a monthly donation to Red Cross funds. Keeping the balance for special use in the work. The collection for the day $1.10.

The members then spent the rest of the afternoon in quilting, knitting and sewing. The meeting closed with "God Save the King". Mrs. Wm. Wickson acted as hostess and her helpers served a dainty lunch at four o'clock.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

FIRST SCHOOL DAYS

Preparing the child for school is the subject of a series of special articles prepared for the Ontario Intelligencer by the personal physician of the Dionne Quintuplets, who are themselves beginning regular schoolwork for the first time this month.

In the next two weeks, all over this continent, thousands of babies will turn their back on babyhood. With books under arm, they will leave the walls of home that has protected them and been their world up to now, and go to school. It is a momentous event in every home where it occurs, for as I say, it signifies that baby is baby no longer.

I have known many mothers who have burst into tears the day their "baby" left for school that first day. It's like the day Johnny puts on long trousers for good or Mary gets married.

And if it is a time of some trial for mother, it is also a somewhat frightening experience for the child. For the first time he is going up against impersonal authority. For the first time he won't have his mother to tell him what to do and what not to do. No matter how sympathetic a teacher may try to be, she still is a stranger. He can hardly run to her and throw his arms around her if he gets tired, or bewildered, or frightened. And it is very likely he will be all these as his school life begins.

I am sorry I can't remember my first day of school. It is so many years ago, that I can't recall a thing about it, but I do remember taking some of my younger sisters, and my younger brother to school for the first time. We were a fairly large family — five girls and two boys, and yet I remember as each succeeding child set out for school for the first time, it was quite a big day in the home.

If it was a big day that long ago when families were big and children plentiful, you know how much more important it is today by comparison when families of two or three are the general rule.

By the same token it is more important to the children. For the first time they are exposed to large groups of children. Hitherto, in the cases of perhaps most of them, they haven't gotten far beyond the family circle, except to play with little Mary or George next door.

It is a time for great change for everyone concerned, and so it must be approached with considerable care. The child should be prepared for his initial sally out into the world. The parent should prepare himself and herself for the change, too. The parents' adjustment is perhaps the most important at first, for some allowance will be made by the children in the beginning. The parents must be conditioned to yield not only some of their authority over their children but actually to help outsiders enforce this divided authority over the youngsters.

THREE-HOUR TOUR OF LONDON SHOWS LITTLE DAMAGE

Correspondent Says Scores of Houses Damaged but Only a Couple Beyond Repair

STRONG SHELTERS

(By Douglas Amaron Canadian Press Staff Writer).

London, Sept. 6 (CP Cable) — Hitler's sky raiders have scarcely scratched the surface of the great London area, a three-hour tour of the bombed district revealed today.

Using taxi drivers, air raid precautions wardens and bobbies as guides, I visited half a dozen districts where Germans dropped their pills during the night. The tour was made without official guidance and I looked at what I liked, talked with whom I liked, without interference.

The German airmen either were poor marksmen or had no eye for military targets. Scores of private dwellings and stores were smashed but only a couple beyond repair. The sole military hit was a railway line where some 50 feet of track were torn up.

Factory, residential, business and slum sections of the vast capital were included in the tour. Everywhere workers were on the job repairing gas and water mains, clearing debris from houses or sweeping broken glass and mortar from store windows.

Populace Unshaken

People did not seem much shaken at losing their homes and businesses although in one of the poorer districts an old man who took me through the remains of his house admitted he did not know what he would do now.

The old man and his wife were in a shelter when the bomb fell and had no indication their home was ruined until after the all clear sounded.

"We'll get on somehow," the wife said, "but it is a hard blow."

A few blocks away on a busy street not unlike Montreal's St. Catherine St., a bomb fell at the rear of a large carpet store. This store was closed for business for today but others nearby were carrying on despite the lack of plate glass windows.

"Hitler Don't Stop Us," said a sign outside one store. "Bombed But Unbeat," said another.

In the next district I saw that a bomb had scored a direct hit on a large underground shelter in the middle of a square. There were 1,000 to 1,500 people inside the shelter at the time but the only casualties were two people sitting on top, smoking. They were killed.

These were the only deaths reported in the whole of the toured area.

No Factories Hit.

We went from there to the district where the railway line had been hit. About ten bombs were dropped in that section during the night but there was not much damage. One had crashed through part of a platform roof and had dug up a section of the track.

Trains of rails 20 feet away were running as usual and a foreman said that service would b resumed tomorrow. Men were not working while we were there, for sirens had sounded for yet another raid and in these districts where bombs have fallen people do not need to be asked twice to take shelter.

In a residential suburb a couple of miles away five bombs fell, one scoring a direct hit on a little stuccoed cottage which was flattened like a pancake. The owners were away at the time, the husband with the forces and the wife on holiday.

From there we went to a factory district where three or four bombs had dropped not far from a large gas tank. Gas and water mains were broken in this district and one woman whose home was less than 50 feet from where a bomb fell complained that she was unable to cook dinner.

"I guess I'm lucky at that," she said, pointing to the front of her house in which only one window was broken. "They say it was a small bomb, but I was in the shelter and it felt as though the house was falling down when it crashed."

Absence of Damage Conspicuous

A block away the whole front of a store had been broken open by the explosion of a bomb across the street. The owner was doing a bumper business despite it all. Two aged women in this district, taken to hospital for shock, were the only casualties.

Throughout all sections the absence of damage, rather than the damage, was most impressive. There were thousands of broken windows and scores of cracked roofs, but, as one bobby put it, "lots of them should have been condemned anyway."

People forced from their homes are making the best of their bad luck. Temporary quarters for them all have been arranged but many preferred to clear out the debris and stay where they were. Some of these parked their babies in cribs along side streets while they went to work with brooms and shovels.

"We were told to expect this and can take all he (Hitler) gives us," said a portly matron who had been hit as hard as any. "All I hope is that he is getting worse than he's giving us and I'm sure he is."

Britain's Acquisition of Destroyers Cheers Naval Men in Mediterranean

(By Larry Allen)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 6.—(AP) —British naval authorities at this eastern Mediterranean base hailed today the acquisition of 50 over-age United States destroyers as providing Britain with powerful additional weapons to crush Italy's communications with her armies in North Africa.

The British Mediterranean fleet, demonstrating its strength in its unchallenged bombardment Wednesday of the Italian Island stronghold of Scarpanto, expects to get a number of the American craft.

This would release warships now tied up by convoy duties and would give more screen protection to British battleships and cruisers in increased attacks expected on Italian bases.

British authorities here would not disclose how the eastern Mediterranean fleet had been reinforced as announced by Prime Minister Churchill in London yesterday, but the joining up of the eastern and western battle squadrons the past week brought together the largest number of battleships, destroyers and aircraft carriers seen in the Mediterranean since Italy entered the war.

In his statement Mr. Churchill said Britain had almost doubled the effective strength of her eastern Mediterranean fleet "by sending out some of our most powerful vessels to reinforce the flag of Sir Andrew Cunningham, the Admiral in the eastern Mediterranean."

Mr. Churchill added that "This movement, plainly visible to the Italians, was not molested by them," and that the ships called at Malta, delivering supplies.

The Egyptian Press gave prominent display to Mr. Churchill's statement that a stream of convoys was pouring fresh troops into the middle east as an indication major activity may soon be forthcoming on the African war fronts.

British successes in shelling Scarpanto, and an earlier attack this week on Rhodes in the Dodecanese Islands were lauded as further evidence Britain is master of Premier Mussolini's "mare nostrum"—our sea.

"Italian Fleet Again Runs Away," said the headlines here.

This latter was in connection with the British statement that the Italian fleet was sighted in this week's operations in the Mediterranean but withdrew without giving resistance.

Arrival of C. A. S. F. Contingent Fills Immediate Requirements

11,500 Men Made Ocean Voyage Without Incident —Nazi Claim Denied

46,000 IN U.K.

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—(CP)—Arrival of the latest contingent of Canadian troops in the United Kingdom brings Canada's military establishment there close to the maximum contemplated for the present.

Naval Minister Macdonald today said 11,500 Canadian soldiers and 33 Canadian nurses, largest of six big Canadian contingents to go overseas since the war began, crossed in the convoy which arrived Wednesday and gave a flat denial to a Nazi claim that a troopship carrying Canadians was sunk.

While there has been no official statement from the National Defence Department on the number of Canadian troops in the United Kingdom British newspapers placed the number at 35,000 recently. Thus the latest contingent brings the total to more than 46,000.

In July Defence Minister Ralston told the House of Commons the government proposed to complete a Canadian Corps of two divisions in the United Kingdom and maintain it but that, in the present state of hostilities, no additional formations would be sent there. At that time Col. Ralston gave the number of Canadian troops outside Canada, including garrisons in Iceland, Newfoundland and the West Indies, as 37,000.

Not One Life Lost

Not a single Canadian life was lost at sea from enemy action in the movement of these troops overseas. The movement started last December and over a period of nine months the rate of movement was about 1,200 a week.

The Navy Minister said also that a group of 14 cadets bound for the Royal Navy Training School in England was included in the contingent of Canadians safely landed in England this week.

These young men will be trained in England for commissions in the Royal Canadian Navy. They came from various centres in Canada from Halifax to Victoria. Among them was William Hastings Howe, son of Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply.

"Britannia still rules the waves, Hitler's boasts notwithstanding," the Navy Minister said today, presenting figures to show a large increase in Canada's import and export trade "largely due to the war."

"Exports," he said, "are largely to the United Kingdom and the safe conduct of them across the seas speaks volumes for the thoroughness and efficiency of the convoy work of the Royal Canadian Navy and of the mother service, the Royal Navy."

The minister said for the first seven months of the year Canada's imports and export trade showed an increase of $376,071,186 over the corresponding period of a year ago. Imports increased $206,437,649 while exports gained $169,633,537.

Slammed Cat on Floor When Newscaster Gave Nazi Losses

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 6 (CP) — Crown witnesses testifying at the hearing of Defence of Canada Regulation charges against Alfred Luchinger, 52, cheesemaker of Dundas, told Magistrate H. A. Burbidge today that Luchinger picked up a kitten in the kitchen of the farm house where he was employed, and "slammed it to the floor," when radio news commentators announced the number of German planes shot down over Britain during the day.

Luchinger told the court he was Swiss and had a wife and children in Switzerland.

Magistrate Burbidge was informed by R.C.M.P. Constable Sam Elkin that the authorities did not recommend internment for persons of neutral countries, such as Switzerland. His Worship remanded Luchinger in custody and told the constable he would recommend internment.

Male Students At Universities Must Don Khaki

(By Frank Flaherty)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 6.—(CP)—Arrangements under which every physically fit male student at Canadian Universities will eventually don the khaki and become a part-time soldier at his place of learning are now taking shape, the National Defence Department made known Thursday.

Outlines of the military training program at Canadian Universities during the coming scholastic year have been sent by the Defence Department to officers commanding military districts.

Only a small proportion of students—most students are under 21 years—will be liable to compulsory military training under regulations promulgated so far by the Department of National War Services. The University authorities have under taken to see that all fit male students receive training arms.

Two Ways Open

They will receive it either in the Canadian Officers' Training Corps units already established in universities or under a new arrangement.

The C.O.T.C. has been established for years and forms part of the non-permanent active militia. Its purpose has been to enable youths receiving benefits of higher education to qualify for service as officers.

The plan adopted by the Universities this year, after consultation with the Defence Department, is that students who were in the C.O.T.C. last year will remain in it together with a certain additional number of selected students who show promise of making suitable officers.

All others will receive basic military training similar to that given private soldiers in the N.P.A.M.

Insofar as students over 21 years who may be liable to compulsory camp training are concerned, the war services department has undertaken that they will not be called for camp training until after the end of the scholastic year.

Must Take Offensive To Win the War Says Sir R. Adam-

Hull, England, Sept. 6.— (CP Cable).— Lt.-Gen. Sir Ronald Adam, general officer commanding the Northern Command, told Britons Thursday that "until we take the offensive we are not going to win this war".

Sir Ronald in a speech urged Britons not to "sit still" but to prepare for the offensive. He said that the "next 15 days will tell us what is to happen", as regards a possible Nazi invasion attempt.

Sir Ronald said he was satisfied that Britain is prepared and is ging to prepare still further to going to prepare still further to

"There is no doubt that he's (Hitler) been trying to get superiority in the air before making the attempt", Sir Ronald said. "He has failed thanks to our air force. But he might still be prepared to take the appalling risks of an invasion.

"The next 15 days will tell us what is to happen and the weather is going to play an important part. After that we must not sit still but we must prepare ourselves for the offensive.

"Until we take the offensive we are not going to win this war".

Netherlands Regt. May be Raised In Dominion

Ottawa, Sept. 6—(CP)—Registration of all male Netherlands subjects of military age in Canada is being carried out in connection with the proposal to raise a Netherlands Infantry Battalion in Canada to fight against Germany, F. E. H. Groenman, Netherlands Minister, said Thursday.

The proposal to raise the battalion has been approved by Defence Minister Ralston and a Netherlands Military Mission will come to Canada from England to work out the details. The Mission will be headed by Maj. G. J. Sas of The Netherlands artillery.

Registraton of unnaturalized Hollanders, born between 1904 and 1920, is being carried out by Netherlands consuls scattered across Canada. It began two months ago and will be completed soon.

Desire of The Netherlands Government, now in England, to do all it can to aid Britain in the war prompted the proposal to raise the infantry battalion, Mr. Groenman said. "So far our aid has been chiefly economic rather than military but we want to do all we can".

Two-thirds of the Netherlands fishing fleet "is now fishing for England and playing a part in the food situation", the Minister said. The fleet was at sea at the time of the German invasion and proceeded to British ports.

Rebuilding of the Netherlands army in Britain is under way, Mr. Groenman said ;and a fund has been opened to buy equipment and materials. Prince Berhardt, husband of Princess Juliara who is now living in Ottawa, instituted the fund.

World Champion Yanks Invade West for 2 Games With Tigers, Three With Indians Next Week

Possibility All Three Teams Will be Tied After Firing is Over

TIGERS WIN AGAIN

Detroit Beat Cleveland and Yankees Take Two from Senators

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press Sports Writer)

The American League baseball inferno is getting hot enough to explode and it probably will next week.

Right now there is a possibility Cleveland, Detroit and New York will all be approximately tied by Tuesday when the world champion Yankees invade the west for two games with the Indians and three with the Tigers and something is bound to pop in those games.

The Tigers overwhelmed the Indians again yesterday 11-3 and the Yankees walloped Washington Senators in both ends of a double-header, 2-1 and 8-1. Futhermore Boston Red Sox pounced on Philadelphia Athletics 9-7 and created the almost unprecedented situation of the entire first division being bunched inside 4 1-2 games three weeks before the season ends.

These are the figures:

Club	W.	L.	Pct.	G. Bd.	G. To P.
Cleveland	75	54	.581	—	25
New York	73	56	.566	2	25
Detroit	74	57	.565	2	23
Boston	72	60	.545	4½	22

Lefty Smith Roughed Up

After trampling Bobby Feller Wednesday, the Detroit sluggers roughed up Lefty Al Smith and Joe Dobson yesterday, scoring nine runs in batches of three in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings. Rudy York and Bruce Campbell each homered with two on.

The Yanks had no snap achieving their double win. They got an unearned run off Dutch Leonard in the first game, which rookie pitcher Ernie Bonham singled home. He also singled to help get the winning tally. In the nightcap Walter Masterson checked the champs on four hits for seven innings, but they blasted out three runs in the eighth and another three in the ninth.

The Boston victory was a typical Red Sox manoeuvre. They scored six runs in the second and let the A's come right back for seven in the third, three on a homer by Bob Johnson.

White Sox Stop Browns

Chicago White Sox stopped St. Louis Browns 4-2 in a night pitching duel between Ed Smith and Bill Trotter. Smith gave up only four hits, one a home run by Harlond Clift, while Bill Trotter allowed six, one a homer by Joe Kuhel.

The National League flowed along its placid course as Cincinnati Reds conquered Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3 to welcome Johnny Vandermeer back into the big time. "Double no-hit" kept nine hits pretty well scattered, walked five and struck out six. Frank McCormick helped him with a two-run homer.

Brooklyn Dodgers kept their distance, eight games back, by beating out the Phillies, 8-5 scoring three times in the 10th inning. New York Giants swept a doubleheader from Boston Bees 8-7 and 4-1. Hal Schumacher pitched three-hit ball in the nightcap.

Players Refuse to Play Until Overdue Salaries Are Forthcoming

Salisbury, Md., Sept. 6—(AP)—It was wampum or warpath for "Poppa Joe" Cambria's Salisbury Indians today.

The short, robust ex-laundryman from Baltimore who comprises both ends and the middle of the Washington Senators' one-man scouting staff, found himself with a baseball rarity on his hands—a players' strike.

Elwood Hines, Indian catcher and spokesman for the team, said the issue was overdue salaries.

"We'll get our back pay before we go on the field again," Hines said.

The situation came to a head suddenly last night when only two Salisbury players appeared at game time for the scheduled contest with Centreville. Surprised fans shortly heard the umpire announce postponement of the game because of "threatening weather."

Overhead, the sky was starry and clear. The temperature was a comfortable 72.

With but three days of the class D Eastern Shore League season left, Salisbury is fourth and virtually certain of a spot in the play-offs.

Provided, of course, the weather clears up.

C. R. U. RESTORES HUDDLE SYSTEM TO FOOTBALL

No More Than Three Huddles in Each Quarter Allowed Each Team Competing

OPTIONAL KICK-OFF

Teams Have the Choice of Kick-off After Touchdown by New Rules

Toronto, Sept 6 (CP)—Those football coaches who didn't like it a bit when the Canadian Rugby Union decided at the annual meeting last fall to all but eliminate the huddle system won't have to worry about the change this season—and perhaps not for several years.

The 1940 C. R. U. code, released yesterday, shows no change in the huddle system—which was a main point of debate—and only two minor rule changes from last year. Original plans called for no more than three huddles for each team during a quarter in the belief that such action would speed up the game.

One change the fans will see this fall will be an optional kick-off after a touchdown, instead of having the team scored against kick off. The second change will allow a player who has left the game in any one quarter to return once to the field during the same quarter.

In speaking of the substitution rule, W. C. Foulds of Toronto, chairman of the rules committee, said that "We felt that a player who to all appearances was badly hurt, could be better served off the field, rather than by a hurried examination made on the field which would hold up the game." The same player may re-enter the game if found not to be injured, but on a second occurrence a substitute must take his place.

Most obvious reason for the few rule changes is that teams will be effected by militia training and war work. It follows, therefore, that players would not have the best chance to acquaint themselves with different rules.

By the same token, the huddle system is continued. Should a team member be not certain of a called play he could be directed during the huddle. With many players at military camp during the next few weeks of rugby practice, it will be impossible for coaches to field a complete unit at any one practice. Therefore, many players will miss the actual teaching of new plays and signals.

WINGS GOING STRONG

Maintain 6½ Game Margin Over Newark by Defeating Montreal 10-4

(By The Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings, soaring to their first International League pennant in nine years, last night showed there has been no letup in the camp by battering out a 10-4 victory over the fifth-place Montreal Royals to maintain their 6 1-2 game margin over Newark, who nosed out a 3-2 decision with the Syracuse Chiefs.

Herschel Lyons went the distance for Rochester to chalk up his 19th victory, while his mates collected 15 hits off Newt Kimball and Lou Fette. Billy Rogell, veteran infielder who was released by the Chicago Cubs last week, committed five errors at shortstop to help along the Royals' downfall.

Ed Levy's 19th home run of the season gave Newark its triumph over Syracuse in the ninth inning. Levy hit the first ball pitched in the ninth off Ted Kleinhans.

Jersey City Giants took over third place in the standings from Baltimore's Orioles, when Bill Harris blanked the flock, 4-0, with five hits. Harris struck out five and issued five bases on balls in registering his 10th victory.

Buffalo Bisons moved to within two games of fifth place by beating Toronto Maple Leafs 6-3, behind the seven hit pitching of Floyd Giebell, who became the second Buffalo hurler to win a game in Toronto this season.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)
(Associated Press Sports Writtr)

New York, Sept. 6.—(AP)—One reason the football All-stars looked so good against the Giants is that last week they scrimmaged four times against another pro team—The Long Island Indians. And Indians scored exactly the same number of points against the collegers as the Giants . . . . Joe Louis is due from Detroit today to look over Conn and Pastor . . . A Minnesota paper reports Art (the Great Shires) is washing dishes in a Texas restaurant.

"Red" Martin has been a regular infielder on the Kansas State prison team for 13 years and in all that time has never hit under .400 . . . Right now he is socking that apple at a .491 gait against the best semi-pro clubs in Kansas City and surrounding territory.

New Haven interests have engaged Eddie Mead, Henry Armstrong's pilot, to go up there and open a fight club . . . One smart baseball man who is sticking to Ted Williams is Mike Kelley who had Theodore at Minneapolis a few years back. Old Mike says Ted is a cinch to become another Babe Ruth . . . The lavish party Jack Kearns pitched for the Baer-Comiskey signing reminded the veterans of the fight mob of the lush days of 15 years ago when Kearns was one of the best guys on Broadway with a dollar.

CONN-PASTOR BOUT ON TONIGHT

New York, Sept. 6 (AP)—Billy Conn and Bob Pastor, a couple of fancy dans of the boxing ring, fight it out over the 15-round route in Madison Square Garden tonight to decide a future opponent for Joe Louis.

The fight was postponed from mid-August because of a light shower and a lighter ticket sale. Promoter Mike Jacobs is confident now he'll have $50,000 and about 15,000 of the faithful in the house.

WOOLER RALLIES IN 9TH TO BEAT HASTINGS BY 9-8

Score Five Runs in Last Frame to Force Third Game in "C" Playdowns

PLAY AT CAMPBELLF

Three Hits and Two Errors Produce Winning Runs in Eventful Frame

Trenton, Sept. 5. (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer)—Rallying in the ninth inning to score five runs Wooler not only pulled a softball game out of the fire, but forced the second round of the intermediate "C" series of the O.A.S.A. playdowns into a third and final game at Campbellford on Saturday when the local representatives of the Trenton League defeated "Dit" Clapper's Hastings nine 9 to 8 here this evening.

For eight innings Dave Wilson, be-speckled Hastings hurler held the Wooler nine well in check and his team mates drove out three circuit blows, that accounted for most of the visitors' runs. However, in the ninth the reliable Wooler batters swung into action in true Merriwell fashion and snatched victory out of the fire of apparent defeat.

Exciting Ninth

In the exciting ninth frame McColl opened with a double, Stacey struck out, but L. Redcliffe rifled a single that scored McColl. Bryant then singled scoring Radcliffe, who had gone to second on a passed ball. May hit to Jones at second and on the latter's error all were safe. C. Redcliffe hit to short and all were safe as Anderson tried to throw Bryant out at the plate as he slid safely and arguments ensued over the play. Peace was restored and Adams popped to second. With two out and two on Austin strode to the plate an lined a hard hit down the left field line for two bases scoring both May and C. Redcliffe giving Wooler a last minute victory and forcing the series into a third game, as Hastings won the initial contest at home.

Hahn's home run gave Hastings three runs in the second and Jones' circuit blow gave the visitors three more in the fifth. Fleming also hit for four bases in the sixth. Wilson struck out nine to Stacey's eight and walked but three to Stacey's five on a sterling pitchers' duel.

Executors and trustees of the estate of Jacob Ruppert, late owner of the New York Yankees, filed an intermediate accounting last week in the New York Surrogate Court and asked the judge to rule on their rights, interest and liabilities in connection with the payment of several large claims against the estate. The inventory showed that from an original capital of $7,140,902, a balance of $5,978,029 is on hand. Among the items on which the Surrogate's ruling was asked is a note indorsed by Ruppert, on which Edward G. Barrow, then secretary and now president of the club, borrowed $350,000 in May, 1923, from Harry M. Stevens, Inc. Payments on the note were made by the New York American League Baseball Club and charged to the Ruppert Holding Corporation, which, in turn, charged them to Barrow's account. The papers state Ruppert received the proceeds of the note and in his books Barrow's account is credited with the principal sum of $350,000 and interest to January 13, 1939, of $261,406. At the date of Ruppert's death, there was owing $250,000 on the note. The court also was asked to determine the disposition of 300 shares of stock in the Yankees, in accordance with an agreement made July 17, 1925, betwetn Ruppert and Barrow. It is believed the original $350,000 debt represents a loan made by Col. Ruppert, when in need of immediate ready cash, he borrowed the amount from the late Harry Stevens in 1923 to close the deal whereby he bought out the half interest of his former associate Col. T. L. Huston, in that year.

There is an old saying in sports—"the winning team always makes its own breaks." Last evening we saw Wooler stage a true Merriwell finish to beat Hastings 9 to 8 in an O. A. S. A. playdown at Trenton, but the tradition of sports did not hold any too good in this particular case. Dave Wilson, the Hastings pitcher, deserved a better fate than defeat under ordinary circumstances. However, we cannot take any of the glory away from the Wooler nine, they really rallied in a last moment of desperation, but the elements were very much with them. As the Point Anne team well knows—it's tough to stop those wagon-tongue wielders" once they swing into action. And it was in the ninth inning when they were trailing 8 to 4 that the Wooler boys really went to town. True enough an error, which ultimately proved very costly, and a questionable decision placed the Hastings nine in a tough spot, but the error occurred before the umps entered into the picture, so the visitors had little to kick about.

Actually it was the most exciting softball game we've witnessed in many a moon. Hastings scored all, except one, of their runs as the result of three circuit blows as Jim Stacey, the Wooler pitcher, let Hastings down with six hits, three of which were of the four base nature. On the other hand Dave Wilson, the bi-specked hurler from Hastings, had scattered seven hits in a masterful manner, that was until the fatal ninth rolled around. Then things began to happen, to be truthful; that cheering section from Wooler went into action and the players responded in a dying effort, that ultimately proved the zenith of aspiration. They gathered in four hits, two of which were doubles, and walked off the field with victory, but not before the Hastings second baseman had booted a bad one and the umpires' decisions had been questioned to the point where the game had been held up in arguments. When the dust had settled, however, the hero of the game was Austin, the Wooler first baseman, who came through with a million dollar hit, with two out and two aboard. That bingle won the ball game and it wasn't foul, as the Hastings nine contended as we were in a position to see the ball light in fair territory.

Remember towering Johnny Gyroffy, who used to thrill the feminine wrestling hearts here some years ago? Well lofty John is on Monday night's professional wrestling card at the Hume Arena as a preliminary in the season's opening program. The feature bout of the night brings Nick Pavick, the Greek adonis who made such a hit locally last spring in his lone appearance here, in against a stranger to the local wrestling picture, one Sammy Draginais. Perhaps the latter should be named "Drag 'em out Sammy". Tom George, who has appeared in the Maple Leaf Gardens is also included on a card that sees all heavies.

SPORT SPICE — Remember Johnny (Two no-hitter in succession) Vander Meer?......Well our little Johnny is back in the majors after a limbering-up period at Indianapolis all summer and yesterday he won his first game for the Reds since last May ......All of which reminds us that Jerome (Dizzy) Dean is slated to return to the Chicago Cubs' roster tomorrow and no doubt he will be used in the next Cub home stand as an added box office attraction...... Playing-manager 'Dit' Clapper, star Boston hockey player and well-known Hastings softball first baseman, wasn't with the latter nine at Trenton last evening, as "Dit" is doing his N. P. A. M. training period with the Peterboro Rangers, but he'll no doubt be in Campbellford for the third tussle........ Incidentally Red Hamill, also of the Bruins, was declared ineligible for further O. A. S. A. service with Hastings ....Hamill did not establish residence in Hastings so was declared "out" by the O. A. S. A. after having played most of the season with the Hastings nine in the Peterboro City League...... Stick around your radio this evening and you'll no doubt pick up the Billie Conn-Bob Pastor scrap at Madison Square Garden if your at all interested......See where Oshawa beat Kingston in their first O. A. S. A. meeting at the Motor City Wednesday...... The score was 7 to 5, Oshawa getting five runs in the second ......Len "Cowboy" Smith hurled for the Tanners, after having pitched against the local Oilers on Tuesday night........ Friend Geo. (Oshawa Times) Campbell just couldn't figure out Smith's eccentric wind-up and went hitless......"Army" Armstrong won the Oshawa tennis championship again, which is getting to be a habit with the former Belleville netister.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Lucky Cisco Kid"

A mystery-killer steals the Cisco Kid's name! A two-gun terror beats him to the draw! The sheriff gets the noose around his neck! A jealous senorita has him at her mercy! But how the romantic rogue of the Rio Grande lives to laugh at them all, makes "Lucky Cisco Kid," which is now playing at the Capitol Theatre, exciting and thrilling entertainment and by far the best of the series.

Cesar Romero, in the colorful caballero's role, is at his luckiest and fightin'est in this punchy and fast-moving 20th Century-Fox adventure film. He scores handsomely in a well built and surprising screen play that packs terrific suspense and clever twists. The film story affords Romero plenty of opportunity to display his versatile talents.

A strong cast of featured players is headed by blonde and beautiful Mary Beth Hughes, one of the screen's finest young players. Her performance as the siren songstress of an Arizona dance hall was well received by the audience She was an excellent choice for the role. The added feature "I Was a Convict" is a sweeping drama of justified faith, set against the stark background of ex-convicts seeking rehabilitation in the outside world

Barton MacLane has the leading role as Ace King, racketeer cellmate of Clarence Kolb, a millionaire serving two years for income tax evasion. Kolb hires ex-convicts after his release, feeling they deserve another chance to atone for their errors.

MacLane is outstanding in his role and Kolb is also very convincing. The screenplay of "I Was a Convict," by Robert Andrews, Franklin Coen, and Ben Markson, from Andrews' original, is a sound basis for top entertainment.

"Squadron 992"

The extra added attraction brings to the screen the 5th of the Canada Carries On series "Squadron 992" the best of the series to date, a two reeler depicting the thrilling story of Britain's air defences . . . new links in the chain of her aerial armour. Men from the Dominions train to defend the Mother Country. Every loyal Canadian should see it!

AT THE BELLE

"Rhythm on the River"

Box-offices throughout the country have been ringing lately in theatres showing the lighter forms of entertainment. This holds true with the legitimate stage as it does with the nation's movie palaces.

With newspaper headlines and air commentators screaming the alarming conditions abroad and the undercurrent of Fifth Column activities here reaching the tidal wave proportions it is little wonder that entertainment seekers are "shopping" for their theatre fare.

According to reports in Variety, theatrical trade paper, the theatres showing comedies, comedy-drama and musicals by far lead the heavier productions in popularity. Such Broadway stage shows as "Du Barry Was a Lady", "Hellzapoppin", "Life With Father", "The Male Animal", "Louisiana Purchase" and "Walk With Music", comedies all and most of them featuring music, have weathered the so-called summer slump, whereas the heavy pieces fell by the wayside.

The same applies to the cinema. Films like the "Road to Singapore", "Honeymoon in Bali", "His Girl Friday", "My Favorite Wife" "Buck Benny Rides Again", "Ghost Breakers" and the more recent "Comin' Round the Mountain" have scored over their heavier contemporaries in all sections of the country.

Recognizing this fact, Paramount pictures followed through with a new comedy with music. This is not to be mistaken as a musical comedy. There is a vast difference, namely, that more attention is given to plot and story, with just enough music to lift audiences out of the doldrums. The picture referred to is Bing Crosby's "Rhythm on the River", which tells the story of a small town composer who goes to the big city and becomes a "ghost writer" for a prominent song writer who has lost his knack. And there he meets the girl, and they collaborate, he doing the melody and she the lyrics. They become a pair of "ghosts" until they branch out for themselves, a situation leading up to many hilarious moments, and to a climax that definitely puts "Rhythm on the River" in the class of entertainment Mr. and Mrs. Public are clamoring for today.

Select Junior Shorts

A selected program of Junior units have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including the popular Belle News with its latest world news events, Popeye in a funny cartoon, "Wimmin Hadn't Oughta Drive", and an unusually interesting Paramount Pictorial in Technicolor. On the week-end matinee a pleasing chapter of "Oregon Trail" will be exhibited.

"The Mortal Storm"

In "The Mortal Storm", now closing a highly successful engagement at the Belle Theatre, film audiences are offered a drama of compelling power enacted with consummate artistry by a brilliant cast headed by Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Robert Young and Frank Morgan.

On the same program with this story of love and sacrifice—NOT WAR the latest of the "Canada Carries On" Series this one entitled "Squadron 992", is presented This one depicts the thrilling pictorial story of Britain's Air Defences.

SIX BASS CAUGHT ON SIX CASTS

Party of Six Obtain Quota of Bass in Little Over an Hour

Thirty-six black bass in an hour and five minutes. It sounds a bit incredible, but that is the catch hauled in by Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kellett, Chatham Street and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dennis, Lingham Street, and two friends, from the Bay of Quinte off Point Anne the other day.

The highlight of the brief fishing foray was the fact that Mrs. Dennis hauled in six of the finny beauties in as many casts. The seventh cast also drew a fish, but it flung itself clear of the hook as it neared the boat. Mrs. Dennis cast twice more with no results and decided to call it a fishing day.

Mr. Kellett, who is a ticket clerk of the C.N.R., was the "hard-luck" person of the party. Becoming entangled in his line he had to sit by and watch the remaining members of his party haul in the fish, while he tried to extricate himself from his line.

"I never saw the bass bite like they did that day," he said. "They were really hungry and followed the bait two or three at a time." But the good fisherman that he is, Mr. Kellett refused to disclose what kind of bait was used.

"Mrs. Dennis never had such a time in her life. It seemed that her bait was magnetized, for no sooner did it strike the water than a fish struck. She can't believe yet that she caught all those fish," Mr. Kellett laughed. The fish averaged 2 1-2 pounds in weight.

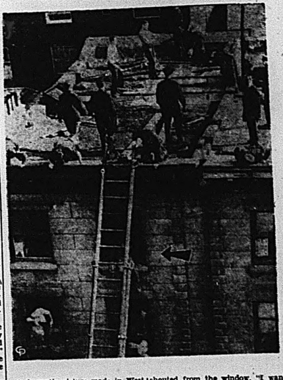
SUICIDE JUMP FOILED



A dramatic picture made in West 22nd St., New York, as Stanley Logan, 22, of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, hung half in and half out of a window when he sought to jump to his death. Police on the roof, neighbors leaning out windows and a priest finally dissuaded Logan's attempt at death. He shouted from the window, "I want to be with her! Go away before I jump!" Logan had been despondent over the death of his bride who had leaped to her death to escape flames which had swept the same rooming house in which this drama took place.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER TEN

Judith dressed with care. While husband Tex was shaving she got out her electric travelling iron, pressed her evening frock. There wasn't time to sent it to the valet downstairs. Before she was through the telephone rang again. It was Michael Dudley.

"Sonia asked me to give you a lift. She's going on ahead. Tell Tex to step on it."

Judith promised to be ready in half an hour. Tex was dressed before she was. He had spoken only in monosyllables. There was still the rebellious, bitter expression about his mouth.

"I'll go on downstairs and wait. You can hurry if I get out. We're late. Don't keep Dudley waiting." He paused in the doorway to light a cigarette, and she saw his hand shook.

"Ten minutes, Tex," she promised. And the door was shut behind him.

Judith sat before the hotel dressing table when he had gone, and inspected her face carefully. I'm 21 and fairly attractive, she thought, trying to analyze herself without prejudice. How could anything come between Tex and me.... But she must hurry! Not keep Tex or his boss, Mr. Dudley, waiting.

She had been just 18 when she fell in love with Tex and married him after a four months' courtship. They had been madly in love. To Judith, the flying world into which Tex introduced her was like walking into a thrilling adventure no el which never ended, just kept on and on. Tex's career was her whole life. As No. 1 pilot of a great air service, he had been important and successful. Judith kept Tex's scrapbooks, like a doting mother. After a while she began to learn something about weather, blind flying, fast ships, etc., etc.

Tex, "just for a kick," he told interviewers, turned to racing ships as a hobby. She began to know the meaning of the word fear. In the last twenty-four hours, for the first time she had learned another, jealousy. It was a hard lesson.

Impatiently she stood up for a last look at herself. As she reached for her light wrap, there was a knock on the door. A bellboy handed in a purple box. The blood rushed to Judith's face and her heart thumped. Orchids! He'd sent her orchids! Her first! The darling! He WAS sorry then! She tore off the cellophane wrappings eagerly, the purple ribbon dropped onto the floor. Inside she could see, through the tissue paper splashes of purple but, before she looked at the blossoms, she picked up the card.

"Michael Dudley."

She stood staring at it. Below he had scribbled: "You rate these tonight, young woman."

Judith's disappointment was so sharp she gasped aloud with the pain of it. Just for a moment, she had been so happy. Slowly she picked up the flowers, pinned them on her shoulder. They were so lovely she touched the radiant petals with her fingers. Her first orchids! The deep blossoms were just what her dead white frock had needed. They made her eyes seem more violet too. She was grateful. They gave her courage.

She caught a glimpse of her figure in the full length mirror, made a little grimace, as she remarked:

"Well, Mrs. Aimes, I guess you'll do! We'll see how the Winthrop woman likes these!" Then Judith was on her way.

Downstairs Dudley was waiting. Tex was talking to some of his friends and did not join them for a moment. She thanked Dudley for the flowers. When Tex joined them, if he noticed the orchids, he did not mention them.

On the drive out, the three were gay. Tex was on his best behavior. Nobody listening would have dreamed there was a rift between the two. She pretended nothing was wrong. And maybe nothing was. Dudley was good company. He liked to hear Judith's laughter. Maybe it would not be so bad, this party.

They arrived a little late, the last of twelve guests. It was a small exclusive party. "Important men in the industry" as Sonia would say.

Sonia, in swirling dark brown, which set off her tanned skin, was ravishing. She wore yellow orchids the color of her hair. And she greeted Judith with enthusiasm. Everybody was cordial and made a great deal of both Tex and Judith.

There were cocktails and laughter. When they went into dinner Judith found herself sitting on Jameson's right. The glittering table was impressive. Everything in the Jameson home was that way. Heavy silver candle sticks, beautiful china and masses of flowers.

The man on her left was an airplane manufacturer from Los Angeles. Of course, the talk was all aviation. Jameson held forth, and Judith listened dutifully. Down the table she could see Tex and Sonia laughing together. They made a handsome couple. Tex with his blond curly hair, and his bronzed face; Sonia with her beautifully curled coiffure in golds and browns. It were as though the same artist had painted them. They looked so bronzed and fit.

Dudley sat across from Judith. For the first time she realized how handsome he was, dark, lean, well groomed. He smiled at her encouragingly now and then. She felt sure he thought she looked nice.

The women, most of them manufacturers' wives, were handsomely dressed, older than Judith and Sonia. She felt they were all equally bored. Here, her own white and silvered frock did not seem quite so grand.

"Dudley's fortunate to have your husband in his company, Mrs. Aimes," Jameson was saying. "Tex is a great flier. He's an asset to any outfit."

Judith looked properly impressed with the pronouncement. Even Dudley was deferential to the great man. How Judith longed to be back home in their apartment, back to the routine of Tex's daily flying! Then she'd remember Elsie's pinched face and her heart faltered.

We shouldn't be here. We should be with Lee and with Lam. They loved Marvin, too, she'd think....

The dinner went on and on. Judith had little interest in any of it. The formality of the dinner party never relaxed. Down the table she could see Tex was having his wine glass refilled repeatedly. Of all of them, he and Sonia seemed the only two people who were thoroughly enjoying themselves. Everybody said all the conventional things. At last it was over.

Sonia rose, and they filed into the drawing room for coffee and liquors. Dudley made his way to Judith's side.

"You're probably pretty bored."

Judith shook her head.

"No, it's a very nice party."

Dudley grinned: "That's what's the matter with it. In a little while Jameson will show you his movies. Took them in South America."

"Are they interesting?"

"They were the first time I saw them. This is my seventh trip."

Sonia was at the piano and Tex was standing beside her turning the music. She played well, some haunting refrain. The two were not talking now.

Then as Judith had been warned, Jameson announced they'd go down to the game room for his movies.

"How lovely we can see your nice pictures," a little dark woman, whose name Judith couldn't remember, gushed at Jameson's side, walking off with him triumphantly.

In the game room they all settled themselves for the amateur movie show. Dudley was just behind Judith. Then the lights were turned off. The show was on.

They were fine pictures but, after the first twenty minutes, Judith grew restless. She could see Tex's blond head outlined over against the wall in the rear. She did not know where Sonia was.

"How much longer?" Judith managed to whisper to Dudley.

"He's only just started," Dudley was hardly reassuring.

"Do you play bridge, Judith?" Dudley murmured. "They're going to do that after this."

"Can we leave then?"

"Not right away."

It was pretty awful, Judith moaned to herself. Worse than she anticipated.

Just how Judith knew that Tex had left the game room, she was not sure. But she did know. He was gone and he did not come back. And she was equally sure Sonia had left with him. But everything had to end, even Jameson's pictures. The lights were on.

"We'll play bridge now," said the great man.

The butler passed more drinks which Judith refused. She forced herself to be cheerful as she stood talking to a Mr. Warren.

"Where's Sonia?" somebody asked.

"She and Tex went after the Duttons. Dudley and Tex don't play. Neither does Mrs. Aimes. We needed two more for three tables," Jameson explained.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was fanning herself after supper, saying to pop, My, such heat, I declare it's too hot to breethe.

Well please make an effort, pop said. I've just been reading an article in the paper here, and it seems there are terrific heat waves all over the country, and according to what it says here we're comparatively lucky. Listen to this, for instants, in Boola, Africa, the heat yestidday was so intense that the air was filled with the smell of scortched wool due to natives carelessly leaving their heads exposed to the berning sun, he said, and ma said, How gassly. Of course, I admit a person is bound to feel fortunate to excape any such discomfort as that, and yet on the other hand there's nothing new about the excessive heat in Africa, because it's proverbial, she said.

That's true, but take this dispatch from Bermuda, a place famous for the mild disposition of its climate, pop said. Well, it seems that in Bermuda they've been pulling fish out of the steaming water and eating them right there on the spot because they're already thoroughly boiled, he said, and ma said, Well of all things, and the ironical part is, people spend good passage money to go to Bermuda for a vacation and we're suppose to be envying them while as a matter of fact they should be envying us.

Isn't it the truth? pop said. And here's a report from Alaska, of all places. It seems it's so hot in Alaska that the Eskimoes are frying penguin eggs on the ice, but surely that must be a slight exaggeration, he said, and ma said, Willyum Potts, I believe everything you've been saying has been an exaggeration, not to say a fabrication, but I dont care, I mean the very thought of all suffering on the part of far distant others has made me feel several degrees cooler already.

And she sent me out for some ice cream to help her stay that way.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 6.—(AP)—Traders cashed some of their profits on the recent stock market rise today and leading issues gave ground moderately.

Declines of a point or so were in the majority near the fourth hour. At that, a few Utilities managed to tack on modest plus signs. Dealings were well under those of yesterday, largest in nearly three months.

Stocks inclined to back away included U. S. Steel, General Motors, United Aircraft, Great Northern, Allied Chemical, Kennecott, Eastman Kodak and U.S. Rubber.

In the Canadian list gainers included Hiram Walker, Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram. Canadian Pacific dipped slightly.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 6 —(CP)—Following four sessions of rising prices on Toronto Exchange prices turned soft today. Volume was small at 150,000 shares.

Steel, Implement and Bank stocks were stronger, several adding about a point. Most of the inter-listed leaders, including Ford A, C.P.R., Brazilian and Canadian Car were slightly heavy.

Losses were light in Golds and Base Metals. Wright-Hargreaves dropped 15 cents and Lake Shore, Siscoe, Upper Canada and Preston were slightly weaker. Waite-Amulet slipped back 25 cents to 3.60.

Western Oils showed no net change.

Butter Prices Remain Firm

Toronto, Sept. 6—The Toronto butter market showed a very firm tone. Early sales of first-grade Ontario creamery solids were made at 22 3-4c and the price later advanced again to 23c. Sellers, however, found it somewhat more difficult to move their butter in the afternoon when buyers appeared to have filled their current requirements.

Demand for eggs was slow and the market was unsettled in tone. Prices in the graded section were nominal, with A-large eggs declining to a range of 32c to 33c, A-medium dropping to a range of 31c to 32c and Grade B eggs advancing to a range of 24c to 25c. In wholesale-to-retail trading A-large and A-medium grades lost 1c each, while Grade B stock gained 1c.

Cheese Holdings Down Sharply

Indicative of the substantial export movement to Great Britain stocks of cheese in cold storage in the nine principal cities of Canada as of Sept. 1 were less than half the stocks on hand a year ago. Butter holdings rose 1,000,000 pounds in comparison with a year ago, but they were 6,400,000 pounds lower compared with the month before.

Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported 13,626,460 pounds of cheese on hand on Sept. 1 in the nine cities, and 40,886,244 pounds of butter, as compared with 33,636,612 pounds and 39,836,307 pounds respectively on the corresponding date of 1939. Cold storage eggs numbered 6,691,408 dozen, against 5,841,570 dozen and frozen eggs totalled 5,213,198 pounds, against 4,738,401 pounds a year ago. Fresh eggs on hand amounted to 423,071 dozen.

mand of the armored fighting vehicles training centre and is now in Washington studying United States tank training methods, inspecting their vehicles and discussing the transfer.

Headquarters of the brigade will be at Camp Borden where ample space and rolling country, all within the confines of the camp, provide the big lumbering wheeled fortresses with room to manoeuvre.

Eventually, of course, the brigade or the division if it grows into one, will be equipped with Canadian-made tanks built under the program set in motion a few months ago.

The brigade will consist of men from the Ontario Regiment, Oshawa; the Three Rivers Regiment; the 1st Canadian Cavalry Regiment, London, Toronto, Winnipeg and Calgary; and the Fort Garry Horse, Winnipeg. All are Canadian Active Service Force units.

The brigade will also have affiliated with it four non-permanent active militia units, the Essex Regiment, Windsor; Calgary Regiment; Argyll Light Infantry, Belleville, and the New Brunswick Regiment.

These units, it is expected will devote themselves to tank training and will provide a reserve upon which the department can draw as the Canadian Active Service Force Brigade is enlarged.

Marlbank Youth Dies of Injuries

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 6 (CP) — Edward Mouck, 12, of Marlbank, died in the Kingston General Hospital today from injuries received when a lumber truck is alleged to have crashed into the rear of a school bus at Erinsville late Thursday.

Gordon Mouck, eight and Mildred Marlin, 18, also injured, are not in serious condition.

The school bus was picking up children when the accident occurred. The truck was driven by Albert Rodberg of Denbigh.

TRUCK STRIPS FENDERS OFF CAR

This is the sad story of an American tourist, whose car had both left fenders striped off as cleanly as though by a sharp instrument without other damage to his motor car.

Mr. G. P. Macklan, of Manister, Mich., was proceeding along Highway No. 2 four miles west of Trenton Thursday when a truck, driven by S. E. Cottrell, of Swansea, Ont., sideswiped the American tourist's car with the result that both the front left and rear fenders were shorne cleanly from the body of the vehicle.

Cottrell told Provincial Constable Patterson that he was endeavouring to pass a parked automobile when his truck sideswiped the Macklan car, which was travelling in the opposite direction. Cottrell assumed the onus of the entire damage.

Political Influence Barred in Enlistment To Canadian Air Force

Ottawa, Sept. 6 (CP)—Air Minister Power, it was announced today, has requested in recent manning orders on enlistment to the Royal Canadian Air Force that there be strict application of a long-standing order that any employment of political influence in applying for enlistment will seriously jeopardize the candidate's chances.

It was suggested that letters of recommendation of candidates would be acceptable from the following: Police Magistrate, Postmaster, Chief Constable, Collector of Customs, Notary Public, Employers, Principal Officer of Trust or Loan Company or other well-known Corporation, Bank Manager, Minister of Religion, Barrister or Solicitor, Physician, Surgeon or School Principal.

In addition to letters of recommendation the Air Force said there should be a letter from a recent or present employer dealing with ability and trade qualifications of the candidate as well as character.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhoades)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

King Carol II abdicated today in favor of his son, Michael, and Totalitarian influence on the Balkans was strengthened with the accession of a dictator government in Rumania headed by Gen. Ion Antonescu.

The "new order in Europe" about which Hitler likes to talk made itself apparent in Bucharest with the pillaging of Jewish shops and beating of Jews by Fascist Iron Guard members who worked without police molestation.

Carol, who had scarcely slept for the last 48 hours, fled to Constanta and sailed aboard the royal yacht with titian-haired Magda Lupescu with whom he lived for five years in Paris before he staged a coup d'etat in 1930 and seized the throne which had been occupied previously by Michael—the "boy king" in those days.

Carol was the fourth European monarch to lose power since the war started and the seventh since Zog and the Hungarian-American Queen, Geraldine fled Albania with their small son when Italian troops marched in.

King Haakon of Norway moved to England after a stubborn but futile hide-and-seek effort to rule from the back blocks of Norway with German aircraft constantly pursuing him. The royal family moved with him.

Christian of Denmark remained in Copenhagen when the Germans marched in. His country decided not to resist and is now under German rule.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland went to England. With her went her daughter, Crown Princess Juliana, and her two granddaughters. Juliana and the children subsequently went to Canada.

Haakon and Wilhelmina are working to aid Britain in her war effort and rally their subjects to the colors. Wilhelmina, in addition, rules the wealthy Netherlands East Indies. Her Cabinet meets in London.

Zog is in Britain with nothing much to do as his kingdom has been taken over by Italy.

Most picturesque of all royal exiles is Haile Selassie, King of Kings and Lion of Judah, now "somewhere in Africa", trying to smuggle himself into his former kingdom—Ethiopia—to organize resistance among his subjects against Italian tyranny.

FARMERS ADVISED

in the first two years of a war and "this winter and possibly the next will be the toughest the farmers are likely to experience during this war period."

Hold Off For Time Advice

He explained "if farmers are going to change or expand any part of their industry it should not be undertaken until the picture of the future is more clearly defined as a result of the effects of war upon our economy and when better returns are more apparent."

Industry would have to thrive in the early stages of the war "if we are to win," but in the later stages "industry will require the business of the farmer. That will be the time to experiment with new machines and ideas which the necessities of war are bound to prode and the farmer will be in a better position to finance."

When the war is over, the Minister said, there likely will be an exodus of "disappointed people" from the old world and if there is, "Canada should be able to construct a new nation modeled with a knowledge of the mistakes of the old and the possibilities of own ability to create."

CONSCRIPTIONISTS RUDELY JOLTED

Rally Surprised Forces to Stave Off More Moves for Modification of Bill

Washington, Sept. 6 (AP).—Rudely jolted by their temporary failure to block a postponement of the draft, United States House of Representatives conscription leaders rallied their surprised forces today to stave off more moves for the modification of the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military service bill.

The unexpected reversal occurred yesterday when the House voted, 185 to 155, to defer the inauguration of conscription for sixty days while an effort was made to obtain 400,000 recruits from the army by one-year voluntary enlistments.

Despite the setback, those in the conscription ranks insisted that the Burke-Wadsworth bill was in no danger of eventual defeat and opponents of the measure did not dispute them. Moreover, indications were that conscription leaders might seek to reverse yesterday's vote before the final roll call.

The occasion for the defeat was an amendment by Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep., New York). It would authorize the President to issue a call as soon as possible for 400,000 volunteers between the ages of 18 and 35. The recruits would be inducted into the army or National Guard upon enlistment.

Would Become Operative.

If 400,000 recruits had not been obtained at the end of sixty days, conscription would become operative to raise whatever additional men were needed to fill the quota.

Opponents of any such postponement frequently told the House that political considerations governed the vote, because if the bill became law immediately, the 60-day period would end right after the November elections.

Fish's amendment, however, would not alter the basic provision of draft legislation requiring the immediate registration of men from 21 to 44, inclusive. Only their summons to a year's service would be delayed.

After winning the vote, Fish estimated that only 200,000 new enlistments would be obtained in the 60-day period, thus making it necessary to call 200,000 conscripts to raise the needed manpower.

FORMER N.Y. MAYOR GIVEN FINE JOB

New York, Sept. 6 (CP)—Mayor La Guardia announced last night the appointment of James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, to a three-year term as impartial chairman of the cloak and suit industry. The salary is $20,000 a year.

Steady Stream Pours Into Camp

Throughout the day a steady stream of troops poured into camp. They were greeted at the station by the brass band of a famous British regiment and a group of senior officers from Divisional and Brigade Headquarters.

Despite a wearisome nightlong trip in a blacked-out rain, the men arrived comparatively fresh, evidence of fine condition after a long siege of training.

Following the roll call, kits were loaded onto trucks and the columns started off for their new quarters. Some went into billets which once housed units of the Canadian 1st Division. Others moved into barracks just vacated by British troops dispatched to positions of readiness.

Busy Writing Home

Shortly after their arrival the men had settled down comfortably. Most of them were busy letter writing or seeking the cable office to send a message home. Several sought out relatives and friends already here.

For instance Sappers I. S. and J. R. Porte from the Indian Reserve at Jackson's Point, Ont., wanted to greet their brother, Harry, 18, who came over with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps in January. They discovered he was too far away and they would have to defer reunion until they got disembarkation leave.

Among the busiest of N.C.O.s were R.S.M. W. D. Winslow of Toronto and his son Sgt. Ronald, 19. Even while the sirens were blaring they bustled around detailing men for ration parties and fatigue duties and others for transportation of stores and equipment.

Where duties had ended in other barracks, the men sought welcome relaxation. A group of sturdy hard-rock and gold miners from Northern Ontario and Quebec sat at a table enjoying a game of cribbage. In the party were Sappers J. C. McCabe, Latchford, Ont., M. A. Adams, Noranda, Que., J. Jenkins, Magnetawan, Ont., G. King, Angliers, Que., and J. S. Blair, Haileybury Ont.

Boys Like England

The boys thought England is "the most beautiful country" and in the words of Sgt.-Maj. J. Dymond, Toronto, "certainly worth fighting for". They expressed surprise there is no evidence of damage by German raiders, about which they had heard so much in Canada.

Kibitzing around the card players was Sapper G. Guignard of Haileybury, whose wisecracks about the play were not seriously challenged. There is good reason. He is heavyweight boxing champion of the engineering unit. Guignard was still nursing an ailing nose which was broken in a bout on the Atlantic crossing.

Another casualty making a fast recovery is Lieut. M. W. Garnett of Fredericton who fractured two ribs on the eve of sailing.

the time of delivery.

Finance Minister Ilsley announced the terms of the loan last night. He was confident that Canadians would welcome the opportunity to put their dollars to work in the war. He believed the issue would be oversubscribed, as was the first loan.

Last January's loan carried an interest rate of 3 1-4 per cent and yields 3.27 per cent. That loan was limited to $200,000,000 for cash subscribers, plus another $50,000,000 for conversion subscriptions.

Opens on Monday

The second loan opens next Monday at nine a.m. If subscriptions exceed the $300,000,000 asked for, the issue will be distributed in a way to give preference to small investors, Mr. Ilsley said. The bonds will be dated Oct. 1, 1940, and mature Oct. 1, 1952. They will be callable as a whole or in part, at 100 per cent, on and after Oct. 1, 1949, or on any subsequent interest payment date, on 60 days' notice.

Bearer bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000 and may be registered as to principal. Fully registered bonds, interest on which is paid by cheque, will be issued in denominations of $500, $1000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000. Denominations less than $100 are not being issued because small investors may put their surplus into War Savings certificates.

Interest will be paid in the lawful money of Canada at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, without charge. Interest will be paid semi-annually, on April 1 and Oct. 1. The principal will be payable without charge in the lawful money of Canada at agencies of the Bank of Canada at any of 10 points across the country.

GROWING

New Bombing Device

The bread basket, named for Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff of Soviet Russia after the device first was used in the Finnish war, holds a cluster of 100 incendiary bombs which usually burn out quickly.

In two cases formidable formations of Goering's Luftwaffe made airdromes their objective today but failed to hit them.

High explosive bombs which struck a hospital in Kent during the night killed a few patients and two nurses. Some of the former were trapped under tons of debris. One nurse clad in night dress crawled into the wreckage to give the injured injections of morphia.

Terrific running fights developed after one formation of 200 bombers and fighters crossed the southeast coast. At least five of the invaders were sent fluttering to earth as Spitfires and Hurricanes tore into the formations with savage fury, split them up and attempted to send them fleeing back across the channel.

Lands in Policeman's Garden

One of the German planes shot down was a Messerschmitt which crashed into a policeman's garden. The pilot was captured unhurt.

An air battle lasting 10 or 15 minutes was fought near a town in the vicinity of the Thames Estuary, where damage was caused by night raids. Sounds of the battle indicated a large number of planes was engaged and that the invaders were flying lower than usual.

During the dawn attack on the London area a middle-aged man was killed in a London district when a bomb badly damaged his house. His wife and child were in a shelter and unhurt.

On the outskirts of London, two planes believed to be German plummeted to earth in flames during a 20-minute battle as eight Spitfires tackled a number of Messerschmitt fighters which became detached from a formation of bombers they were escorting.

Ground watchers said one crashed on a golf course, the other "some distance away."

Another German plane crashed near the London area, and its pilot and gunner were taken to a hospital for treatment of minor injuries. A second plane was reported down in this same vicinity.

Longest Alarm of War

The longest alarm of the war began at 9.17 p.m. last night and ended at 4.50 a.m. today. Just half an hour after the all clear was sounded, sirens sounded again and held the city under a 31-minute alarm.

The Government said the sustained night attack caused a number of casualties, some fatal, in the metropolitan area.

One bomb scored a direct hit on a shelter housing 1,000 persons. Only two persons were injured and none killed.

Several houses were wrecked by explosive and incendiary bombs.

The Nazis also lashed at the industrial midlands, northeast, northwest and southwest England and Wales.

Although the raids were severe, there appeared to be less activity than in some previous assaults.

Meanwhile, observers along the southeast coast declared the Germans had evacuated all French civilians from a 30-mile-deep zone of the French coast opposite England. The Daily Mail said it had learned this action was taken to prevent sabotage and spying on military preparations.

R. A. F. Busy in France

Gun flashes and the flare of bombs on the French side of the Channel last night indicated the Royal Air Force again attacked Nazi air bases and artillery emplacements.

(Berlin underwent an air raid alarm shortly after midnight, and further evidence of R. A. F. activity over the continent came in alarms over Switzerland which usually indicate British planes enroute to Italy.)

On the Mediterranean front, British fleet operations during a six-day period were reported in an Admiralty communique to have been "entirely successful, except that no contact was made between our main forces and enemy warships."

The statement added that the British submarine Pathian, operating in the Central Mediterranean, made two hits on an Italian cruiser and destroyer force Aug. 31, and that the Eastern Mediterranean fleet shot down five German dive-bombers which attacked Sept. 2.

Italian Buildings Blasted

In an attack Wednesday on the Italian-held Dodecanese Islands in the Eastern Mediterranean, the communique said the fleet arm led by the cruisers Sidney and Orion "left none of the surrounding buildings intact" after blasting Italian positions at Pegadi Bay.

In another report on the same action, British naval headquarters in Cairo said the fleet air arm bombed Italian airdromes in Rhodes reporting "Loud explosions were heard, probably from ammunition dumps, and fires were observed in barracks and other buildings" at Calato, and at Maritza "two main hangars were hit, petrol dumps, barracks and workshops set afire."

DICTATORIAL

Abdicated at Dawn

Carol abdicated at dawn in the presence of Gen. Antonescu as mobs of Fascist Iron Guardists—supporters of the dictatorship—rioted in the streets, demanding his abdication and threatening even greater disorders should he decline to step down.

The Iron Guardists had demonstrated most of the night. Steel-helmeted soldiers were called out to protect the palace. The capital was an armed camp.

These demonstrations were resumed—but this time in festive spirit—following public announcement of Carol's abdication and Michael's succession. Tens of thousands of persons stormed down Calea Victorrei carrying flags and photographs of Michael and headed toward the palace.

Expected to Leave Country.

Carol was expected to leave the country immediately, possibly to join Mme. Magda Lupescu, his red-headed friend, who was reported waiting for him at Istanbul aboard a Royal yacht.

Banishment of Mme. Lupescu, long an enemy of the army and the Iron Guard, was one of the first results of Gen. Antonescu's bloodless coup.

It is reported in government circles that dozens of men who were political leaders during Carol's ten-year regime—during which he was an active leader of his government—had been, or would be, arrested by the new dictatorship.

Carol issued a proclamation saying he had decided to abdicate "in the face of misfortunes come on this country".

He said he hoped "by this sacrifice to save my country, and I pray it will not be in vain."

"I give my dear son to the country," the king's proclamation said, "and I hope it will surround him with love and fidelity so that he can execute the serious tasks which are placed on his young shoulders."

Appeal For Support.

Gen. Antonescu, likewise in a brief statement, appealed to the public to support Michael.

As Carol's monarchy thus collapsed, Gen. Antonescu was expected to form a cabinet—he is nominally premier—to include the Peasant Party leader Juliu Maniu and several Liberal leaders who had refused to collaborate with the general until he had forced Carol's abdication.

The abdication itself a dramatic event, with Carol, worn and haggard, finally giving in to the demands of the stern-faced Antonescu. The dictator almost immediately took the oath of office under Michael.

Michael received a promise of fidelity from Gen. Antonescu. As this ceremony was concluded, the premier shook hands with the young king, saying:

"Sire, a prayer to God to help your Majesty and me."

Persuaded to Turn Over Throne

Announcement of the abdication came after Gen. Antonescu had spent many hours closeted with Carol attempting to persuade him to turn back his throne to his son.

Reports of deaths and injuries through rioting and the sound of shooting came to the palace as the new dictator argued that for the good of the country Carol had to step down completely.

Michael took the oath with a firm voice in front of a microphone at 7.30 a.m. The abdication had been at 6 a.m.

Present at the oath-fixing were Gen. Antonescue, the patriarch of the Orthodox Church and the president of the Supreme Court.

The radio broadcast of this ceremony coincided with great street demonstrations indicating the public's pleasure over the change.

Order Issued

Antonescu issued the following order of the day to the army:

"Officers, Non-commissioned Officers and soldiers:

"His Majesty King Carol II abdicated today. Sept. 6, 1940. Voevov Mihai of Alba Julia has ascended the throne of Rumania.

"In these times of upheaval unite our hearts in hope with the whole nation behind Rumania. The army swears allegiance to the new King. All Rumanians hail Mihai V.

"May God and our ancestors guard our brave ruler and help him make his reign true and deeds of victory triumph. May the love and devotion of his people be with him.

"Soldiers, the armies of Rumania always will be first in swearing allegiance to the King, therefore today wherever they may be the soldiers of Rumania will take the oath until 6 p.m. this evening."

Rumanian newspaper censorship was lifted completely as an indication of public celebration. Peasants, soldiers and upper class persons mixed freely in the tremendous crowds which flowed through the streets and into the palace grounds.

Succession of Events.

The abdication came in a tumultuous succession of events resulting from the break-up of Rumania this summer under Soviet Russian demands and direction of the Rome-Berlin axis.

In June, Russia was ceded northern Bucovina and Bessarabia. Then last week Hungary was given half of the vast Rumanian province of Transylvania.

Bulgaria also has demanded the cession to her of southern Dobruja, but final details remained to be worked out as the crisis over the Transylvania cession developed.

The abdication followed an all-night conference between Carol and Gen. Antonescu. A similar conference last night had resulted in the 46-year-old monarch's giving up all but nominal powers.

Carol up to this time had ruled Rumania firmly since returning to Rumania from exile by airplane on June 6, 1930, and being proclaimed king two days later.

Today marked the second time the Rumanian throne passed between Carol and his son, for in 1930 he succeeded Michael, who then was only eight years old.

Renounced Rights in 1925.

Carol in 1925 had renounced his rights of succession and had gone to live in Paris with Mme. Lupescu. Michael was proclaimed heir, and took the throne July 20, 1927, upon the death of King Ferdinand, Carol's father.

Then in 1930 Carol had a change of heart and returned to stage his coup. Mme. Lupescu came with him and as a leader of the Court Camarilla which wielded power behind Carol's throne incurred the enmity of elements represented by the army and the Iron Guard.

With the rise of these organizations to new power this week, the "Court Camarilla" and Mme. Lupescu were thrown out.

The new dictator issued a statement just before this morning's conference saying the relation between the state and the king had been restored to the status in which the monarch would take a non-partisan and neutral role in the government.

Demonstrations Against King

The statement asserted Gen. Antonescu's friendship and cooperation with the Rome-Berlin axis, which had directed the deal which led immediately to the present crisis—concession by Rumania of Northern Transylvania to Hungary.

But violent public demonstrations were staged against Carol, and early this morning gendarmes guarding his palace were replaced by steel-helmeted soldiers ready to suppress possible stronger outbursts.

A throng of Iron Guardists, threatening to lead an armed uprising unless Carol should abdicate at once, took a stand only a few hundred yards from the palace and chanted over and over:—

"Carol must abdicate! But don't let him take the money!"

One Killed in Riot

Earlier, such demonstrations had broken into a riot, also near the palace, which raged an hour before it was broken up by troops. One person was killed and several wounded by gunfire which officials said had been directed into the air, the victims falling under stray bullets.

Iron Guardists raced throughout the capital in motor cars shouting "Down with Carol!" Troops and gendarmes armed with rifles and machine-guns kept them from streets immediately surrounding the palace.

These same demonstrators interspersed their cries against Carol with shouts of "Long live Antonescu!"

After this morning's meeting between the King and the Dictator, official circles reported a degree would be issued during the day removing from office Ion Morosea, chief of the palace secret police and long known as Rumania's "man of mystery."

Iron Guards Roam City

Gangs of anti-semitic iron guards roamed Bucharest, beating Jewish shopkeepers who failed to hang out pictures of Michael in their windows.

Police made no effort to control the excesses of the guardists. Street celebrations of Michael's rebirth to kingship often masked the depredations of the guardist squads.

The old crown council composed of former premiers and close confidantes of Carol was "suppressed," as the announcement said, shortly after noon today. This had been the highest governing body of the old regime.

The council had made the final decisions on surrender of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina to Russia last June and Northern Transylvania to Hungary last week. At the same time the mayor of Bucharest, Gen. Dombroski, was dismissed.

Arrests Ordered

Earlier it was reported that Antonescu had ordered the arrest of other important figures in the Carol regime, including the millionaire munitions manufacturer Milaxa and Gen. Constantine Argetoianu, who was premier after the assassination of Premier Armand Calinescu last year.

It was Argetoianu who ordered execution of hundreds of the then outlawed iron guard in retaliation for the shooting of Calinescu.

The abdication and succession climaxed reported differences between Carol and Michael over the son's sympathy toward the iron guard and his desire that his mother be permitted to return.

At noon Rumania's new dictator, Antonescue, was still without a cabinet. He went to bed for his first real sleep in many days after ordering cancellation of all Rumanian passports.

Princess Helen Returns

London, Sept. 6—(CP)—Princess Helen of Rumania, divorced wife of Carol II, was reported today to be planning to return from Florence, Italy, to Bucharest to be with her son, Michael, Rumania's new king.

Her marriage to Carol ended in divorce June 21, 1928.

Helen, a Greek princess stood by the side of Michael when he was proclaimed king as a child in 1927, and watched over him when the kingdom was governed by a regency.

She chose an English nurse and governess for him, then an Oxford tutor. Michael spoke only English until he was nearly 10.

Helen dropped into the background when Carol took the throne in June, 1930, and went to Florence to live, but Michael paid her periodic visits. Under the divorce agreement, she was permitted to have him with her one month each year.

Why The Weather?

Solar heating. What could be more comforting than to have the sun heat one's house in winter? No oil, coal, or wood to buy, or ashes to take out! About 25,000 solar heaters are in successful operation in the southern part of the United States, and are being thought of for low-rent housing projects. Solar heaters work best, of course, in summer when the sun is high and the sunlight hours long. It has been calculated that the sun's heat, when directed perpendicularly against one square foot of surface, delivers enough heat to raise 7.15 pounds of water one degree Fahrenheit each minute.

Veteran Flier Taking Busman's Holiday Bags 2 Nazi Raiders

London, Sept. 7 (CP).—A veteran Royal Air Force wing commander who is grounded for desk work took an aerial busman's holiday yesterday and it cost the German Air Force two Junkers 87 dive-bombers.

The commander, who fought in the last war, sometimes likes to take to the air to look things over, but, at 37, he is considered too old for fighting. Yesterday he climbed to 15,000 feet and was idling along when he spied eight German dive-bombers.

The commander dived and hit the formation as it flattened out after dropping its explosives. Two bombers crashed under his fire, one in flames.

WILL LAUNCH LOAN WITH MILITARY AND AIR DISPLAY

Display Designed to Convey Some Idea of Actual Warfare

$300,000,000 WANTED

Ottawa, Sept. 7.—(CP)—Canada's $300,000,000 second war loan will be launched next Monday morning with a military and air display designed to convey some idea of actual warfare, according to plans being completed here.

Air raid sirens will shriek their warning in east and west coast cities and in Toronto, preceding a pamphlet bombardment by planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force. This mock bombardment will be carried out all across the Dominion.

Units of the Royal Canadian Engineers were busy today erecting air raid shelters and sand-bag hutments in Ottawa, Toronto and other cities and on Monday there will be parades of troops at all points where they are available.

Pamphlets to be dropped from the air will call upon Canadians to invest their savings in war bonds as way of helping to make sure that enemy planes with more deadly missiles will not attack this country.

Finance Minister Ilsley, carrying out the first big loan operation to be attempted since he assumed that office, will ask for subscriptions to an offering of $300,000,000 in 12-year bonds selling at $98.75, bearing coupons for three per cent interest, yielding an average of 3.125 per cent.

The first war loan was offered last January when the present Defence Minister, Hon. J. L. Ralston, held the Finance Portfolio. It was for $200,000,000 and was heavily oversubscribed.

RUMANIA SWUNG INTO LINE WITH THE AXIS POWERS

Police Round Up Scores of Persons Regarded as Enemies of Pro-Nazi Iron Guard Now in Control

CAROL CRITICIZED

Papers, Released from Censorship, Pull No Punches in Attacking Ex-King

Bucharest, Rumania, Sept. 7 —(AP)—Gen. Ion Antonescu, new military dictator of mutilated Rumania, unleashed a sweeping purge of adherents of former King Carol today and swung the nation 100 per cent into line with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Police rounded up scores of prominent persons regarded as enemies of the pro-Nazi iron guard and the Bucharest press launched unrestrained and venomous attacks on Carol and his red-haired friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu.

Antonescu dispatched especially warm telegrams of allegiance to Hitler and Mussolini, who have guaranteed Rumania's shrunken boundaries against further amputation.

"The first thought of the Rumanian people in their historic moment is to do their duty in expressing belief in the great German people and their great Fuehrer," he told Hitler.

To Mussolini he said "the Rumanian people again send you an expression of their fealty and hope in the Italian people and their great future."

Crowds Quiet, Orderly

The General warned the Rumanian populace that severe punishment would follow any disturbances, and his words had an immediate effect.

Although 10,000 men and women filled the streets near the palace in hopes of catching a glimpse of the new king, Carol's 18-year-old son Michael, the crowds remained quiet and orderly in contrast to previous disorders.

The people appeared well pleased with the ascension of Michael to the throne he once held as boy-king.

Bucharest newspapers, released from censorship, pulled no punches in attacking Carol.

King Called a Scourge.

Universal called him "a scourge which fell on our country" and "an unmoral, alcoholic degenerate who obtained the throne through error, who pillaged the country for ten years, and whose companion and inspiration was the fleeing Lupescu."

Rusty But Still Trusty U.S. Tanks Slated for Transfer

Tanks Will be Used by Canadian Troops for Training Purposes

NEED LITTLE REPAIR

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Sept. 7 (AP)—Army officers indicated today that 229 rusty but still trusty obsolete tanks here were slated for transfer to Canada for training purposes.

Holding somewhat the same international trade status as did 50 destroyers recently turned over to Britain, the 22-year-old monsters would figure in further United States-Canadian deals for air and naval bases, these sources explained.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, forecast the tank transaction at a Washington press conference Thursday.

Only one of the 229—lined up in an overgrown field officially listed as a "tank park"—now is in operating condition, justifying its preferred rating by uprooting trees, towing and clearing land on the post.

But, tank experts contended, the others needed little more than new spark plugs, batteries, fuel and a healthy Yank on the cranks.

Machinery in Good Condition

Despite rusted exteriors of the 75 "heavies" (battleweight 80,000 pounds) the interior machinery is in good condition, immersed in oil and grease. The "heavies" are 34 feet long, have a maximum speed of six miles an hour, and mount five machine guns and two 2.24-inch guns firing six-pound shells.

About 154 lighter tanks of French design known as Renaults are in far worse shape. Many have turret tops off and portholes open to the weather. Their engines can—or could in 1918 turn up eight miles an hour. Armament includes a 37-millimetre or .30 calibre machine gun.

Guns for the ponderous vehicles have long been in storage and the tanks themselves have been out of service for years—since Congress ordered the army to halt expenditures for their maintenance and operation.

During the last war, the army's tank training school was established here, remaining until its transfer several years ago to Fort Benning, Ga.

"We Will Not Rest Until We Defend Our Homes On German Soil"-Odlum

Officer Commanding the Second Canadian Division Now in England Pledges Self and Men to the Task Set Out for Them

By EDWIN JOHNSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Sept. 7.—Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum in an order of the day to the Canadian 2nd Division told his troops today that "we will not rest till we defend our homes on German soil".

The text of the orders:

"The Canadian 2nd Division at last concentrated now comes under my command. With my first message I welcomed it. I am proud to be its leader and I pledge myself to give to it everything that I have or am.

"What I myself undertake I ask of every officer and man. Together we can make this a great division—and we will. We are not here merely to defend Canada and the Empire on British soil. We will not rest till we defend our homes on German soil.

"Already I have taken steps to link this division with the Canadian 2nd Division of the last war. On my car you will see a replica of the flag flown by the divisional commander of that other 2nd Division which helped smash the armed might of Germany of the Kaiser. In the divisional sign on our transport and in distinguishing patches we will wear on our shoulders the spirit of the old division will spring to life again.

Praises First Division.

"The Canadian 1st Division which preceded us to England is recognized as a powerful striking force. Our immediate task is to fit ourselves to take our place beside them, when a new Canadian Corps will come into being. We want to be as proud of it as the Canadians were of the Canadian Corps of 1914-18, but we can only be proud of it if we are proud of ourselves.

"Let us not fail Canada even in little things at this hour. Her honor and her prestige are in our hands In training or in fighting, in discipline, in conduct off duty—wherever we are—remember that while we wear "Canada" on our shoulders we must guard Canada in our acts and cherish Canada in our hearts. To fail her is to fail our own loved ones.

"With character, intelligence, offensive spirit and discipline on our side, nothing can stop us. Again I welcome you all to the task we have undertaken for Canada, for the Empire, for a great democratic cause—and for the emblems of them all, our King and our Queen."

CABINET SHIFT IS PREDICTED

Anthony Eden, Alfred Duff Cooper and Herbert Morrison Slated for New Posts

London, Sept. 7—(CP)—Talk was heard in political circles today that there would be a cabinet reorganization with a three-way shuffle after parliament's recess ends Sept. 17.

It was said the shifts would involve Anthony Eden, now War Secretary; Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, and Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply—with Eden becoming Supply Minister Morrison taking over the Information Ministry and Duff Cooper the War Office.

These circles also forecast that Lord Beaverbrook, now Minister for Aircraft production, would receive a higher position with general supervisory duties.

WORKING CLASS DISTRICT BOMBED

Elephant and Castle District Pounded by High Explosives and Incendiary Bombs

London, Sept. 7 (CP) The Elephant and Castle working class district south of the Thames about a mile from the City, was pounded by high explosives and incendiary bombs in last night's raid.

Several of the bombs fell after all clear sounded and people had returned home from shelters. Some casualties were fatal but only one person was killed when two bombs made direct hits on a five-storey tenement. Rescue workers are still searching for bodies in two or three houses demolished by a heavy bomb just after their occupants had gone to bed.

Sad-eyed homeless people trudged to temporary accommodation from the wrecked houses. In some cases one or two journeys with a baby carriage were sufficient to remove all the possessions they had left.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

(By D. E. Burritt Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Whirring notes of the "hand rattle" to indicate the presence of poison gas sounded in one British community—but it was a false alarm. Wardens sounded the alarm when they discovered an "oily substance and peculiar odor" in the air. It came from a broken sewer and the all-clear was given in 15 minutes.

A home-made shelter constructed by miners along the same principle on which they build their shafts and tunnels has withstood its first severe test—and more than 40 women and children escaped injury from exploding bombs. The miners also provided their own wardens and guards.

Five hundred incendiary bombs were dropped in a Midland agricultural district but wardens said that aside from scorched fields the only damage appeared to be a cracked chimney on a cottage.

One casualty was admitted to a south-east England hospital. He was a 23-year-old soldier, G. Chamberlain, suffering from a dislocated jaw. He had yawned too widely during the raid.

Now that these air raids are lasting longer, newspapers are advising people to carry the phonograph to the shelter and provide entertainment by playing records that "are sweet, soothing, never strident, a good lilt."

Workers in one London area factory have adopted a voluntary speedup during the early part of their shifts so that they have an ample supply of material ready for the day shifts to work on, even if half the night is lost by workers taking shelter.

One youthful Nazi pilot shot down off the southwest coast refused to drink water or allow an ambulance driven to administer smelling salts. Finally the first aid man drank from the glass and passed the salts on the nose of a fellow worker to show they were harmless. Then the wounded pilot smiled and took a drink.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pratt of Herden, Durham, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary—and received as a present an air raid shelter. Their six sons and four daughters clubbed together to buy the gift for the old miner and his crippled wife.

Jack Masterman, 12, who reached Canada a couple of weeks ago, wrote in his first letter: "....One big difference is that we have only three meals a day in Canada but the country is lovely...."

Suggestion that sirens have not been sounded until after bombs have been dropped has led the Daily Express' anonymous cartoonist to present a man and woman standing in bathrobes looking a little puzzled. Beneath them is the following: "I don't think it can be all over yet, dear. They've not sounded the warning."

GERMANY ADMITS BRITISH AIR RAID QUITE EXTENSIVE

Bombers Reach Military Objectives Despite Heavy Anti-Aircraft Fire

RAILROAD HIT

Potsdam, Spandau, Bradenburg and Other German Cities Visited by R.A.F.

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 7 —(AP)— British bombing planes staged a three-hour raid on Berlin early today, flying low over the capital to drop a hail of high explosive and incendiary bombs in the most spectacular attack of the war.

The British pilots made long shallow dives despite a furious barrage of anti-aircraft fire.

Fires were started in the centre of the city and especially in the northern section. Blazes continued to brighten the skies long after the all clear signal, so that throngs of people lined the sidewalks, staring for the most part silently at a spectacle which gave Berlin its nearest similarity to a war zone in generations.

At least two civilians and some soldiers were killed and others were injured.

One railroad station in the industrial suburb of Tegel was damaged by an explosive bomb and a warehouse in the centre of the capital and a railroad yard were fired.

Part of General Raid

The attack on Berlin was part of a general raid on Germany in which Royal Air Force bombers have crossed The Netherlands border in waves, some going into the industrial Ruhr and others continuing eastward to Berlin.

They dropped numerous flares over Potsdam and Spandau as well as over Berlin. In Brandenburg, 37 miles southwest of Berlin, a searchlight battery was hit by a bomb. One light was smashed and several soldiers killed or injured.

In Berlin, barrage balloons (long an important part of the defence of London) were raised in some sections for the first time.

In the centre of Berlin an incendiary bomb set fire to the old Moabit courthouse, scene of many a famous trial, including that of the evangelical Lutheran pastor, Martin Niemoeller.

Soldier Killed by Falling Wall

Prisoners awaiting investigation found safety in a cellar, but an officer was killed by a falling wall. A doctor and one other were injured.

This courthouse was just across the street from a barracks, while the struck warehouse was in the vicinity of a railway station. Both were hit by low-flying planes.

In another part of the city, two bombs fell 40 yards apart in a street in a workers' residential area, killing a workman and injuring seven others and blasting out a section of the street car line.

In the northern section, the top storey of a factory which makes radio apparatus was set afire by an incendiary bomb.

This blaze, together with the fires at the courthouse, the warehouse and the railroad yard, threw a heavy cloud of smoke over the northern section.

Correspondent Scorns Nazi Claim Portsmouth Dockyards Crippled

Ned Russell Says Naval Base Working at Wartime Pressure

NOTHING VITAL HIT

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—A visit to the dockyards at Portsmouth was described by Ned Russell, in the American Press, the British Broadcasting Corporation reported Friday.

Scorning the German claim that the dockyards at this place are so damaged that they are of no use whatever, Mr. Russell writes:

"The naval base there is working at wartime pressure, virtually unmindful of the minor effects of the heavy bombing attacks. I spent an entire day touring the naval yards, examining the damage done by high explosive bombs and watching thousands of men at work on ships, docks, in foundries and in machine shops. I also studied the effects of high explosive and incendiary bombs which rained down on the city's shopping centre, the residential area and the workers' homes.

"I left convinced that naval facilities there were virtually unhampered. Several 1,000 pound bombs had landed near important targets but nothing vital to Britain's war effort had been hit.

"I saw a four-storey building which crumbled like paper underneath a terrific explosion. A 400-yard area had been demolished by three high explosive bombs. Scores of buildings and small apartments were in ruins.

"I found no evidence, however, of fires in the naval yards, and casualties there had been small. A few workers were killed when a bomb ploughed through thick concrete into a bomb shelter. Most of the bombs aimed at Portsmouth fell into the water or in open spaces.

British Defences Continue to Check Nazi Air Attacks

Thirty German Planes Turned Back by Anti-Aircraft Fire—Two Shot Down

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—Germany reduced the scale of her aerial operations against Britain today.

The attacks were confined mainly to areas in the northwest, the southwest and the southeast.

The Nazis lost at least two planes in battle.

A school and other buildings were damaged by raiders in a west country cathedral town. No casualties were reported.

There were some casualties, however, when a bomb dropped in the neighborhood of an airdrome in Kent in an attack which was unsuccessful.

Thirty Nazi planes, approaching an airfield in the southeast, were turned back by anti-aircraft fire. A bomb fell in a field.

Another formation almost destroyed an historic schoolhouse in a southwestern town. Boys were at play nearby, but none was hurt.

Damage in the northwest was confined mainly to broken windows when bombs fell in a village and near a cemetery.

Bombs Showered on Coast

High explosive and incendiary bombs were showered on the coast by a formation which swept overhead just before dawn in a thunder of anti-aircraft fire.

London itself, which experienced six air raid alarms—a record—between dawn yesterday and midnight last night, was quiet during the early morning hours as Hitler's aircraft struck at scattered objectives elsewhere.

A bulletin this morning said that the attacks on Britain last night were scattered with damage and casualties generally slight. Most of the night attacks came before midnight and were centred on London and northwest towns, it was said. After midnight the attack was much curtailed.

Some Killed By Bombs

Industrial buildings and houses were damaged in eastern and southern districts of London. Water and gas mains and roads were damaged. Some persons were killed and others injured. A hospital was among the buildings struck.

The capital's last air raid alarm of the night came at 11.33 p.m. (6.33 p.m. E.S.T.), just 22 minutes after the fifth alarm had ended, and lasted until 1.01 a.m.

Fires started during the previous raid were still burning when the Germans swept over the city for the sixth time in less than 18 hours. Several additional blazes were set by bombs which the last wave of raiders dropped in a crowded area, but the casualties were believed relatively small.

The Germans employed a new technique in their attacks on the London area during the night, dropping flares in chains to illuminate the capital with an eerie light before unloading their bombs.

Scream Bombs Used.

Several scream bombs were dropped by the raiders, their high-pitched shriek rising above the hammering of anti-aircraft guns.

One bomb, which fell in a district hitherto untouched by the raiders, exploded near the entrance to an air raid shelter, but none of the several hundred persons within was injured.

Response to Loan Will be Watched Closely by Germany

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP).—Canada's response to the second war loan next week will be watched closely by leaders in Germany and Italy, eager for some sign they can interpret as a weakening of the fabric of empire, Hon. Charles A. Dunning said Friday.

Mr Dunning, chairman of the National Subscription Committee, issued a final statement to the committee and the public before loan subscriptions open Monday.

"Our enemies, ever since Canada and the other dominions and the colonies sprang to arms by Britain's side," said Mr. Dunning, "have been deluding themselves and their people with the hope that the empire would fall apart as they had so vaingloriously predicted. They seek even the smallest crumb that can be magnified into propaganda to give new life to the failing enthusiasms of their own peoples.

"It is no exaggeration at all to say that Germany and Italy, therefore, will measure Canada's temper, determination and enthusiasm in this tremendous struggle, by the subscription of the second war loan. Canada will not fail to give Europe's dictators the answer.

"As we approach the zero hour when the books will be opened, I wish to address this message to my colleagues of the National Subscription Committee throughout Canada. I know from experience that they will do a good job. They will do their very utmost. I ask them to leave no stone unturned."

LADY BORDEN DIES IN OTTAWA

Wife of Former Prime Minister of Canada in Ill Health for Nearly a Year

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP). — Lady Laura Borden, widow of Canada's prime minister of the first great war, Sir Robert Borden, died at her Ottawa residence today.

Lady Borden, the former Laura Bond of Halifax, was 78 years old and had been in failing health for nearly a year.

Death came at 4:40 a.m. EDT.

Funeral arrangements will not be completed until the arrival later today of Henry Borden of Toronto, nephew of Sir Robert who died in 1937.

Lady Borden leaves three nieces, Mrs. Fred Trotter of Antigonish, N.S., and Misses Grace and Marion Bond of Halifax.

When Sir Robert was first elected to the House of Commons in 1896, Lady Borden came to Ottawa with him during the parliamentary sessions and took up permanent residence in the capital when he was named leader of the Conservative party.

After Sir Robert's retirement from politics, Lady Borden accompanied him on many visits abroad and to Washington.

For many years Sir Robert and Lady Borden spent their winters in Georgia, latterly at Sea Island Beach.

JEWISH SHOPS SMASHED

Bath, Me., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Show windows of five stores in the business district here, all owned by Jews, were smeared early today with varnish and the tires of a fruit and produce truck, also Jewish-owned, were slashed.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

RAWDON FARMER HAS RECORD YIELD

Near record yields of grain are being claimed for the 1940 season in many sections of Ontario, but it is extremely doubtful if there will be any crop to equal that of Mr. Clarence Sutherland of Rawdon Township. A yield of 80 bushels per acre has been reported on many occasions and is considered an exceptionally good yield but it fails to match that of Mr. Sutherland by quite a score.

Recently Mr. Sutherland, who lives on the second concession of Rawdon, threshed 1,650 bushels of oats out of a fifteen-acre field, or an average of 110 bushels to the acre, a record which is claimed to have never before been equalled in this section of the province. Another Rawdon farmer, Mr. J. C. Gay, who lives in the same section, threshed 600 bushels from a six-acre field or an average of 100 bushels to the acre. In both instances the oats grown were Erban.

BELLEVILLE YOUTH ESCAPES INJURY

Endeavoring to escape a large cave-in of sand while working in a northern Prince Edward county gravel-pit yesterday, Norman Dall, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dall, North Front Street escaped with severe body bruises and lacerations. He was rushed to his home immediately following the fall and was treated by Dr. R. A. Flynn. Today his condition was said to be good.

Young Dall was working with Morley Smith local trucker, when without warning an overhanging jut of sand suddenly collapsed. Dall was warned in time but not sufficiently so to prevent him from being struck with a large quantity of the material. The force of the blow drove him beneath the truck. He was taken to his home by Smith.

27 REGISTRATIONS MADE AT CITY P. O.

A total of twenty-seven persons have registered at the Belleville post office since the three-day period of National Registration, ending on August 21st., was completed, it was revealed by postal officials this morning. Of this number only three were persons seeking registration because of having been on holidays outside Canada during the time set aside for the national stock-taking. The other 24 were minors who have celebrated their sixteenth birthday since August 21st.

CATTLE MOVEMENTS TO U. S. HEAVY

Cattle movements to the U.S.A. and other parts of Canada from this part of Ontario have been exceptionally heavy during the past two weeks, according to Dr. O. J. Reed, Veterinary Inspector for this district.

Fifty head of pure - bred and high-grade Holsteins consigned to Howard R. Lech Innesburg Falls, Vermont, from W. F. Scott, Campbellford, formed the heaviest shipment. Gerald Anderson, Prince Edward County, shipped two head to E. R. Fairbanks, Janesville, N.Y., while E. Levine and J. Sherman shipped 35 head to a Montreal buyer. Other shipments of Hastings and Prince Edward cattle will leave next week for points in Massachusetts, Dr. Reed stated. All cattle were tested prior to shipment.

EGGS HOLD STEADY

Belleville market was flooded to almost every available inch of space on Saturday morning as the most complete offering of fall fruits and vegetables of the season was offered. Peaches, for the first time this season were offered in quantities, selling for a new low of 50c per basket for No. 1's and 40c for No. 2's. Plums sold at 45c and 50c per basket, gages at 50c per six-quart basket and pears at 50c per basket or at $3 per bushel. Apples held steady at 30c per peck for Alexanders and Wealthy or at $1 per bushel.

Huckleberries still continued to be offered but vendors claimed the season was practically over although blueberries held at the usual price of 15c per quart or at 70c per basket. Black currants sold at 15c per box. Tomatoes dropped to 65c per bushel, with six-quart baskets selling at 20c and eleven quarts at 30c.

On the vegetable market cucumbers again rose sharply in price, with six-quart baskets of gherkins selling at $1 with the larger variety selling downward to 50c per basket. Pickling onions sold at 60c per basket. Cauliflowers ranged from 25c downward, beets were 25c per basket, celery 10c per head, cabbage 10c and three for 25c. Bunched vegetables sold at 5c per bunch.

Corn on the cob sold steadily at 25c per dozen ears and potatoes held at the usual price of 25c per peck or at 85c per bushel.

Eggs held at last week's prices with Grade "A" large selling for 35c per dozen with other grades ranging downward to 33c. Pullet eggs were 25c per dozen. Butter sold at 30c per pound. White fish sold at last Saturday's price of 22c per pound while a limited offering of trout was to be had at 28c or at 32c sliced.

Welders, Machinists Of Summer School Gainfully Employed

Although the demand for skilled labour has reached a peak in Canada, the success with which the graduates, of the recent War Emergency Summer School, conducted under George Ferguson at the Belleville Collegiate, met was not only gratifying, but attained employment for the pupils beyond the most expected measure.

Practically all of the welders and machinists to have graduated through the War Emergency Summer School here are now gainfully employed. Of a class of 16 welders, who took an advanced course here, 13 are now employed as full-time employees throughout Eastern Ontario.

An example of how successful the school teachings were received was brought to the fore yesterday. George Dunbar, of Port Hope, had enrolled in the local W.E.S.S. and graduated ten days ago as a welder. Returning to Port Houe, Mr. Dunbar obtained part-time employment in that town, but his work was so satisfactory as a welder after a day and one-half of employment, that he was given full-time employment at increased wages after only working a few days.

"We are having difficulty in finding skilled labour to fill the many jobs that are open in this district, despite the success of our Summer School, as the demand for skilled labour is increasing with rapidity", declared one of the local teachers today.

Police Blotter

Complaining that a hit-and-run motorist had run down his dog and killed it at the intersection of James and West Bridge Sts., yesterday, Bryson Reid, 131 West Bridge St., later provided the local police authorities with the possible licence plate number of the vehicle said to have been responsible.

"After the car had run over my dog, the driver slowed down momentarily, but later increased the speed of his car and drove rapidly over the hill," reported Mr. Reid. Police are checking the owner's name as corresponding to the license plate number provided by Mr. Reid.

Two bicycles were reported stolen in Belleville last night, but were recovered and returned to their rightful owners. The bicycles, which had been left parked on East Moira St., were found abandoned on Station St., apparently taken by joy-riders. The bikes belonged to William Wensley and Leon Spafford, both of whom reside on Herchimer Ave.

No arrests being necessary in the city during the past 24 hours, three transients slumbered without incident in the cell block last night.

Capital Closeups

(By Ross Munro, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 7—(CP)—Next week likely will bring some important disclosures about discussions of the joint Canada-United States Defence Board. It meets here Monday and Tuesday and there are indications a statement giving some details of the defence understanding being reached will be made.

The negotiations in Ottawa went smoothly, sources here state, and agreements are expected soon on important aspects of co-operative defence strategy between the two countries.

Any more big news is going to be hard for Washington to take. This flustered capital is still trying to catch up with the lightning developments of the past few weeks which saw this nation's government take a firm and determined stand against potential aggression in the western hemisphere and give the British Empire new support within the limits of America's non-belligerent position.

War Department jottings: Gen. George C. Marshall has been United States army chief of staff for 1 1-2 years and the army is finding it has a man of experience and drive at its head in this rugged soldier. . . . He breaks the tradition of West Point graduates heading the army. . . . The general went to Virginia Military Institute.

Gen. Marshall's keenest personal interest lies in development of the new American armord corps. . . . He's a friend of Canada in Washington. . . . A Canadian newsman gets a hearty handshake and a cordial welcome.

He appears at a Press conference in a light fawn suit. . . . No uniforms here when the country's not at war. . . . His advisers—most of them colonels—keep passing him notes of advice as the newsmen question him. . . . He doesn't pay much attention. . . . "They've just told me not to give you boys off-the-record information," he says dryly, laying down a note. "Well, off-the-record it's this way . . . ."

Short Washington memoirs: The way State Secretary Hull gloomily surveys interviews, a precise and courteous gentleman, but he cut loose in one talk, which could not be reported, and in bluntest language justified the destroyer bases deal. . . . The Roosevelt touch in the White House (which incidentally needs a new coat of paint badly) . . . in the Press room is a photograph of the President at his desk and scrawled underneath in Mr. Roosevelt's own hand is "To the White House correspondents from their still devoted victim."

PUBLIC SWIMMING OFFICIALLY CEASES AT PARK TONIGHT

Public swimming in Victoria Park will officially cease tonight, Chairman of the Parks Board, W. A. Woodley announced today. Those swimming in the bay from this date will do so at their own risk, he stated.

Commenting on the season just past, Chairman Woodley stated that the board took pride in the fact that no accidents of any nature had occurred. The public had co-operated very well with the board and the result was a fine season. The park had been kept clean and had been a credit to the city.

Appreciation of the co-operation of Motorcycle Officer Douglas Ellis of the city police force was also expressed by the chairman. The officer, he said, had patrolled the park at regular intervals and had done much to reduce the usual nuisances met with during the summer months.

STEEL SAVES BY STANDARDIZATION

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—To ensure utmost economy in steel consumption, the British Standards Institution is co-operating with the Ministry of Supply by preparing a war emergency standard for black bolts and nuts. Manufacture of these to the new standard will save about 60,000 tons of steel annually.

1,469 CHILDREN LANDED

London, Sept. 7 (CP Cable) — Statistics given by Geoffrey Shakespeare, Under-secretary of State for the Dominions, show that according to latest information 1,469 children have arrived safely in Canada under the official sea evacuee scheme. He added that there have been no arrivals under the scheme yet in Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

RAWDON FARMER IS FOUND DEAD IN MOTOR CAR

Believed Well Known Resident of Community Stricken With Heart Attack

NO INQUEST

Undoubtedly the victim of a heart attack, 68-year-old William Robinson, Rawdon Township farmer, was found dead in his parked motor car on Highway No. 14 near the home of George Bailey, Rawdon Township, early today. Provincial Police were notified and after investigating in the company of Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, no inquest was deemed necessary.

The ignition of Mr. Robinson's automobile was turned on as were the lights of the vehicle when it was discovered by Mr. Bailey early today. Mr. Robinson had slumped over in the front seat and had been dead for some considerable time, Dr. Robertson revealed.

Provincial Constables Grayling and Patterson investigated and later stated that apparently Mr. Robinson had stopped his car momentarily enroute to his home last night. When he turned the ignition key on to restart the car it is believed he was stricken suddenly with a heart attack. The late Mr. Robinson is a well known Rawdon Township farmer having resided in the vicinity of Harold for many years.

COFFEE-RATIONED

Vichy, France, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Petain government added coffee to the list of rationed foods today for residents of unoccupied France. Other products already rationed include sugar, rice, soap, lard, spaghetti and macaroni.

A USELESS WAIT

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—It took nine days to unload a truckload of coal consigned from the Midlands to "Somewhere in England." The delay wasn't due to official bungling or red tape. A wagtail had built a nest in the truck and the consignee waited nine days hoping its eggs would hatch. They didn't.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday September 8

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds promise of very lively conditions, with the pursuit of advanced goals spurring to clever use of highly stimulated intellectual and creative faculties.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an exceedingly lively enterprising and productive year with much energy, talent and ambition directed to capturing high goals and cherished ambitions.

A child born on this day may be extremely talented and ambitious, with high aims and aspirations, in securing which it may be defeated by its own over-expansive, high-powered and too talkative efforts.

For Monday, September 9

MONDAY'S astrological forecast, judging by the lunar transits, is a rather adverse one. There are indications of pitfalls, traps, intrigues and various phases of duplicity, misconstructions and self-undoing. In all activities use prudence, caution.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of subtle dangers, deception, betrayal and clever intrigues unless they keep alert to all manner of traps and secret machinations.

A child born on this day, although having a bright mind, shrewd and clever, keen insight and quick intuitions, yet may be carried into schemes and intrigues reflecting on its integrity. Its education should be supervised.

LET'S HAVE FREE TRANSPORTATION FOR SOLDIERS

There was another dispatch in the papers yesterday telling of two soldiers who were killed while hitch hiking a ride from their homes in Penetanguishene back to camp. This is only one of several accounts of soldiers who have been killed recently one way or another while travelling along our highways.

Motorists as a rule are glad to help a soldier reach his destination but it is not a pleasant thing to see these men reduced to "thumbing" rides in the same manner as tramps and transients. If they have to travel long distances most of them do not have sufficient funds to spend on transportation fare and so they adopt the present system of getting there with the least expense.

In agitating for special transportation facilities for service men, the Ontario Municipal Association, acting upon resolutions from several centres, has urged free transportation. The railways have made an important concession in granting single fare for return trips, providing the man is wearing the uniform.

We believe the Government should make it possible for any service man to travel free, when on furlough, whether by rail or by bus to his home. We would like to see this undignified seeking of free rides with private cars done away with and we know that the men themselves would welcome such a step with wholehearted approval.

EX-KING CAROL HAS HAD A STORMY CAREER

For the second time in his life King Carol II, of Rumania, has had to abdicate in favor of his son, Crown Prince Michael. The ex-King has had a stormy career as ruler of the small country and the centre of the controversy has been his steadfast friendship for a Jewess, Mme. Magda Lupescu, a woman of no great beauty but endowed with considerable personality and a flare for politics. Living in the shadow of the throne, her influence on the King was said to be very great and by reason of that earned for herself the distrust and hatred of many of the leaders of the Government. It is significant that one of the chief stipulations made by the new premier, General Ion Antonescu, was the immediate banishment of Mme. Lupescu from the country. In earlier days the King permitted his friendship with Lupescu to break up his marriage with Princess Helen of Greece, who obtained a divorce from her husband in 1928.

King Carol was married morgantically to Mme. Ziza Tabrino with whom he eloped to Odessa during the First Great War but divorced her to marry Princess Helen in 1921. In 1925 he renounced the throne because the Government and his father would not put up with Lupescu and he left the country with her for Paris where he resided until three years after his father's death in 1927. His son Michael was made king under a regency but Carol never lost his love for ruling and, in 1930 he returned to Rumania by plane where he was warmly received and supplanted his son as king.

In late years King Carol has done a fairly good job of running his country and the Rumanians apparently were very well satisfied. He spent considerable sums of money modernizing Bucharest and set up a military college to train the officers of the army along modern lines. The army was given some modern equipment bought chiefly from Germany and Czecho-Slovakia. Carol also encouraged the development of the country's oil fields by foreign companies chiefly British, French and American. From these fields he derived a considerable part of the revenue required for his ambitious schemes.

However, since war broke out, his position was rendered more difficult and because he feared German and Russian aggression he endeavoured to play one against the other. Germany was particularly aggressive for she feared the loss of the oil supplies so essential to her war machine. At various times Britain and France protested that too much oil supplies were being diverted to the Reich and to get around the difficulty, Carol appointed a minister in complete charge of these requisites. He immediately decreed that all aviation gasoline was to be kept for home use in case of emergency. How closely this was lived up to we do not know but many suspected that Germany was getting more than her share.

In the early summer of 1940 Russia took things in her own hands and invaded Bessarabia and the north portion of Bucovina. Then Bulgaria claimed her portion of Dobruja and Hungary part of Transylvania. Carol's position was now extremely precarious. He had foes on three sides. For sometime he tried to stave off the inevitable, but Germany wanting to get the Balkan trouble settled so that she could devote her whole attention to Britain, demanded that Rumania accede to Hungary's demands or she would step in and settle it for her. The consequence was a large part of Transylvania was turned over to Hungary. The result of this caused a storm of protest in Rumania that swept the King off the throne. He abdicated to the Iron Guardists, long his enemies, to stave off revolution and chaos. Today Carol joins the list of those kings who have been deprived of their thrones in the past few months.

Carol has not been what we would call a "kingly" king for his conduct, at times, has been open to severe censure of the world and by reason of that will not receive the sympathy of many. However, it remains to be seen whether the country will be any better off under the new regime. If Antonescu institutes a tyrannical government along the lines of the Nazis with accompanying cruelties to minorities and stifling of freedom we do not believe the Rumanians will be as happy as under the carefree reign of Carol II.

Dogs and Men

By R. B. TANNER

(United Correspondent) (C-12)

Dogs which come to England with the reasonable hope of finding there an ideal existence have some difficulty in satisfying their desire. Whatever part of the world they come from, they have first to spend six months in quarantine at or near their port of landing. They do not have at all a bad time. The English, with their traditional love of animals, treat the dogs kindly, feed them well, comb, wash and trim them. Nevertheless, they must wait six months before they can associate on a footing of equality with English dogs. There are, of course, good reasons for this, reasons which perhaps lie deeper than those officially stated.

The official and obvious reason is that Britain's pure, valuable and healthy canine breeds must be securely protected against the importation of rabies. But the deeper motive is much more subtle. It has to do with the dog's soul and, since a dog and his master are one, with the soul and character of Britons.

x x x

I once knew a man in Corfu who, in the presence of fantastically beautiful scenery and a wealth of pretty native costumes, spent his time photographing nothing but dogs. Dogs in their everyday life, dogs in their homes, at street-corners, in company with their own kind and with people of all classes and stations. He was a learned specialist, a collector. But his concern was not with the breed or the appearance of the objects of his investigation. His study was devoted to canine character, to the character of dogs all over the world, in every country and continent. The aim of his research was to establish a deeper, a scientific relation between the nature and character of dogs and the national character of people. With untiring zeal he pursued the dogs of Corfu, as indeed dogs throughout the world, and a large caseful of films was evidence of the extent of his investigations.

This specialist maintained that all dogs had callings, the callings, be it understood, of their owners and that although they do not practise them they bear on their faces all the physiognomical signs of these callings, visible to any trained eye.

"Look at this one", he said. "He is not specially well-bred, more of a terrier than anything else, but he's unmistakably in the boot and shoe trade. Half an hour ago I came across one who was a town councillor."

Everyone who cares for dogs will know what he meant. His point, expressed more generally and less comically, is that a dog takes on the character of its master, the dogs of a particular country the national character of that country. Going still further, it may be agreed that most dogs have a certain facial resemblance to their owners. Thence it is but a step to canine vocations.

No one who is acquainted with the dogs of Berlin will hesitate to take this further step. For nowhere else in the world are dogs so plainly stamped with their calling as in Berlin. Nowhere so little as in London. Berlin is full of growling, bristling professors of chemistry, with morose chiefs of police, with four-legged drapers, tailors and hosiers, lawyers and followers of similar irksome callings. The Berlin dogs, alas! mirror to an extraordinary degree the sweating, striving, competitive, under-selling, barking, biting, snapping habits of their masters. Their own dog's souls have been submerged and swollowed up in their callings. Are they even dogs at all? How fatal, how suicidal is the fidelity of a dog's soul! To-day, among Berlin's dogs may be found even commanders of concentration camps!

But what of English dogs and their vocations? Those rough Scotch and Irish terriers, whose bearded faces seem to qualify them for university chairs? What of the gentle Bedlingtons, like blue lambs? And the whippets, diminutive greyhounds, with their slender grace and fawning affection? What of the Airedales, fox-hounds and Corgies, the Dandie Dinmonts, the spaniels and bull-terriers? How do all of these earn their living? Where lie their professional interests, what is the goal of their constant effort?

Well, the English are a law unto themselves. To enquire of an Englishman his calling, profession or business is in the last degree tactless. If an old acquaintance is led by material reasons to ask such a question, he asks it with apologies for the breach of so universal a convention. An Englishman does not regard his means of livelihood as the most important part of his life. To advance steadily in his calling, to live and die every inch a cotton-spinner is a thing he never dreams of. He has no wish whatever to be recognized by feature, gait or bearing as, for instance, a distinguished member of the shoe-trade. It is enough for him to be plain Mr., a member of the human family and, of course, a gentleman. How unseemly he would find it to have his profession traced upon his features with all the lines drawn by care and cupidity!

And if we turn to English dogs and observe their behaviour, we find the same thing. None of them will ever be suspected (like master, like dog) of being a lawyer, a stationer or a tax-collector. Untroubled by any professional scruples, the candid canine soul looks out from behind clear eyes. As they lie on the lawn or take their walks, their minds are unconcerned with such matters as prices, summer sales or means of payment.

The English dog will approach his like peacefully and respectfully—and without trying to sell him something. They do not show their teeth and growl or snap. It never enters their minds to trip anyone up or without reason to regard a passer-by as a rival, a thief or a political enemy. They do not even chase cats; instead they seek of their own volition to please their owners. They are affectionate, gentlemen to the ugliest mongrel, without fear, ill-temper or envy. And if not complete replicas of their masters, they are at any rate images of the latter's better and higher selves and, as such, are loved, treasured and respected.

Yes, you are kindly and well-disposed, you English dogs, and no spiteful or wicked thoughts come near you. Like your masters, ship's captains whose world extends from Burma to British Guiana, you think in continents, not in parishes. Not yours to bark angrily at a man from the neighboring village or to plant your teeth in a beggar's legs. Loved and loving companions of a free people, a genuine and indigenous element in a great nation, you have the most spontaneous charm and the best manners in the world.

And that is why dogs landing from abroad must spend six months in quarantine. They help to learn to think and feel like British dogs, to shake off their trades and professions, to forget unfortunate habits of speech and to revert to that state of innocence from which their former masters by long years of vocational activity have weaned them. Only then, and only after every trace of a vocational physiognomy has been removed, are they fit to share in the joys of an English dog's existence.

78,750 Tons Shipping Lost Week Aug. 26

One small Danish vessel of 107 tons, the Rise, was the only merchant ship reported sunk in press dispatches in the week ending Sept. 6. Wartime restrictions, however, prevent news of most sinkings from leaking out.

The British Admiralty released its summary for the week ending Aug. 26, showing that in that period 16 ships, including 13 under the British flag, with a total tonnage of 79,750 tons, had been lost due to enemy action.

Canada's Historic Link With Old St. Giles

The story of the English people may be compared to a noble tree growing from a small shoot, which was planted in fertile soil in England. There it was nourished by the rain and sunshine, strengthened by the storms that threatened as now to destroy it, and enriched with healthy grafts until it spread to lofty brances to the winds of heaven and bore much wholesome fruit for the nations of the earth. The soil in which this shoot was planted was England, and the shoot itself was a portion of the race from which the sea wolves come

To all of us here in Canada, be he Celt or Anglo-Saxon, England is more than a name. It is something so dear, so precious, so eternally woven into the warp and woof of our being that just to mention that one word, England, brings memories teeming down the corridors of time, so strong, so fervent, so compelling that spontaneously from the depths of our hearts there springs unbidden the pregnant prophetic words, "There must always be an England."

"My footsteps fall on English Earth
In sound of English Sea,
And now as though unfelt before
Its glory falls on me."

Everywhere the life of the English people from the days of the Romans is recorded in England's countryside, and her cities, villages and towns. From scene to scene, from surprise to surprise, the lore and spell of a great and moving past stirs the heart of a Britisher as he visits England or contemplates from afar in deepest reverie her manifold glories.

It is the tangible presence of the past pervading almost every inch of English soil that makes England so wonderful, revealing as it does in kaleidoscopic fashion chapter after chapter of British history, the history of our great British ancestors.

A savage and unrelenting foe at this very moment is bombing the countryside of England and destroying sacred witnesses of the past in church and sacred historical shrines of the British race. The despatches tell of the indiscriminate bombing of churches and unfortified places. The sacred things that tell of the evolution of a Christian and civilized world feel the angry blast of an uncivilized foe, who would wipe out if he could, at one blow, every vestige of British culture and freedom and tradition from off the face of the earth.

There is nothing so English in the whole world as the Church. The men who built the churches loved them and were proud to put their marks forever to dwell upon them. Go where you will in England, there the Church reveals a spirit which knows no time.

The bombing of St. Giles Church (Cripplegate) brings home to us here in Canada the destructive ruthlessness of the Nazi foe, for it so happens Canada has a particular interest in this ancient and historic building, for within the Church of St. Giles lies one who in the far-off Elizabethan days journeyed in little cockle-shelled boats to seek the magic lands of Cathay and India by discovering a Northwest Passage.

He reached the shores of Greenland, passed westward and explored the eastern shores of Baffin Land and Labrador. And today forever his name stands as one of our great Arctic geographical names in Frobisher Bay, for the gallant man was Martin Frobisher at that time, later dubbed Sir Martin, when as commander of the British warship, Triumph, he gave the Spaniards of the Invincible Armada a taste of British steel and shot and shell, and by his sheer bravery and gallant seamanship helped to defeat and drive the invaders from the English Channel through the Straits of Dover to meet irretrievable disaster in the North Sea.

It is no wonder then that Canadian thoughts turn with sorrow and anger to St. Giles at this moment, to St. Giles, built away back in Norman times and restored and rebuilt in the 16th century. It was dedicated centuries ago to the Hermit of the Rhone, who was the special saint of cripples and lepers. It stood a haven of mercy and retreat in the dark days of the Great Plague and it escaped by a kind Providence the Great London Fire of 1666, as also the fire of Jewin street in 1897. Now it has felt the claws of the Nazi desperadoes and reports state that it still survives the terror and ravage of the 20th century Huns.

Around St. Giles hovers the memory and glamor of Elizabethan days, the days of Sir hilip Sidney, of Raleigh and Drake, of Howard and Grenville and Martin Frobisher, and those other knights and cavaliers of the Golden Pen—great Shakespeare and John Milton, and Spencer and Dryden, all the great geniuses that marked the evolution of England as the Mistress of the Seas.

Within the confines of St. Giles lies all that is mortal of England's second greatest poet after Shakespeare. There has rested undisturbed for three centuries and more, the great immortal John Milton, whose magic gift has throughout the centuries brought so many millions of people close to the gates of Paradise and has filled so many souls full of remorse at the loss of such a desirable place and then raised the Paradise again, the remorseful and sorrowing. The writer of such pure English prose and poetry lives in the hearts of the English-speaking world, forever enshrined as one of the greatest of Anglo-Saxon writers.

And now we hear of the desecration of St. Giles by the Nazi bombs, we hear of damage to the noble statue placed by an admiring people within the sacred confines of St. Giles' churchyard to show English reverence and admiration for one of the greatest of her literary sons, John Milton.

And so now as fades before our vision the steeple of St. Giles in reverie we see on a beautiful June morning in the year of our Lord 1576 two tiny ships of 20 and 30 tons burthen lift anchor at Blackhall on the Thames and sail down the stream to Sandwich, where opposite the palace of the Virgin Queen, Queen Elizabeth, they drop anchor. From the decks of the two little vessels we hear a Royal salvo of guns roar out, and anon from the wharf before the palace we see a messenger sent forth from the Queen summoning the commander of the little flotilla, Captain Martin Frobisher, to the Royal Presence.

In gallant words and picturesque we hear the gallant captain tell of the riches of India and Cathay and of the short western passage which he will seek to find to bring home to her the wealth of the Indies and China. We hear his friends, the Earl of Leicester and Sir Henry Sidney, say to the Queen, "'Tis true, Your Majesty, 'tis true!" And then in rich silvery notes we hear Good Queen Bess exclaim, "God grant you safe passage, Sir Captain". And then in an aside to Sir Henry, Philip's brother, we hear her say, "I know a man when I see one".

Thus marked for favor by the great Queen we see the gallant captain raise anchor next morning, June 8, 1576, and sail down the Thames, for those far-off North American shores, which we know today as Canada's Arctic Lands and Labrador, which he found and visited three times in his adventurous life.

And again we see Martin Frobisher in charge of one of the first organized of the famous Dover Patrols, one of the first officers of the British Navy to hold this honor, and as we scan his commission from Good Queen Bess we see these words. "Thou must hold the Narrow Seas".

History tells how Frobisher, during 1587 and 1588, whilst Drake was singeing the King of Spain's beard in Cadiz harbor, maintained command of the Narrow Seas (Dover Strait), and safeguarded the passing of supplies to British troops fighting the King of Spain's armies in The Netherlands.

Today, as the Nazi airmen sail the Straits we feel that the spirit of Frobisher still hovers o'er the Narrow Seas with those of Howard, Drake, Grenville and Hawkins encouraging and working and fighting again for England with the gallant men of Great Britain and her Empire who today still command the Narrow Seas.

And so as now we view the register of the Church of St. Giles we see these words:

Sr. Martyn Ffurbusher, Knyght,
14th day of January, 1595.

This marks the day of his burial in St. Giles, and as we turn to leave this gallant man of old England we hear Queen Elizabeth's words ringing down the years "I know a man when I see one".—D. W. Johnson, in Ottawa Journal.

Stirling and District

Two Residents Celebrate 83rd Birthdays in Same Week

F. T. Ward and Robert Eggleton Both Prominent Churchmen in Community

IN GOOD HEALTH

Stirling, Sept. 7 (Special)—Two of Stirling's most prominent citizens were honoured by their fellow citizens as they both marked their eighty-third birthday. The first took place on Tuesday, Sept. 3rd, when Robt. Eggleton reached his eighty-third birthday and spent the day quietly at the home of his daughter. Mr. Eggleton still enjoys excellent health and the use of all his faculties. Born in the Stirling district he is the oldest living member of the famous pioneer family, whose name he bears. Gifted with a remarkable memory he is a most interesting conversationalist and in his friendly chats with neighbours recalls many interesting changes during his lifetime in the community. He and his wife who also still enjoys good health are recognized as the oldest married couple in the district having celebrated their sixty-second wedding anniversary last New Year's Day having lived a happy married life since the dawn of the year 1878.

Prominent Churchman

Fraternally Mr. Eggleton has been a member of Halloway Lodge L.O.L. No. 215 since 1875 and is an honorary member of Stirling L.O.L., 110 his record for attendance at Orange celebrations is an enviable one having been present at practically all such functions during his entire length of membership. He is a prominent member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, where for a number of years he was Sunday School Superintendent and is still a senior member of the Kirk Session.

F. T. Ward Also Hale and Hearty

On Thursday evening Sept. 5th a large number of guests present at the Stirling Horticultural Society's annual flower show joined in honoring Mr. F. T. Ward veteran Stirling businessman as he too celebrated his 83rd birthday. At the head of the table of honour Mr. Ward was presented with a large birthday cake by his grand-daughter and was assisted in the candle lighting ceremony and the cutting of the cake as the audience joined in singing a birthday greeting to this man, who served his community for more than fifty years before his retirement.

Mr. Ward came to Canada from England as a boy and after living for a short time in Prince Edward County and Campbellford he came to Stirling in 1878, where he followed the tailoring craft having served his apprenticeship to the trade in his native Southampton, England. For more than half a century his establishment was among the leading business places in the village. Throughout those years his honest dealings and quality of workmanship won him the respect and admiration of hundreds of friends, who still remain loyal to him in his days of ease. He served the community in many capacities and was never known to shirk any worthwhile responsibility, which he was asked to accept. For nearly forty-five years his executive ability and educational knowledge served the people well during his faithful membership on the Stirling Board of Education. He is the oldest living member of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling and his knowledge of the church's history has been recorded on many occasions for public use and interest. For many years he was Sunday School superintendent and is still active on the Kirk Session.

No two men anywhere in the county are more sincerely appreciated for their fine qualities than these two friends fellow churchmen and neighbours who reach the same age during the same week and as they exchanged congratulations in sincere understanding of all phases of life with which their 83 years have made them familiar .The entire community joins in wishing them long and happy years of further enjoyment and happiness.

Flower Show Held

Climaxing several days of ceaseless work committees in charge of arrangements for the Annual Flower Show of the Stirling Horticultural Society came the reward of a most successful event from every standpoint. The number of entries was not as large as in previous years but greater knowledge in selection of specimens and in general showmanship displayed by those competing made for great interest and keener competition. A special feature of the event was a supper served in the evening with the proceeds being turned over to the Stirling branch of the Red Cross and this was sufficiently well patronized to make the sum really a worthy one. Over $40.00 was realized from the effort and the serving ability of the capable staff of ladies in charge was taxed to capacity. During a brief interlude following the supper, Mr. William Reynolds offered a baritone solo, "There'll Always Be An England" and community singing was led by Art. Duncan with Mr. G. L. Clute at the piano.

Veteran Member Honored

Another feature of the event was the honoring of the Society's oldest member, Mr. F. T. Ward, who on that day celebrated his eighty-third birthday. Mr. W. C. West gave the address in which he referred to Mr. Ward's increasing interest in the activities of the organization since it began many years ago and the effort he has contributed to its success from time to time. Mr. Ward was then presented with a large birthday cake by his granddaughter, Miss Dorothy Eggleton, and all joined in singing the birthday greeting song.

Belleville Beaches Popular Swimming, Lounging Resort

Wiener and Corn Roasts Take Place Nightly at This Resort

A colorful exemplification of what tenacity of purpose, hard work and the surmounting of almost impossible barriers can do, the Belleville Beaches has now taken the form of a popular swimming and lounging resort.

New buildings have sprung up; the seascape and landscape have been improved and many other changes go to make up the magical transformation that has taken place during the past few months.

Last night a bonfire blazed merrily beneath the silver radiance of a September moon. Around it danced children, youth and grown-ups enjoying to the utmost an old-fashioned wiener-roast. Nearby on a raised platform couples danced to the music of a smart orchestra coming from the "innards" of the latest musical machine.

Nearby a spacious refreshment booth catered to the wants of the crowd.

It is the new policy of the Beaches Association to offer to residents of the city and district and transient population, not only a fine swimming resort but facilities for picnics, wiener-roasts, dances and other summer and autumn outdoor recreations. This winter, the project will remain in operation, officials said yesterday, and tentative plans are now in the process of formation for the erection of an open-air skating rink.

Beaches Furnish Bonfire

At present officials are furnishing the "bonfires" for parties desiring to have the popular corn, or wiener-roasts. All the necessary ingredients will be available at the Association booth. As a result of the work done during the past summer the immediate surroundings are now conducive to the utmost enjoyment of afternoon and evening recreation.

The present fine appearance of the Beaches and their attendant facilities has been due to the efforts of Mr. Reg. Moncrieff, president of the Association, who almost single-handed has wrought the magical transformation of a weedy muddy strip of bay shoreline to the present fine beaches. Working quietly, efficiently his efforts this summer, when financial help was not forthcoming from municipal and other sources, resulted in a public subscription of nearly three hundred dollars. This has been applied to the erection of buildings and the beautification of the waterfront and landscape.

The erection of the dance-platform, refreshment booths and other recreation facilities was done with the object in view of making the project into a self-sustaining one. As further finances find their way into the coffers of the Association additional improvements will be made. It is hoped that by next year, Belleville will be in a position to offer to its residents and tourist traffic a modern beach and swimming facilities

Overseas Forces Given 'Sherry Party' in London By Bovril Limited

Montreal, Sept. 7—Many Canadian troops were among the guests at a monster "sherry party" for members of the Overseas Forces given recently at Overseas House, London, by Bovril Limited, it was learned here today. Guests included also a large number of Australians, Indians and New Zealanders in uniform.

Sir Jocelyn Lucas, chairman of the Welcome Committee introduced the Duke of Atholl, vice-chairman of the Bovril organization. In his address of welcome, the Duke expressed the regret of Lord Luke, chairman of the company, for his unavoidable absence, and said that he felt it was an honor to be asked to welcome the guests on behalf of the Overseas League.

In former days, he continued, he would have referred to Dominions and Colonies, but today he addressed the company as Overseas members of H. M. Forces, for today all members of the Empire were one family, and, though separated by many hundreds of miles of sea, absolutely indivisible cemented together not only by the bonds of kinship but by holding the same principles and ethics. Those many miles of sea might yet perhaps prove a salvation and a strength.

The Empire was right up against it now, and it would take every effort, not only to guard the Empire, but also to save civilization and freedom for those who came after. He need not tell them what was the alternative, nor the great and honourable duty devolving upon every man and woman of the Empire.

He was reminded of what a celebrated ancestor of his, holding the Isle of Man against the King's enemies in the 17th century, retorted to the request to surrender the Isle. It was: "I abhor your treason, I disdain your offer, I scorn your solicitations, and I will keep this Isle to your disadvantage, and if you make any further requests of this nature I will burn the paper and hang the bearer, and that shall be the constant practice of one who counts it to be this chiefest honour to sign himself His Majesty's faithful servant, Derby." That, he thought and hoped, was the type of answer that Hitler would receive if he ever made any offer, and it was the only kind he would understand.

The path ahead was not of this country's seeking, and might be long and difficult, but with God's help and the determination and endurance of the British race, no matter in what part of the world its members might be situated, Britain would win through and would enter into the dawn of a new and better world for those who came after.

He gave the company the Highlandman's toast:

"The day we see you,
The day we don't
The day we kill a deer,
The day we don't
We wish you well."

RUMANIA SWUNG

The newspaper Torunca Vermi declared that now the Jewish Lupescu is gone, "the Jews without their high protector must face the inevitable."

The same paper demanded that the body of Premier Armand Calinescu, after whose assassination last year Carol ordered the execution of thousands of Fascist Iron Guardists, "be disinterred and exposed in the National Theatre Square where the entire nation can spit on it"

Iron Guard sentiment was at a new high. Radio stations played the Guard hymn from noon to midnight yesterday. Almost every shop window was plastered with pictures of Cornelui Codreanu, Iron Guard fuehrer who was slain in 1938. Iron Guardist newspapers sold by the tens of thousands and littered the pavements from one end of Bucharest to the other.

Cabinet All Iron Guardists.

Informed quarters said Antonescu's cabinet likely would be chosen entirely from the ranks of the Iron Guard, whose threats of revolution spurred Carol's abdication.

Juliu Maniu, Peasant party leader, and George Bratianu, Liberal leader, said they would refuse to join the new government because they were opposed to any form of dictatorship, but Constantine Bratianu issued a manifesto urging Liberals to support Antonescu.

Carol's crown policy, formerly the highest governing body in the land, and the Rumanian youth movement were abolished by Antonescu's first decrees.

PREPARE YOUR HOME NOW FOR WINTER

It's wise to remodel and make all necessary repairs on your home during the summer time. The weather is right, labor is plentiful, prices are lower, and it's the most convenient time to have workmen around the house.
It's a wise thing, too, to check the house at least once a year and fix-up little things that have gone wrong. This is a real case of where a "stitch in time saves nine." If you let these little repair jobs go, they can develop into expensive and annoying replacements.
Take a little time out right now and give your home a thorough check-up. Examine the ROOF for leaks and worn-out spots. A leaking roof can mean the necessity for replastering and refinishing inside rooms. Check the SIDING for needed replacements. Look-over the MILLWORK AND SASH. Maybe this would be a good time to build that EXTRA ROOM you've always wanted. You'll find the cost is very reasonable. Some slight MODERNIZATION will add greatly to the comfort and enjoyment of your home.
Decide what you want and then call us up for a FREE CONSULTATION. We will be glad to help you and there is absolutely no obligation on your part.

With perfect Autumn weather lending its brilliance to the occasion the afternoon tea held yesterday at the home of Mrs. R. B. Graham, Montrose, for Red Cross was an outstanding success. Sponsored by the Women's Canadian Club with the co-operation of sixteen other community organizations associated with the Red Cross, the event received enthusiastic response, about three hundred guests being present during the tea hours. Montrose was an ideal setting for the event its spaciousness making possible the entertaining of such a large number of visitors. Mrs. R. B. Graham was assisted in receiving by Mrs. C. E. Argue, president of the Women's Canadian Club. Early Autumn flowers in colorful profusion enhanced the beauty of the reception and living rooms while the tea table was a picture of delicate charm with its centrepiece of pastel-toned asters, petunias and bouvardia and ivory tapers. The wide verandah where guests lingered after tea was bright with masses of orange marigolds. Mrs. R. D. Ponton, Mrs. George Graham and Mrs. R. J. E. Graham invited the guests to the tea room. Assisting in arrangements for the tea were Miss Stewart Masson, who was in charge of the advertising, Mrs. C. A. Cameron, who planned for the transportation of guests, and Mrs. H. O. John Lloyd rendered expert and untiring service in directing traffic.

WEDDINGS

JEFFS—CLOSE

A very pretty mid-summer wedding was solemnized Saturday morning, August 31, at 10 o'clock, at the bride's home, when Annie Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Close, Croydon, became the bride of John Venables Jeffs, Belleville, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jeffs Toronto. Rev. Mr. Truscott officiated.

The living room was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers, caught up with white bells, and an arch of ferns, interspersed with tall standards of gladioli and asters, and a large white bell formed a lovely setting for the ceremony. The Wedding March was played by Mrs. H. S. Gordon, Sharbot Lake, aunt of the bride, and during the signing of the register played "O Perfect Love".

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a street-length dress of white chiffon sheer, and white accessories, and carried a large bouquet of pale pink and mauve gladioli. Miss Isobel Paul, Kingston, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a street-length dress of mauve chiffon sheer, with white accessories and carried a bouquet of mixed flowers. The groom was attended by Mr. Bert Curtus, Kingston, formerly of Belleville.

Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Paisley, Napanee, where 32 guests sat down to a luncheon.

Amid showers of confetti, the young couple left by train for Toronto, the bride travelling in a navy hand-tailored suit, with Queen's blue crepe chiffon blouse, and blue accessories and wore a corsage of red roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffs will reside at 185 Victoria Avenue, Belleville.

Courthouse At Home

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

May I be allowed to indulge in a few don'ts? You say Yes? Here they go.

Don't be a judge at home, extorting evidence from the child concerning his conduct in your absence. Don't hold "Court" with your children. If, when you come home you observe some injured property, replace it or repair the damage if you can, but don't set out to discover the offender. If it is your neighbor's property that is damaged and your neighbor says he thinks your child was the offender, but did not see him do it, proceed in like manner. Replace the property and render satisfactory compensation for the sake of peace.

If a child volunteers confession, try to make him see how serious the matter is, but do not punish him. If the destruction was deliberate it probably was not the first offense; nor is it likely to be the last. Thereafter keep your eyes and ears open. When you yourself observe an offense, deal with it adequately; make it painful. Teach the child while you are with him such care of property as will function when you are away from him. Don't be absent soon again; or if you must be, have a competent adult at home.

Leaving Orders

Don't give commands to your children to be carried out in your absence. Don't tell them what to do or not to do away from home; what to eat or not to eat at school. Commands, to be effective, must carry very certain penalties when they are not obeyed. But how are you to know always when commands to be carried out away from home have been obeyed? You can, of course, engage detectives to report to you. But as soon as you do so you lose the confidence of your child. This loss can never be repaired. You can question the child; but if you do you are almost sure to make him lie. Suppose you forbid him to enter the "sweet shop," or you command him to have milk and spinach at the school lunch. You then have no way of really knowing whether he obeys. You ask him if he has obeyed. If he answers "no" you punish him or register, at least, your disapproval. Next time you question him he is more sensible and practical. He recalls what it was you had commanded him to do or not to do and he replies accordingly, regardless of the facts. The child who under such conditions does not learn to lie is doubtless feeble-minded. When the adolescent child returns from her "affairs," don't hold an inquisition. You may properly make a few requests and lead the child to want to do the right thing in your absence.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My children, 5 and 7, fight constantly in the back seat of the car on the way to church and Sunday school.

A. Have one of them sit in the front seat hereafter. If they still annoy you as you drive, pull out to the side and give each one a good strapping. Do a good job of it. This is much more humane than to run the hazards of an accident. The lives of all of you are at stake.

Q. Suppose a child of three, in rage, threw an object. Would you order him to pick it up?

A. Not if I were acting intelligently. If I did command him he might not obey though I spanked him long and brutally. I might spank him immediately after he threw the block saying, "You must not do that." Then I would either pick up the block myself or leave it lie there. My concern should not be in having the block picked up but in changing the child so he would not be inclined to throw an object in a future fit of anger. Let us keep our attention on the future as we measure values.

Phony Eyelashes Too Obvious

And, please don't tweeze to a single line. Old stuff.

By HELEN FOLLETT

When the beauty trade offered demountable eyelashes to their vast clientele there was a great deal of excitement. The first designs were pretty crude, coarse little winkers attached to a tiny piece of adhesive. All right when the eyelids were lifted, but there was no chance at all of looking shy and glancing downward. It was a dead give-away.

Following came individual fuzzers the ends of which were dipped in a gumlike substance and placed between the shafts of the natural growth. The idea works, but not many women want to bother with them.

Grow Your Own Eyelashes

The thing to do, of course, is to cultivate your own, if the fairy godmother gave you a skimpy supply. Much can be done by daily applications of mineral oil; the hirsute lambrequins feed upon it. It can be kept on all the time, day and night. A shine on the eyelids has charm; eyes seem to reflect it.

Treat the eyebrows, too, applying the oil with an eyebrow brush, grooming the little threads the way they should go. And, please, don't tweeze to a single line. Old stuff. This practice makes the feminine face look masklike and brittle. Clear away the stragglers, then stop it.

x x x

Naturally curly hair requires clever trimming. All tress shearers don't seem to know how to do it. The hair should not be cut across in a straight line, but tapered. If locks are short, it is particularly necessary that the ends should be feathered.

After the shampoo, the hair should have a steaming to bring out the curl quality. Cold water discourages undulations and ringlets. Set the pattern with the comb and the finger tips. There's many a curly head that could be made prettier with correct grooming and a little coddling of wave pattern.

The Red Head And the Henna Pot

By HELEN FOLLETT

Girls with red hair wear beauty crowns all right. They have the laugh on the wimmin who stick their heads in the henna pot. Few of them realize how lucky they are many of them give their flaming tresses only casual attention, which is a pity, because red hair has beautiful lights and shadows, the shafts varying in hue, and poor shampoos film the shafts and dull them.

The blessing of red hair, like many another blessing has a catch in it; eyebrows may be colorless. In that case dark brown mascara must be a part of the beautifying equipment; black offers too great a contrast. Lashes can be touched with mascara.

Choice of Coloring

The skin is usually thin, delicate and without much coloring. Rouge must be applied sparingly and the color must not clash with the top crest. In choosing the lipstick the tone must be carefully considered. Cherry red blobs with coppery-red hair won't do. Lip ointment should carry an orange cast. Painting the human portrait requires discernment and good taste. Nail polish must belong to the same color family as rouge and lip veneer.

In dress, black is the best bet for the red-headed darling; brings out her delicate, cameo-like loveliness.

Lashes can be touched with mascara.

She is about the only type that can wear jade green with stunning effect. White isn't so good; it makes her look pale.

x x x

We ask members of this beauty class; can you take constructive criticism? If somebody tells you that you are not standing straight, do you want to smack them? Silly. You never see your own back and it is the easiest thing in the world to let the shoulders fall forward.

Nearly all the unpleasant things that others say about us are true, whether we like them or not. And it is just as well to have an open mind, give heed to criticism. It is about the only way we have of finding out how we appear to other people.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Risk Involved Marrying Someone of Different Social Standing

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"During my summer vacation, I met a splendid young man whom my family disapproves of, because he's not just like us. I'll admit he's something of a diamond in the rough but weren't all diamonds in the rough before they were polished?

"The family say he isn't a diamond at all, but a very rough rhinestone. C is assertive and a bit of an egoist, but he's much more clever than the members of his own family, his associates. So naturally his opinions are strong, and he does not hesitate to express them.

"They also quarrel with the way he eats, and they snub him because he isn't one of those hat-in-hand young man. I know he does some things differently from us, and why can't he be taught? Another thing, the family don't like his job. They say if he couldn't get a better job at 32, he's not likely to get one at 42.

"But I'm in love, Miss Fairfax; I'm 20 and feel I'm old enough to know my own mind. As you're always preaching the doctrine of not marrying anyone unless you're in love with him or her, I hope you'll put up a good argument for me, as my family reads your column.

Janet".

I'll admit, my dear Janet, that I always stand by that fundamental of married life: Don't marry anyone unless you're so much in love that you can't live without him or her. That's the first requisite. There are other things pretty nearly as necessary in the recipe for happy marriage, as love — or thinking you're in love.

Because, my dear, at 20 there are a great many things, such as fascination, sentiment, just plain lonesomeness and the desire to have a home of one's own not to mention high-powered emotionalism, which masquerade under the name of love. And these counterfeits wear thin in time, like the gilt plating on cheap rings.

Romance is a pretty rickety foundation on which to build a home that will endure. And to avoid the risks in "how to be happy though married" it's safer to marry someone who has the same sort of background as yourself.

Life is made up of so many little things, and, unfortunately, it's these little things that get on one's nerves day after day. They're like the constant dripping of water, which in time wears away the rock.

There are exceptions of course, and I've known many women who have married these diamonds in the rough and have succeeded in polishing them into social Kohinoors. But that's because the rough diamonds wanted to be polished and let themselves be instructed willingly in certain processes to achieve their own ends.

They had gumption enough to know that they couldn't get ahead if they were regarded as boors, and patiently accepted their lessons on how to eat properly, when to take off their hats, get out of chairs, and through considerable reading of newspapers, magazines and books, know how to hold their own when they talk.

But a good many of these diamonds in the rough think they know it all, and that their way is the best way, and 'way down deep they realize if their way is open to criticism, they prefer to brazen it out, which is, of course, their open confession of having an inferiority complex.

You're only 20, your rough diamond is 32. See how he reacts to a little pre-martial polishing up. If he gets angry at a few tactful suggestions, watch your step. You haven't told me what your rough diamond's job is. But there is something in what your family tells you, that a man who is without ambition at 32 is more than likely to be contented with a place in which he is dropped at 42. Again, watch your step.

Second Baby Deserves an Announcement Like the First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me if it is proper to send announcement cards announcing the birth of a second baby? Several of my friends gave a shower for me before my first baby was born. Most of my friends live in a different town and I am sure they would like to know of the new baby's arrival. Do you think, under these circumstances, it would be permissible to send cards?

Mother

Yes, it is just as proper to send birth announcement cards for the second baby as it is for the first baby. The first baby shouldn't get all the attention!

Kindness to Sick Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to know if it would be correct for me to telephone a friends to ask her how she feels? Her husband told me that she has been ill. Shall I take her to a theatre and to a tea-room after the theatre, after she recovers?

W.

Under the circumstances of illness we must be very sure that it will not be inconvenient or uncomfortable for the person to talk on the telephone. If we think it will be, we should write a note of good wishes and hope for a speedy recovery. If the friend is a close friend, you may wish to send her a box of flowers or a book or some fruit, with the friendly note. I'm sure that she would very much appreciate this generous thought of yours, to offer her such pleasant relaxation after her illness.

About Wedding Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Several of us have different opinions as to wedding announcements. We would be very grateful if you will give us your opinion on this subject. It is quite all right to send a wedding announcement to your friends if they are living in the same city you are being married in?

Reader

Yes, if the bride is planning to send out announcements, she sends them to friends or acquaintances who have not been invited to attend the ceremony or the reception. For instance, if the couple are to have a very small church wedding, let's say, with only relatives and perhaps a few close friends present, and with a few other friends invited afterward to an informal gathering at the home of the bride, then the bride and groom will probably wish to send announcemnts to the large circle of friends whom they have not invited to this small wedding.

The Confirmation Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What would you suggest as a gift to a girl for her confirmation?

L.

A book would be an appropriate gift. Or I'm sure she would like some sheer white handkerchiefs embroidered with her monogram, or even better perhaps, her first name. A pen and pencil set is a good gift for this occasion too, with her name or initials imprinted on them in gilt letters. Or a lovely scarf, perhaps with a handkerchief or a beret to match.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

The Teacher's Authority

This is the second of a series of special articles on preparing the child for school, written for The Ontario Intelligencer by the personal physician to the Dionne Quintuplets, who are themselves starting regular schoolwork for the first time this month.

One of the first things confronting parents whose child starts to school for the first time this month, is to teach him or her to submit gracefully to the authority of other adults for the first time.

This may be difficult. It will be hard indeed, if the child comes from one of those indulgent homes where he has never been taught to submit without an argument to the authority of his own parents. Unfortunately, there are a good many of those homes, and by the time the youngster is six years of age, he has become quite a problem. You see, in order to teach a child to discipline himself, the parents must begin to teach him almost from the day he is born.

"When should I begin to train my child?" a young mother is supposed to have asked Sir William Osler. "How old is your child?" asked the Canadian physician. "Two years." "You are already too late", he is quoted as saying.

Now he didn't intend that to be taken any more seriously than his dictum that all men should be chloroformed at a certain age. It was his way of emphasizing a point, and it is a point well taken. Training of children, as I myself have said here many times, properly begins in the cradle.

A friend of mine who is a teacher in a primary grade in a fairly large school, tells me that dozens of mothers come to her and say, something like this: "Oh teacher, I am so glad Johnny is old enough to start school. We can't do a thing with him, and I think perhaps school will be good for him".

Now isn't that a fine burden to impose on a teacher who has a dozen or more other youngsters to look after? It isn't fair to the child either. He hasn't been taught to obey at home, and so, he has even less inclination to do what his teacher tells him. The result is that before she has impressed upon him the fact that he must do as he is told, there has been a series of clashes between them. Certainly these haven't done him any good for he can't make good progress with his lessons when there is such an emotional disturbance involving him at school.

If your child has learned to respect authority at home, even then it will be necessary for you to make him understand and cooperate in this transfer of authority from you to the teacher.

A mother I know who is very wise with her children, has a method I think is effective. She started having the teacher in for a meal or tea before the child actually went to school. Of course this was entirely a social contact, yet the child got to know the teacher, and vice versa. So the child actually grew to look forward to getting to school with his friend the teacher, and there never was any question in his mind about obeying her. His mother had seen to them, with the result that the transition from home to school was easy and painless.

I know some adults look lightly on these things. They think that children will get to like school all by themselves. Well, you know how some children hate school all their lives. I am convinced that a good deal of this is due to the child's unhappy experiences during his first days at school. He learns to hate school then, and never outgrows that dislike.

NOT MUCH money? The young bride can keep neat and attractive just the same if she promises herself to slip out of her street clothes into wash frocks the minute she steps in the kitchen. Sift one cup flour wtih 1-2 teaspoon salt and 2 1-2 teaspoons baking powder; add to first mixture with 1-2 cup fresh blueberries or nuckleberries, and stir only until flour disappears. Apple Gems are easily made. Sift and measure a cup of flour and mix with 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1-2 teaspoon salt. Add 1-2 cup brown sugar, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1-2 cup milk, 1-3 teaspoon lemon juice and 2-3 cup chopped apples. Bake in hot buttered muffin tins at 375 degrees F. for 20 minutes.

Rice Muffins will give a southern touch to your table, for it is a favorite recipe in Louisiana. Add one cup cold rice which has been cooked soft, and 2 well-beaten eggs, 3 tablespoons melted butter and finally 3 teaspons baking powder. Fill well-greased muffin tins 1-3 full and bake in hot oven 20 minutes or until brown.

Garden Sets the Wedding

By ALICE DENHOFF

NOTHING is more beautiful than a garden wedding. A church wedding can be magnificent, but for those who must consider funds, a garden wedding is the least expensive ceremony with a claim to pageant beauty.

All White Scheme

A garden wedding can be elaborate with white satin, clouds of tulle, orange blossoms, and a champagne buffet. But our idea of a garden wedding is not along these lines. It is a wedding that will be rich in beauty, but devoid of opulence. We would like to see our pretty bride in a frock of white organdie and a big white crinoline hat with her attendants similarly gowned. An all-white garden wedding, the white standing out against the natural background, is a lovely spectacle. The groom and his attendants in all-white, or wearing navy coats and white trousers would complete a charming picture. Palest pastel shades also create a pretty entourage.

One little garden bride we know wore white mousseline de soie and her four attendants wore the same delicate, filmy fabric in palest pink, yellow, blue and green, their big white hats trimmed with chiffon flowers and satin ribbons to match their dresses.

Field Flowers

A simple garden wedding does not call for hothouse flowers such as orchids or camellias. Here is a chance to use the simple flowers of field and garden, gladiolas, zinnias, queen's lace, daisies.

Open Season For Hay Fever

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

IF THE German army should decide to invade the United States through Mexico and enter the fertile valley of the Mississippi and its tributaries during the second week in August we wouldn't have to fire a gun.

I figure that those little blue-eyed German boys who have never lived in a real hay fever country would be naturals for our middle western ragweed. You can't pull a trigger while you're sneezing, you can't read a map while you're crying, and you can't guide a tank while you're blowing your nose. And the aeroplanists, if they once got their machines above the pollen cloud, would just fly back to the fatherland and report that our country was permanently under a pall of poison gas of unexampled ferocity.

Atomizer Days

Certainly in that otherwise favored region, the great garden of the world, from August 15 to September 15 from the borders of Ohio to the borders of Colorado, from the dells of Wisconsin to the plains of Texas ,twenty-five per cent of the inhabitants automatically cease all occupation and all effort except squeezing the bulb of an atomizer.

The poet pauses in his pean, the kindly eyes of the banker are suffused with tears, the captain of industry greets his machine shop only with a sniff. They turn from lyres and ledgers and lathes to reach for their pocket handkerchiefs. Some favored ones flee their once happy homes like wild animals bursting from the borders of a flaming forest and seek the woods of Canada, the mountains, the desert or the open sea and pause not until the worst of the conflagration is over.

Complete Low-Life

And all on account of what? All on account of the ragweed. There is probably less to be said for the ragweed than Willkie has to say for Roosevelt. It is unpalatable: even hungry goats refuse to consume it. It serves no useful purpose. Hated of man and beast, only God smiles on it. In fact He laughs on it, because where it flourishes it really flourishes. It is one of the most successful of living organisms. And nothing is done to encourage it. And yet year after year it returns with all the happy abundance of dandelions and fills the whole earth with its pollens.

I have picked the ragweed as the plant and the middle west as the place, because that is the only combination which produces real masculine bull hay fever. Out in California the allergists claim to cure their cases, but that is an empty triumph, as skilful as killing a beetle with a sledge hammer. They have a little sickly sissy sage plant in California that causes hay fever, but all the victim has to do to cancel its influence is give his nose a good blast in the morning.

In New England they claim a good deal of malignity for the buckwheat, and there is a kind of half-hearted hay fever around New York and Pennsylvania and Virginia. But when I read the reports of successful cures from the eminent specialists of these regions I feel like saying—"Boys, come out to Missouri and try your hand on a real Nazi type of hay fever."

Is Never Cured

"Doctor, what would you do if you had hay fever?"

That question is perfectly fair and puts it up squarely to the medical advisor.

To start with psychology, try to understand the nature of hay fever. Medical science is quite definite on that point: there is no reason for false ideas. It is due to the effect of the pollen grains from certain plants, thrown in the air in great profusion in the conjunctival sac of the eye, the mucous membrane of the nose, and the bronchial muscles of certain sensitized individuals.

Second, it is important to face the fact of experience that hay fever is never cured. That saves a lot of time and expense. It serves to avoid such treatments as those, for instance, which aim at the destruction of the mucous membrane of the nose. Diet, exercise, physical condition and the kind of life you lead have nothing to do with the case. You might as well try to stop an invading army by going on a vegetable diet.

The best treatment is to take a vacation during the season and go to a resort where there is freedom—the mountains, the seashore, the northern Great Lake country, Canada. For some, of course, this advice is impractical.

The most comfortable and effective thing for the stay-at-home is an air-conditioned room with a window filter. For an average bedroom there are many such window filters on the market which are cheap and practical. Your furniture dealer ought to know about them. If you can equip both your bedroom and your day working quarters this way, well and good. If only the bedroom at least that affords great relief.

About "Shots"

Whether I would take "shots" of the offending pollen or not depends again on circumstances. They take time and they are by no means inexpensive. Furthermore they are quite uncertain.

Unquestionably in certain cases they do prevent. No expert, however, can explain on a theoretical basis why they should work. If hay fever is a form of allergy and if all allergy is fundamentally anaphylaxis, which is what the experts claim, then every dose of vaccine no matter how small should make the victim worse. That is the fundamental phenomena of anaphylaxis, as explained in an earlier article this week.

The claim is made in general that 80 per cent of cases get complete or partial relief. But these claims are mostly from the region east of the Allegheníes, or west of the Rockies. For the Mississippi Valley where hay fever pollenation is thick and abundant I should be inclined to believe the percentage of relief was closer to 25 per cent.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A.R.S., Ellwood City, Pa.—"My ten-year-old daughter has puffed eyes every morning. Is this any cause for worry?"

Answer—Probably not. A urine examination and an examination for the necessity for glasses would settle the matter though.

J. C.—"Is it more healthy to eat the whole apple—skin and all—or to peel it first?"

Answer—The skin, as in most fruits and vegetables, contains more vitamins than the pulp, and has laxative qualities—roughage.

Costly Dresses On Tour

Few women have the unlimited purse strings that would allow them to purchase the dresses shown above, but it's nice to think about, anyway. There are 61,111 pearls on the gown at left, valued at $75,000, which will go on a tour of leading American cities this fall, after which it will be sold at auction, proceeds to be given to the Red Cross. The gown at right is a mere $250,000 and was designed for a pearl syndicate.

Three-Minute Journey To Mattei—A Fisherman's Paradise

By TEMPLE MANNING

ONE OF our particular little isles of paradise is the Isle of Mattei, a four-hundred acre spot off the southwest coast of Puerto Rico, Uncle Sam's favorite tropical playground in the Caribbean. Connected to the mainland by a bridge, it offers an unequalled series of attractions that should delight the heart of any tourist—but that of a fisherman-tourist in particular.

A sailboat for some of the world's finest fishing may be hired for pin money a day, with a native fisherman as sailor and fishing mentor. All the fish caught by the guides are thrown in with yours for lagniappe. Giant tuna, marlin, kingfish, amberjack, dolphin and barracuda are some of the local denizens of the deep. If a full day's fishing isn't enough, Mattei offers fishing after dark in a phosphorescent lake, connected to the ocean by a small inlet. Its continuous glow, unusually brilliant on moonless nights, is worth coming from afar to see.

Wild turkeys and beautiful red and white guinea hens run in tall grass on the lowlands. Offshore, pelicans in search of fish, plummet from heights of two and three hundred feet, landing on the water with a crash that can be heard a half mile away.

On the southern side of the island there is a beautiful white-sand playa with a protected swimming pool. The pool is part of the Caribbean Sea, and has bathhouses set up in picturesque thatched huts. For children there's a smaller pool under the protection of waving coconaut palms. The island is a broad-backed hill rising from the waters of the Caribbean. From its peak may be glimpsed one of the most beautiful views in Puerto Rico. To the north spreads miles of green grazing land in beautiful Lajas Valley and further back are the lovely mountains of the Central Cordillera. To the south is the breath-taking expanse of the Caribbean dotted with fishing boats.

The entire Isle of Mattei is planted with flamboyants — the spectacular red tree of the Indies known to Floridians as the Royal Poinciana. Hundreds of laurel shade trees are also planted so that there is gentle shade as well as tropical splendor. The sloping land and hillsides are planted in pineapple and oak. Giant papayas are grown on the level land as well as mahogany, tamarind and oak. It is a floral paradise, the sort of thing that one looks for in the tropics but without some of the less pleasant features of jungle growth.

During the early nineteenth century, Mattei was the hideout for the last great pirate of the Spanish Main, Roberto Cofresi, who used the place he had known during his childhood as a sanctuary when fleeing the might of the Spanish fleet which had been sent to drive him from the seas.

New Recipe

Tuna and Corn Loaf

1-4 cup butter or shortening
4 tbsp. flour
3-4 tsp. dry mustard
1 tbsp. onion juice
Salt and pepper
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks
1 cup flaked tuna
1 can No. 2 corn
1-2 cup buttered crumbs
Pimento
Parsley

Cover bottom of buttered casserole with buttered crumbs. Make a sauce by melting butter; add flour, then milk, cook until smooth and thick, season with onion juice and salt and pepper, 1 pimento cut fine and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Add beaten egg yolks after removing mixture from heat. Combine tuna fish and corn and mix sauce thoroughly through them. Sprinkle with rest of crumbs and bake 30 to 40 minutes at 375 degrees F. If you like you may add the stiffly beaten whites of eggs last before baking, folding them into the mixture. Corn cut from cob may be used.

Chic Women Turn To London Styles

With Paris out of the fashion picture, American women have turned to London for styles in smart tailored costumes. British stylists showed the latest fashions, about, recently, to overeas buyers and they predict that the British influence will be distinct in women's spectator clothes on this side of the Atlantic.

You Must Get Your Hand In the Invitation

By ELEANOR ROSS

THERE'S one time when addressing stacks of envelopes is all pleasure: When the family is sending out wedding invitations. The first rule is that all envelopes must be addressed by hand, never typewritten. As for the invitation itself, it is engraved on the first page of a sheet of white notepaper, a paper that has a kid-finish, with the color and texture of a gardenia. Never should anything else even be considered. Two envelopes are used, one to hold the invitation, the other for mailing. In addressing the inner envelope, address with the recipient's formal name, unless the invitation is going to a very close relative, and then the envelope may be addressed to "Aunt Janet" or "Uncle Fred and Aunt Mary." Such envelopes should be addressed by bride or groom.

Proper Wording

The actual wording is a matter of individual choice, although usually a traditional form is followed. Always the "honour" of the presence of a guest is requested at the church ceremony, while for the breakfast or reception it is quite in order to request the "pleasure" of a guest's company. As for the style of engraving and script, it is a matter to be decided by the family with the assistance of the firm which has the order for the announcements. Most department stores and many fine jewelers have such departments as well as fine stationery firms.

The order for cards should be given about two months in advance to allow for the engraving of the plates, and the sending of the invitations about a month in advance. In the meantime, the first lists will have been pruned and checked and will be ready for filling in and addressing when the invitations are ready. When the wedding reception is to be held at home, as is so frequently the case at a country wedding in summer, the invitation to the breakfast or reception is added to the invitation to the ceremony. If a separate invitation is used, as is the case when co-workers or acquaintances are invited only to the ceremony, this is engraved on a card to match the paper of the wedding invitation and it is a little smaller when folded for the envelope.

Hand-Written Bids

If the ceremony is to be limited to the presence of relatives and a few very dear friends, and no engraved invitations are to be sent out, it is permissible to send notes of invitation, but these should be personally written by the bride, except such invitations as may be sent by the mother of the bride to her own intimate circle. As with engraved invitations, send a written invitation to dear ones or friends though they be many, many miles distant.

If no general invitations have been issued, and the wedding has been limited to the immediate families, announcements are sent out after the marriage, in the name of the nearest kin. But such announcements are never sent to those who have been invited to or who have attended the wedding.

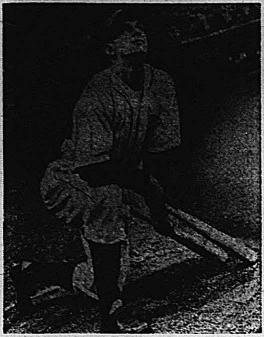
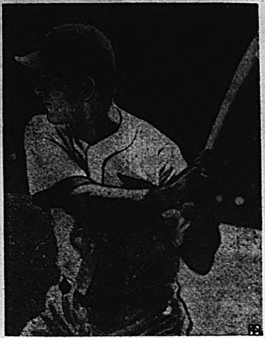
McCosky Shines for Tigers Sans Fanfare



BARNEY McCOSKY, Tiger Star



That Batting Stance

(By Walter L. Johns, Central Press Canadian Sports Writer)

If the Detroit Tigers come from behind and win the American league pennant, baseball fans will signal out Buck Newsome, Schoolboy Rowe, Hank Greenberg and Rudy York the most important player reasons why.

We agree that each, to a certain extent, has done his part in pushing the Tigers into the pennant fight by fine play all year, but let's not forget — as the all-star game selectors did—the Tigers' brilliant young outfield star, William Barney McCosky.

McCosky, now in his second year with the Detroit club, is one of the finest young prospects in baseball today. His play all year has been outstanding for Detroit.

A .300 Hitter

A great ball hawk and a speed demon on the bases, McCosky also is leading the Tigers at bat and shattering that old second-year jinx with ease.

Perhaps the Irish-Lithuanian outfielder won't win the league batting crown, for he had a letdown after bidding for it all year. He was out of the game for a while and his absence was felt. But he's a sure bet for membership in the .300 circle, just as he was last year.

Watching McCosky play ball is a thrill. When he runs the bases you know he's just the man to get all he can out of a hit. His fielding is worthy of especial merit. Last year his mark was .986 in his first season in the big time.

McCosky is one of those ball players who come up once in a while and click right off and then continue on to a brilliant major league career. Detroit fans expect him to be another Cobb, although that may be asking too much of anyone.

Started with Beaumont

Like his teammate Gehringer, a great ball player but seldom in the public eye, McCosky continues to shine without much ado from press and public. His talents are recognized, however, and he certainly must be classed as one of the baseball heroes of the year.

McCosky was born at Coal Run, Pa., in April, 1918, according to the record book. He began his pro career with Beaumont, a Tiger farm, in 1936. The same season he was transferred to Charleston of the Middle Atlantic league, where he led the loop in batting with a .400 mark.

In 1937 McCosky went back to Beaumont and batted .318. Given a trial by the Tigers but in need of more seasoning, he stayed on with the club in 1938 and again went over the .300 mark.

Last year McCosky played in 147 games for the Tigers and collected 190 hits and a .311 batting average. This year he should exceed 300 hits and perhaps lead the league in that division as well as boost his average 'way over the .300 mark.

Indians Decide to Leave Vitt Out of Pre-game Strategy and Walloped by Detroit Tigers

Tigers Now Only One Game Behind Cleveland in Close Race for Pennant

YANKEES BEATEN

Dodgers Gain a Little on Reds by Taking Twin Bill From Phillies

If things don't start to get better for Cleveland Indians pretty soon, they may have to include Manager Oscar Vitt in their pre-game board-of-strategy meetings.

After losing four straight—and giving the Tigers, Yankees and Red Sox renewed pennant hopes, the Injuns decided to leave old Oscie out of the meeting before the crucial third game of the Tigers series at Detroit yesterday.

The result reads just like Oscar Vitt's friends thought—and hoped—it would, Detroit 10, Cleveland 5.

That was the fifth straight setback for the jittery league leaders, who may wind up in the second division, if they don't watch out.

So the American League pennant chase is badly scrambled now with only four games separating the first-place Tribesmen from the fourth-place Boston Red Sox. Detroit, by its victory, took over second place from New York Yankees who ran into a snag in the person of left-handed Ken Chase of Washington Senators and lost 3-1.

Today's Picture

Usually at this time of the season the American League race has been decided and every line-up is dotted with fancy-fielding farm hands—but take a look at today's picture:

Club	W.	L.	Pct.	G. Bd	G. To P.
Cleveland	75	55	.577	—	34
Detroit	75	57	.568	1	22
New York	73	57	.562	2	24
Boston	72	60	.545	4	22

The odd part of the Detroit win was that Louie (Buck) Newsom pitched one of his poorer games of the season for his 18th victory. But the Tiger sluggers, Billy Sullivan and Hank Greenberg, who homered helped him out.

The Yankee express for Pennantville got sidetracked yesterday, also—but by a good pitching performance. Ken Chase scattered eight hits and Gee Gee Walker contributed a pair of homers and that spelled victory. The Yanks were blanked on five hits until the ninth when they bunched three blows for their lone run.

In the National League, Brooklyn Dodgers got good pitching from Freddie Fitzsimmons and Hugh Casey and some fine hitting from Bucky Medwick to win both ends of a double bill from the Phillies, 3-0, 14-3. That cut the distance between the Brooks and the idle Cincy Reds to seven games.

Medwick's homer with two on gave the Dodgers all their runs in the first game to help Fitz to his 14th win. Homers by Medwick and Joe Gallagher were the lustiest blows in the 28-hit nightcap that gave Casey his eighth victory of the year.

WRESTLING OPENS AT ARENA MON.

Three Good Heavyweight Bouts Carded for the First Show

Following a period of inactivity during the summer months, professional wrestling will return to the Hume arena for the autumn semester commencing on Monday evening when three sterling bouts will be featured.

With the return of professional wrestling, arena manager Norm Barriage today announced that the opening show would see only heavyweight grapplers carded: "We have obtained the services of several outstanding heavyweight wrestlers for our opening show, which should prove a popular attraction to all those interested in the modern art of the game," predicted Mr. Barriage today.

The main bout features Nick Pavich, the Greek adonis, who made such a hit with the local wrestling fans last spring in his lone appearance. Pavich meets Sam Draginais of Boston in the feature attraction on the card. Johnny Gyroffy, the towering Hungarian youth from Winnipeg, returns to the local wrestling wars to meet Sammy Yanakey, while the curtain-raiser will introduce Tom George, well known veteran grappler from the Southern States, versus Mike Dominic, who plied his ring wares in Belleville as a novice several years ago.

With an all-heavyweight card featuring the return of professional wrestling to the Hume arena next Monday the indoor sporting season will officially swing into action.

In Bout Peppered With Low Blows, Billy Conn Defeats Pastor in 13th With Knockout

Two Rounds Taken Away From Winner and Would Have Lost 13th if Pastor Had Arisen

DOWN IN NINTH

Experts Agreed Conn Not Heavy Enough Yet to Meet Joe Louis

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—Billy Conn is one step nearer his coveted match with Joe Louis today, but most of the 14,448 fans who saw him knock out Bob Pastor in the thirteenth round at Madison Square Garden last night are convinced it would be a goose step if the 174-pound Pittsburgher took it now.

Even Johnny Ray, Conn's manager, who has been sprouting wrinkles in recent weeks fretting over Billy's physical well-being, refused today to commit himself as to whether he would accept a heavyweight title match. He insists it has not been offered.

It wasn't that the sharpshooting heavyweight champ failed to win decisively over the man who stayed a total of 21 rounds with Louis, although the knockout was more than a little tainted. It was the general idea that Conn is very good, but there still isn't enough of him.

While Mike Jacobs was juggling Conn's future in his mind, Pastor was nursing a badly bruised torso and his astute little pilot, Jimmy Johnston, was bellowing "foul".

The bout was peppered with low blows. Two rounds were taken from Conn for below the border shots, and Referee Billy Cavanaugh admitted he would have given the 13th to Pastor for the same cause had the fading Bob been able to rise.

Took Life Out of Loser.

"The low punches took the life out of Bob," Johnston charged. "Why even the referee admits the last punch of the fight was foul."

It did appear low, but the fact remains that Pastor was a pretty weary and well-thumped fighter when the end came with him writhing on elbows and knees.

The Associated Press score card gave Conn eight of the twelve rounds before the knockout, and two of those—the eights and twelfth—were gifts because of Conn's wayward punches.

As early as the fourth round Conn had Pastor wheezing from body punches, and by the seventh Pastor seemed a body-weary old man. In the eighth Conn doubled him up with a midsection shot, and tried vainly for the kill. Miraculously, the blow seemed to put wind in Pastor's bellows instead of deflating them, and he came back strongly.

Down In Ninth.

Pastor went down for the first time in the ninth from a short left to the face, and he had taken the count of seven when the bell rang.

In the twelfth Conn clipped him with the best blow of the fight, a steaming right to the chin which sent astor through the ropes. He took nine before bouncing up on rubber legs. He won that round anyway on a foul.

The end came after 2:54 of the thirteenth and it came with a barrage of body blows, Pastor folding over like a sack of oats at the final punch.

The ending was greeted by a mixed chorus of boos and cheers by the crowd, which paid $49,415 to see the show.

New York, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Brave Bill McKechnie and Jimmy Dykes already turned down offers to manage Cleveland next year, as one New York newspaper reports? . . . When Freddy Fitzsimmons was run out of the game by Umpire Bick Campbell the other day (first time in Freddy's long career) he cried like a baby in the Clubhouse. . . . Jimmy Foxx, who's getting 30 grand, is going to demand a raise if they want him to keep on catching next year. . .

NEWARK BEARS CUT OFF GAME OF WINGS' LEAD

Defeat Syracuse Chiefs While Rochester Was Losing to Montreal

LEAFS SHUTOUT

Phil Marchildon Loses Tough One to Buffalo Bisons on an Error

By The Associated Press

There are only nine days left before the International league's pennant race ends and Rochester's lead looks safe although the second-place Newark Bears are doing their best to prolong the struggle.

They cut a full game off the Red Birds' lead last night, reducing it to 5½ games, by belting over Syracuse Chiefs 8-4, in celebration of a "night" for Alex Kampouris while Montreal Royals were giving Rochester's Mike Ryba his eighth defeat of the season, 5-4.

First baseman Ed Levy copped most of the glory at Newark, although Kampouris defied the jinx successfully enough to make a couple of singles. Levy hit his 20th home run of the season—and Newark's 137th—a triple and a single. He drove in a tally with each hit. Norman Branch went the route, giving eight hits as he earned his 14th victory with the aid of this mates' able hitting.

Aiming at Playoff Spot

Montreal, still aiming at a playoff spot, rapped Ryba for 11 hits and even then nearly lost the game in the last inning. Leading 5-0 going into the final frame, Bill Crouch gave up four runs and saw his 14th victory saved for him when George Fallon was cut down at the plate for the final out. He allowed only five hits but walked five.

The Baltimore-Jersey City battle for third place was set back to make a Sunday doubleheader, so as a result the Royals were left only three games behind the fourth-place orioles.

Young Hal White, who looks like a cinch to cop the "rookie of the year" prize outpitched another good youngster, Phil Marchildon, to give Buffalo's Bisons a 2-0 victory over Toronto Leafs in last night's other game. He yielded five hits, walked none and struck out nine. Still it took an error by Bill Lillard to decide the duel as Marchildon chalked up 11 strikeouts and gave eight hits in eight innings.

Lillard let Jimmy Outlaw's "double play" grounder go through his legs after Pike had singled in the sixth inning. Les Scarsella was purposely passed after that, then Zubik and Mulleavy came through with singles to drive in the two runs.

VALERIE SCOTT MAY MEET CHAMP

English Girl Scores Decided Upset by Defeating Dorothy May Bundy

New York, Sept. 7 (AP).—In no sport except women's tennis does the champion so thoroughly dominate the field that the eventual winner is known, year after year, before the tournament ever starts—barring a broken leg or an outbreak of cholera.

In the national championships at Forest Hills, for instance, it is common knowledge that Alice Marble will win her fourth title when the finals come around next Monday.

On the men's floor there is some doubt whether the 1940 champion will be Bobby Riggs or Don McNeill, hopeful from Oklahoma. But Miss Marble was about a 10-to-1 bet the day play started. The women always run that way.

Yesterday Miss Marble polished off young Helen Bernhard of New York, 6-2, 6-3, in the quarter-finals, and she could have made it quicker if she had wished. Queen Alice now has won twenty-seven straight tournaments. She next plays Valerie Scott, a nice English girl, on Sunday, and her opponent in Monday's final likely will be Helen Jacobs. She has trimmed Helen so many times she practically can call her shots.

Miss Scott scored an interesting victory over Dorothy May Bundy yesterday, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3. Dorothy, a powerful hitter, almost knocked Valerie's teeth out in the first set, but then Valerie got wise and softened up her game to a whisper.

Jack Kramer, an unranked youngster from the coast, furnishd the best upset to date in the men's division by beating Frankie Parker in a hot five-setter, 1-6, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4. The day before, he had eliminated Henry Prusuff from Seattle, so he is full of surprises. But tomorrow he encounters Don McNeill of Oklahoma City, the tournament's co-favorite. That should be the last of young Kramer for 1940.

McNeill yesterday overcame a stubborn foe in eliminating Elwood Cooke, 9-7, 6-0, 4-6, 6-3.

It is hoped the City Softball League moguls will be able to complete the city championship for the Bank of Commerce trophy between the Shell "Oilers" and Point Anne "Cementmen," this year. Secretary Harry Knott intimated today that efforts to bring the two nines together on Saturday, Sept. 14th were in the making. At present four members of the Oilers and one of the Cementmen are training with the N.P.A.M. at Petawawa, "Ding" Luffman being with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment along with Art Cole. The N.P.A.M. units are expected back from their military training period on the 14th of the month, so in all probability the league moguls will try and get the series over as soon after that date as possible. The City League title has long been a bone of contention in local softball circles, as the series usually conflicts with the O.A.S.A. playdowns.

Perhaps by reversing matters Prexy Edgecombe and his coherts could solve the whole matter, however. It has been suggested that in future years the Bank of Commerce trophy, along with which goes the City League softball title, should be played for in the early part of the season prior to the opening of the O.A.S.A. schedule. For the past few seasons the regular schedule games have not exactly proven revenue-makers and by the introduction of a pre-season City League series, the teams would be afforded just as much softball and two full playoffs, one at the beginning of the season and the other for the O.A.S.A. rights along in August. It would simply mean the cutting down of the regular schedule, which at present is an admitted financial loss. The proposal seems to be one of merit and next season might be a good year to try the experiment, which simply means a round robin series for the city title be completed before the regular schedule opens. Then both titles would be awarded without so much delay and unnecessary fuss.

This is the story of the strange disappearance of Right Fielder Schmiel of Decatur the night of August 30th last. Manager Lou Scoffle noted Schmiel's absence from his post and upon investigation found that the gardener, irked by the jibes of a spectator outside the park, had scaled the wall without bothering to call time to "take care of" his tree-sitting tormentor.

The next night, Decatur's game was delayed by a shower. Upon resumption of play, it was necessary to look again for Schmiel—who was taking a nap in the team's bus.

It is the unexpectedness that makes modern wrestling appealing to the fans. Actually the patrons never can guess just what some of the modern-day grapplers are going to pull out of their bag of tricks next. That's why the sport is so popular, especially among the fair sex. With the opening of the indoor sporting season at the Hume arena on Monday the fans will find no less than six heavies, all of whom tip the beam around the 200 pound mark. With the exception of Nick Pavich and Johnny Gyroffy, all are new faces and Pavich only wrestled here once previously and made a favourable impression with his knowledge of the game.

Do you remember when Doug MacPherson, speedy running and plunging back of the Argonaut Rowing Club's Interprovincial rugby squad, notified club officials he was finished with football a year ago today. Vital part of Coach Lew Hayman's backfield setup. MacPherson merely said he had had enough of football.

"Doc" Empson's South Hastings "Combines" completed arrangements for their O.B.A. playdown series with the Deloro "Smelters" yesterday and the series will open at Deloro on Monday with the return game being played at the Fair Grounds next Wednesday. Incidently Carl Casey, former Belleville C.O.B.L. pitcher, is with the Smelters as their No. 1 moundsman. With the old ball game having been a minus quantity all season, no doubt the baseball fans will welcome with open arms the opportunity to take in a baseball game before the outdoor sporting season closes.

Four clubs are really crowded around the lead spot in that American League race in the most torrid drive the junior loop has seen in years. Detroit beat Cleveland for the third time in succession yesterday and we'll bet Oscar (he's still manager) Vitt and his Indians were glad to shake the dust of Detroit from their tired and weary feet. The Senators dampened the aspirations of the Yankees as Ken Case handed the champions their second reverse in a four-game series, so today Cleveland is first, one game ahead of Detroit. New York is two games behind the Indians and Boston only four games astern.

We hear H. G. "Twig" Woodley, retired Belleville baseball expert, has changed his affections and may replace Culbertson on the bridge firmament as the game's No. 1 exponent.

SPORT SPICE — "Cowboy" Smith and his Tanners humbled the Oshawa mushballers in Kingston last night, beating the Motor City nine 11 to 5; Oshawa having won the initial game at home 7 to 5. . . . The third game will be played either in Trenton or here next week. . . . The Trenton Flyers drubbed Orillia 12 to 1 in the latter town last evening in their O.A.S.A. playdown. . . . Just how that classy Flyer team got into the Intermediate "B" bracket always did puzzle this corner. Mike Jacobs can rest quietly now, Billy Conn knocked out Bob Pastor in the 13th last night and no doubt "Uncle Mike" will capitalize on this fact for a Conn-Louis bout. . . . If Conn is serious about his heavyweight aspirations, he'll wait another year and in the meantime consume an over-dose of T-bone steaks.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Dr. Christian Meets The Women"

With the engagement of "Dr. Christian Meets The Women" at the McCarthy theatre next week, local screen fans will be able to see the third and latest release in this highly popular series.

The current feature once more stars Jean Hersholt, favorite of millions who have seen the previous Dr. Christian pictures and heard his air programs.

Dorothy Lovett, Edgar Kennedy, Rod La Rocque and Frank Albertson have the leading supporting roles in "Dr. Christian Meets The Women," which is a story based upon Hersholt's highly popular program which is heard by more than 18,000,000 radio listeners weekly. It is also a picture unlike its screen predecessors in the series because it has comedy as well as drama, Hersholt is given an opportunity to show his lighter talents and the result is that the picture is filled with mirth as well a presenting a highly dramatic hour of entertainment.

Raymond Massey

One of the most successful plays of recent years, "Black Limelight" has now been brought to the screen, starring Raymond Massey. It will be presented next at the McCarthy theatre in addition to "Dr. Christian Meets The Women." The program will also include latest Fox News events showing among its splendid highlights, the Dionne quintuplets, now quite grown up and just as cute as ever, greeting newspaper editors from the United States.

"The Lady in Question"

Now playing at the McCarthy theatre is Brian Aherne, the star of "My Son, My Son" and Rita Hayworth, the heroine of "Only Angels Have Wings" in the most delightfully different comedy ever brought to the screen, the surprise hit of 1940 "The Lady in Question" directed by Charles Vidor, who made "My Son, My Son". On the same program the Three Stooges in "A Plumbing We Will Go", a splendid laugh-packed comedy, every member of the family will enjoy.

AT THE BELLE

"RHYTHM ON THE RIVER"

Hollywood and Radio are now permanently allied in bringing entertainment seekers the best each have to offer. There was a time when both these powers were at each other's throats, and it appeared as recently as a few years ago that neither would capitulate. However, with the success of such air shows as Hollywood Playhouse, Cecil B. de Mille's Theatre of the Air and at least a half dozen other top flight programs featuring the cream of the cinema, an interchange of personalities began taking place until today the two outstanding fields of entertainment have become permanent partners.

Paramount, first ot take advantage of the popularity of radio favorites in casting its pictures, continued the policy, after seven films with ether stars prominently cast, by placing four radio favorites in "Rhythm On the River", the new Bing Crosby comedy which is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

With Bing in this new film are his air show orchestra leader, John Scott Trotter; Oscar Levant, one of the fairly permanent experts on "Information Please" and lovely Lillian Cornell, recently a star on a national sustaining radio show. Two other "names" are to be seen together with Crosby, one from the stage and the other a veteran film. They are Mary (My Heart Belongs to Daddy) Martin, from the Broadway musical comedy stage and Basil Rathbone.

Paramount started recruiting from the airways when they cast Jack Benny in "Man About Town". Jack brought along his maestro, Phil Harris and that notable gentleman of color, "Rochester".

Bob Hope followed and with him came Jerry (Yahoodi) Colonna, in "The Road to Singapore" with Bing and Dorothy Lamour.

Jack Benny topped all of this by including Rochester, Harris, Dennis Day, his tenor, and Andy Devine in "Buck Benny Rides Again". Miss Cornell made her screen debut in this film.

For its production "What a Life", Paramount took the famous Aldrich Family of the air lanes, and the results justified the move so well that a second Aldrich Family film "Life With Henry", was made.

The studio then purchased the radio show title, "I Want a Divorce" and cast Dick Powell, radio star, for the lead. Following this, and before "Rhythm on the River" went into production, Paramount made "Comin' Round the Mountain", starring Bob Burns and six prominent radio personalities including Uncle Ezra, Jerry Colonna, Mayor Gildersleeve and the Old Timer of the Fibber McGee program, "Slap-happy Granpappy" and "Mirandy".

Other major studios have also gone to the radio for talent, and have readily loaned of their rosters in the way of movie stars. Both sides of the axis would seem to be thoroughly pleased and it is believed that both audiences are happy about the whole thing.

Select Junior Units.

A splendid program of junior units have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including the Popular Belle Newsreel with its latest popular World News Events, Popeye in a funny cartoon "Wimmin Hadn't Oughta Drive", and an unusually interesting Paramount pictorial in technicolor.

AT THE CAPITOL

"South to Karanga"

Heralded as a thrilling action drama, Universal's "South To Karanga" will open next at the Capitol Theatre.

Based on the exciting adventures of a small group of whites in the African interior, the film boasts a cast of well-known players including Charles Bickford, James Craig, Luli Deste and John Sutton.

Bickford portrays a courageous American consul whose courage and resourcefulness help to solve a mysterious murder and to quell a native uprising. Craig and Miss Deste share romantic honors, while Sutton, Maurice Moscovitch, Paul Hurst, Abner Biberman and Ben Carter have the chief supporting roles.

Highlights of the film depict attacks by African natives on a railway train and on the headquarters of a copper mine. A series of spectacular dynamite explosion repel the savages in the film's thrilling climax.

"Lady From Nowhere"

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop happened to notice ma's feet, saying, Well, look what's here.

Meaning ma's initials in silver letters on the front of each shoe, and ma said, O yes, Willyum, they're sterling silver and bent by hand, what do you think of them?

I think they're unusually striking and abslutely unessential, pop said, and ma said, Willyum, you couldn't of said anything nicer, because thereby hangs a tail, I mean there's quite a story connected with these initials.

You must tell it to me some time, and I understand there's no time like the present, pop said, and ma said, Well, the Current Events Club had a very instrusting meeting this afternoon. The chief speaker was Dr. Moses Jonson Abbott of the Girls High School and his subject was the forced daily sacrifices that are being made by women in all warring countries and all the conkered countries while the women over here are comparatively and relatively untouched, and he thought it would be a very nice gesture if we all agreed to show our thankfulness as well as our simpathy by voluntarily denying ourselves every day of something that we realy need. Dr. Abbott asked all those willing to make the pledge to raise their hands, and there wasn't an unraised hand in the room. Personly I suited the action to the word on my way home from the meeting, because goodness knows I'm in dire need of some new gloves, but I walked through Hookbinders glove department with a firm tread, and that's where the silver shoe initials enter the picture she said.

Just where is that? pop said, and ma said, Why, ordinarily I wouldn't give way to such a needless luxury, but inasmuch as I had voluntarily given up something I needed so acutely, I felt I could very well indulge in such an attractive non essential, and your reaction to them just went to furtner prove my point, and I dont see anything funny, Willyum.

Being the difference between her and pop.

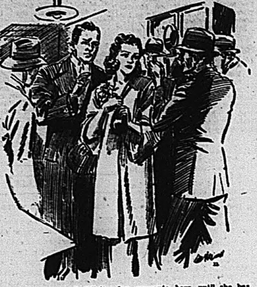
"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN



Dudley interposed: "Wait a few moments, boys, until she has seen her husband."

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The bridge tables were set up in the elaborate modern game room. A fire was lighted. Somebody turned on the radio and Mr. Warren danced with Judith. His obvious admiration bucked her up, gave her courage. The bridge game got going, two tables, leaving Judith with Dudley and the Smythes. The butler brought out some of Jameson's colored "stills" for them to see.

"The kids should be back any minute," Jameson said as he dealt the cards. "Come on, partner, I feel lucky tonight."

Both Judith and Michael Dudley tried hard to keep conversation from lagging. They laughed a good deal. The Smythes were impatient, however. They wanted to play. Half an hour later the Duttons arrived.

"Tex and Sonia? We must have missed them," Mrs. Dutton said carelessly. "We left the house about an hour ago, and stopped off to see some friends of Bill's."

Without preliminary the three tables settled down to serious playing. So Michael and Judith were left alone at the radio. . . .

"Must we stay much longer?" Judith asked pleadingly of Dudley.

"Just a little while. Then I'll take you to the hotel," he reassured her.

"They may not come." Judith's lips were stiff.

"Of course, they will." He eyed Judith quizzically. "I thought you were perfect. You aren't going to develop into a jealous wife!"

Judith laughed in spite of herself. Dudley's attitude was just what she needed.

"Of course not," she promised. "But my head aches terribly. I slept hardly at all last night. And the services tomorrow are at 10. Tex is going south with Elsie and her aunt, you know."

"Yes, it's going to be a difficult day. Just give me a little time and I'll get you out of here with finesse."

Dudley was as good as his word. In another half hour, he helped Judith say good night to their host.

"It's going to be a hard day tomorrow," he explained. Jameson was all solicitude.

"Of course. Run along. I'll send Tex on down just as soon as he comes." Then he added: "They probably stopped somewhere to get a drink."

In the car Dudley and Judith had little to say to each other. Dudley was annoyed by Tex. If he didn't have any sense, certainly Sonia should have some! Tex had been drinking. But she hadn't. There was no excuse!

Those cats back there at Jameson's would chatter. How well Dudley knew that Sonia would find that fact amusing. She liked gossip.

When Dudley and Judith walked into the hotel lobby, they were hailed by several acquaintances.

"Gosh, you look wonderful!" Lee exclaimed. He did not ask for Tex. Judith noted that fact. He must know where Tex was.

Then Judith heard Dudley's name being paged. Later she saw him making his way toward her.

"I've got to take Mrs. Aimes up town, boys." He took her arm, without any explanation, led her out into the street. Judith assumed Tex had called.

"Where are we going?" she asked as they waited for her car. He did not answer until they were inside, and Judith could not hear the directions he gave his chauffeur. She turned to him anxiously.

"Anything wrong, Mr. Dudley?"

"Yes, Judith. Jameson just telephoned me."

"What?"

"Tex and Sonia had a little accident."

"Accident?"

He put his hand over Judith's

"Now, keep your chin up. It's nothing serious. He just got a whack on the head. They hit a safety zone sign."

So for the second time in forty-eight hours, Judith was headed for a hospital.

"Where did it happen?"

Dudley hesitated only for a moment. He respected Judith too much to lie to her.

"West on the Drive."

Judith made no reply but she knew quite well what Dudley already knew, that Tex and Sonny by no means had been headed back to the Jameson home when the accident happened.

Soon the lights of the hospital doorway were before them. Hurriedly climbing the steps, up which Judith and Elsie had gone the day before, Judith's knees were weak. Maybe he was hurt worse than Dudley had said.

In the waiting room there were several people. "Reporters!" Dudley murmured. "Be careful."

The newspapermen had rushed to the hospital to find out all details about the accident to America's latest flying hero. One of them, recognizing Judith, spoke: "Mrs. Aimes, we've been waiting . . ."

Dudley interposed here: "Wait a few moments, boys, until she's seen her husband . . ."

They protested in a chorus: "She may duck out on us."

"She won't," Dudley promised.

There was the sudden flare of a flashlight bulb. A photographer had snapped a picture.

Judith standing there in her finery was close to tears. "You go on in, Mrs. Aimes. I'll wait here with the boys," Dudley said.

CHAPTER TWELVE

A nurse led Judith down a corridor into an emergency ward. Rows of men in various stages of bandaging. Some of them started at the apparition in white. Over in the corner behind a curtained bed, somebody was groaning . . . Tex!

"We must get him in a private room!" his wife gasped. It was gruesome, this crowded ward! The nurse reassured her. "He's not hurt much, I can assure you."

Then they were at the famous flyer's bedside. There was a white bandage on his head. For a moment Judith thought he was unconscious, and a stifled cry rose to her lips. Then Tex opened his eyes. Judith, her hands clenched, kept her voice steady as she murmured, "I'm so sorry, Tex."

He grinned at her, that boyish, mischievous smile she knew so well.

"How are you, honey?"

Judith managed a smile, too.

"I seem to be in a bit better shape than you."

Tex tried to nod his head and emitted a groan.

"Lord, does my head hurt! When can I get out of here?" He started to get out of bed.

"No, no, Tex!" The nurse added. "Better lie still until morning, Mr. Aimes. I'll give you something to make you sleep. Then you'll feel fine."

Judith didn't ask about the accident. She was conscious of a large man in the next bed staring at her. Soon she said, "I'm not going to stay, Tex. I'll look in on Sonia to see how she is."

Judith was repaid for that effort by the relief in her husband's eyes as he remarked, "I'm told she's only shaken up, but the car is a mess, it belongs to Jameson. Don't ask me how it happened. It just did. And I hadn't had much to drink."

"I'm glad it's no worse." She bent to kiss him. "I'll see you early in the morning."

"Be sure. I'm going with Elsie to the funeral tomorrow. I swear it."

"Is there anything you want?"

"I could use a drink."

"You aren't going to get that. You're going to sleep."

But Tex was not quite as nonchalant as he appeared. "Will there be much of a row? I mean about driving drunk? The cops were swell to us."

"I don't know. Mr. Dudley is with me—"

Tex was obviously relieved by that.

"Tell old Dud to fix things up."

Then Judith left. Going down the corridor Judith asked about another room for Tex.

"There isn't one. We took the last one for Miss Winthrop. Besides he'll be asleep in three minutes."

"Can he leave tomorrow?"

"Depends on the doctor, but I should think so. He was lucky."

The nurse knocked on the door of Sonny's room. Inside two internes were fussing over the patient. Never had Sonia looked prettier. . . . She's putting on a good act for those internes, was Judith's first thought.

When Sonny saw Judith framed in the doorway, she was for a moment nonplussed.

"I'm so sorry this has happened, Miss Winthrop. Tex wanted me to look in on you before I left. He feels a bit rocky but he's not hurt much."

Sonny was accustomed to situations." And lack of courage was not one of her faults.

"It was kind of you to come." Then she added: "The camera boys upset me. They came right in here and took pictures. We couldn't stop them!"

Judith kept her set smile. There was a faint light of triumph in Sonny's blue eyes.

"Jameson is going to be wild at me."

"It is too bad about the car."

"I don't mean that—" Sonny hesitated prettily. "He can afford it. I mean the publicity—" and she pretended to be sorry she had spoken.

"What does it matter? Everybody has automobile accidents."

Judith's blue eyes were limpid in their innocence, and Sonny watched her warily.

"People might misunderstand—"

"I don't see why."

Even Sonny could not continue after that.

So perfectly did Judith perform that the nurse felt suddenly sorry for this wife who did not understand Sonny Winthrop. But Sonny was not so sure. The two girls looked at each other in the dim light of the hospital room.

"Can I get you anything? Clothes, or anything?"

Judith felt she was coming out of this encounter the victor.

"No, thanks. The Jamesons are coming down shortly to bring me clothes. I can't stand these hospital sheets. And this night gown! It's my knee that's hurt."

The nurse interposed here: "It's nothing but a little cut, Miss Winthrop. You'll be good as new in a couple of days."

"I hope so. I must get my ship back to the coast for the fall meet there."

"I'll say good night," said Judith. "When I come for Tex tomorrow, we'll stop by."

"Oh, I'll be leaving just as soon as I can! And thanks for coming."

Out in the corridor Judith felt wilted and tired. The nurse and Judith went back to the waiting room in silence.

Dudley and the reporters were still there.

"Everything's all right," Judith reported. There were questions about the Jameson party. Judith answered everything. Dudley hurried things up. There were pictures and more pictures. . . .

But Judith kept thinking of those few minutes in the hospital room. It was as though a declaration of war had been made—modern style. No open hostilities, no announcement, but the first hostile move had been made. Now the undeclared struggle was on and Judith was not caught quite unprepared.

Dudley watching, realized something of what must have happened between the two women. He chuckled to himself as he took Judith to his waiting car.

"You seem always to be getting me out of jams," Judith remarked as she sunk back in the soft seat.

The last forty-eight hours had been like a nightmare. She could still smell the hospital disinfectant, see the white, pain-harassed faces on the beds in the emergency ward.

Dudley remained silent. He was a comforting person. He knew when you wanted him to talk to help you forget your thoughts. And when to be silent.

"You didn't eat any dinner. I know, for I watched you. We're going to get you some soup before you turn in."

"I couldn't!" Judith protested.

The car stopped at an all-night lunchroom. It was almost empty. They went in and Dudley ordered hot soup and a glass of milk.

"It does taste good," she admitted.

Judith looked across the table at Dudley and, for the first time, was alarmed at what she saw. He knew. . . . He understood everything. . . . Suddenly she wanted to get away from him. He knew too much about her. She never wanted to see him again!

Dudley saw the sudden terror in her eyes. He couldn't let her go like this.

"I'm something of a fatalist, Judith. In the old days I cracked up a few ships—but I always walked away from them. I stopped flying five years ago. Since then I've been in four automobile accidents."

"Really?"

Judith's eyes were warmer now, not so frozen and afraid.

"The boys are right in saying if their number's not up, they won't get it."

Judith nodded. "I suppose that's so. But it is hard, if you're behind, on the ground."

Dudley, fingering an unlit cigar, continued: "I remember when Babe Ruth said to me once. You know The Babe. I was trying to persuade him to let me fly him to the coast. He grinned and said: 'All this business about your number being up is all right. But how do I know but what your number's up and mine isn't!'" He took the train!"

Judith grinned. That tenseness was gone. There were purple shadows under her eyes. But she was herself again. It wasn't until they were ready to leave that Judith referred to the accident.

"Will there be any trouble about the accident? Tex had had a lot to drink."

"I'm on my way to police headquarters now, just as soon as I drop you at the hotel. He didn't hit anybody, thank heavens!"

In the lobby later, Dudley stopped only a moment: "I'll be at police headquarters. If you need me, call me."

TORONTO STOCKS (Close)

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—The price tone was a bit soft to wind up the week on the Toronto Exchange. As quotations slipped trading dried up and turnover was under 100,000 shares for the two hour session. All indices were off narrowly at the close.

Canadian Oils Pfd. advanced 3 points to 118 and Imperial Oil added the minimum fraction. Three other preferred issues, Blue Ribbon, International Metals and Canada Cement advance 1-2 point to a point or more and Canadian Locomotive at 11 was up a point. Fanny Farmer strengthened.

Bralorne continued upward, adding ¼ to sell at 10¼ and prices firmed slightly for Pickle Crow, Kerr-Addison, Premier, Senator, Sladen and Malartic Gold Fields. Wright-Hargreaves weakened 10 cents to 6.25 and Gunnar, Cochenour Willans and McKenzie displayed moderate weakness. A block of Cochenour Willans stock is to be released from Escrow, it is announced.

Further strength was displayed by Hudson Bay, selling at 27 3-4 and among the cheaper issues prices were down 2 to 5 cents for Ventures, Steep Rock and Sherritt.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Recovery signs cropped up in today's stock market but most were too feint to indicate a definite trend. In the closing hour there was a fairly even distribution of negligible gains and losses, with transfers around 200,000 shares against 360,000 last Saturday.

Among resistant stocks were U.S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, International Harvester, Santa Fe, General Electric American Telephone, U.S. Steel and Bethlehem.

Inclined to lag were Chrysler, General Motors, Boeing, International Nickel, Anaconda, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak and N.Y. Central.

McIntyre, in the Canadian group, advanced one point while Canadian Pacific and Distillers dipped fractions. Canada 4s, among bonds, held unchanged.

Three Communists Sent to Internment Camp After Raid

Montreal, Sept. 7 (CP)—Three Montreal members of the outlawed Communist Party of Canada were on their way to interment camp today following raids on their homes last night by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Provincial Police.

Sufficient Hogs to Meet Demands

The survey cards for the third quarter of the year have gone out to the boar owners of Ontario. The information that these cards carry is of interest to all hog producers. It is as follows:

"From the survey made in the second quarter it is estimated that marketings for the Dominion will show an increase of about thirty-two per cent. during the last quarter of this year, over the corresponding quarter, 1939. This estimate is, if anything, a little low. In any event, we should have sufficient hogs to meet whatever demands may be made upon us by the United Kingdom, and the value of such a contribution by hog producers cannot be over-estimated in the present emergency. The United Kingdom depends upon us to maintain hog production on a scale sufficient to meet whatever war-time needs may develop. Such needs can be met by a production strictly in line with sound farm economy. We are now in a position to serve the best interests of the Empire, and at the same time market a large part of our surplus grain through a favorable medium."

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of September 6th, 1940, are as follows:

Top-Grade Eggs Decline, Butter Firm

Egg prices declined on top grades in slow trading on the Toronto open produce market, while butter closed the week on a firm note. Poultry prices were lower for the week.

Demand was quiet for top-quality eggs, with A-large slipping to 33c, A-medium to 31c, and A-pullet eggs to 28. Undergrades moved fairly well and held steady in price. A premium of 1c per dozen was obtainable on Government-inspected shipments in the afternoon.

During the week the egg market showed a complete reversal of its upward movement last week. This easiness became more pronounced as receipts increased and buyers displayed a more cautious attitude. As a result, top grades closed approximately 3c down from last week's peak quotations in the graded section. Prices for A-pullet Grade B and Grade C eggs held fairly steady under a moderately good demand. The local weakness appeared to be caused by diversion of Western Ontario shipments from Montreal to Toronto rather than by any increase in production or drop in consumption. There was some slight export activity, one car of Grade B eggs rolling to seaboard yesterday and another being assembled for shipment next week.

Although buying interest was not quite as keen as on Thursday, the butter market showed a firm tone. Offerings were light and moved steadily. First-grade Ontario creamery solids were unchanged in price at 23c.

Poultry offerings increased considerably during the week. With consumer demand only fair, prices registered a decline of 1c to 2c pound on all grades of live and dressed chickens except broilers, which were scarce and consequently advanced in price. Most supplies lacked something in quality and finish. Fowl prices stayed steady.

WILL LAUNCH LOAN

This second loan is for a longer average term and bears a lower interest yield, three per cent, as compared with 3 1-4 for the first war bonds. Officials said last night indications from preliminary surveys promised a ready response.

Finance Minister to Speak

Mr. Ilsley will address an appeal to the people Sunday night over a National Radio network and there will be other speakers in the campaign from time to time while the issue is on sale.

Leading newspaper cartoonists of Canada have given their services to the campaign and their work is already appearing in the daily papers.

One cartoon pictures the first war loan and the war savings certificates as soldiers in a front line trench with an eager soldier coming up from the rear to their assistance, symbolizing the second war loan.

Another, to appear Monday, pictures a fisherman standing in the bow of a row boat aiming a spear, labelled "second war loan" at a Swastika marked shark just below the surface, and captioned, "open season on German sharks".

PRINCESSES GIVEN RAID SOUVENIR

London, Sept. 7 (CP Cabde) — Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose are each the proud possessor of the fin of bombs dropped by a raider. After visiting craters where bombs fell in the open country a few days ago, they asked for a souvenir of the raids. The authorities thereupon sent each a bomb fin.

SURPLUS WHEAT LOANS REFUSED

Conferences of Cabinet Body With Interested Parties Are so Far Fruitless

Ottawa, Sept. 7 — (CP) — The knotty problem of devising means of meeting financial needs of farmers who must store wheat on farms until elevator space becomes available occupied the Wheat Committee of the Cabinet Friday with no indication when a solution may be reached.

Conferences on the question, involving the Cabinet committee, representatives of Western Canada grain interests and growers, banks and the Canadian Wheat Board have been in progress all this week.

Latest news from the series of parleys was that representatives of chartered banks had rejected a proposal that banks make loans to Prairie farmers, the banks' security being wheat stored on farms and a Federal Government guarantee of 15 per cent. of the total loan.

This information was gained on good authority and at the same time it was said that bankers who met with the Cabinet committee yesterday suggested the Wheat Board advance farmers a portion of the 70 cents a bushel guaranteed for No. 1 Northern wheat.

Under the bankers' suggestion the Wheat Board would pay farmers the balance of the guaranteed price as soon as farmers delivered wheat to elevators when space becomes available.

At present, due to a record wheat carryover and a large new crop, elevator storage space is at a premium.

Thus grain must be held on farms but under the present wheat set-up advances cannot be made on wheat until it has been delivered to the Wheat Board.

Western farmers, unable to cash in on their crops, have pressed on the Government their need of funds to maintain operations and meet current expenses until the grain can be delivered and this week's conferences were called to deal with the situation.

Latest arrival in Ottawa for the conferences was George McIvor, chairman of the Canadian Wheat Board who reached the Capital this morning from Winnipeg. He talked with Trade Minister MacKinnon and other ministers.

Another meeting brought together the Cabinet Wheat Committee, elevator interests and senior officers of the Agriculture, Trade and Commerce and Finance departments.

A First Come First Served Rule Observed

London, Sept. 7 (CP).—Intensification of German aerial activity over England has caused air raid wardens to start enforcing a first come first served rule on people who have been getting to shelters early and trying to hold places for friends.

Other manifestations of the stepped up war in the air were these developments:

Hop growers in Kent expressed fear that part of their crop would spoil because they cannot get sufficient pickers to come into the oft-bombed southeast coast region despite assurances of adequate shelter.

The British Medical Journal advised diabetics to have a month's supply of insulin on hand as a precaution against failures in local distribution.

The Daily Express fumed because deliveries of letter mail were delayed a day through "paralysis at the post office" when sirens sound. The paper said most private businesses continued operations until raids were actually sighted overhead.

Ankle chain identiay disks have made their appearance in the stores and promptly have become the newest jewelry fad among shop girls.

TYPHOID SWEEPS PRISON CAMPS

Thousands of French Soldiers Affected in German-Occupied France

Vichy, France, Sept. 7 (AP).—Epidemics of typhoid fever and dysentery were reported today to be sweeping war prison camps in German-occupied France with thousands of French soldiers affected. Some estimates of the number ran as high as 800,000.

It was impossible to authenticate the estimates because the Germans are shifting the prisoners to Germany and there was lack of official information.

Seriousness of the situation was emphasized when authorities at Paris requested French military pharmacies in unoccupied France to make an immediate survey of their stocks of drugs reported exhausted in the occupied area.

PANAMA CANAL WORKERS STRIKE

Ask Increased Pay for Skilled Workers and Better Food

Balboa, C.Z., Sept. 7 (AP). — A strike of laborers employed on secret defence projects on the Panama Canal spread to the Pacific side of the canal today when 300 to 400 men refused to check in for work.

The strike started among several hundred workmen on the Atlantic side of the canal Thursday. About half the remaining 1,200 laborers employed there refused to report for work yesterday.

The strikers asked pay increases from 18 and 20 cents an hour to 30 cents for laborers and from 25 to 45 cents for skilled workers and also complained about the food.

Price Board Removes Peg on Bread Cost

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP).—Application of the 15 cents a bushel processing tax, imposed last July on wheat milled for domestic consumption, should not necessitate any higher price for bread than that which has prevailed this year, the War Time Prices and Trade Board declared in announcing that the price fixing order on flour and bread issued August 6 had been rescinded.

Soon after the processing tax was announced Vancouver bakers increased the price of bread to an extent which the board felt was unjustified by the flour levy. This was followed by issuance of an order fixing the price of bread and flour at that which prevailed July 22 when the processing tax was announced, and ordering millers to divide the levy equally with their customers.

Meanwhile a survey has been made by the board on an auditors' report obtained on leading milling companies covering the five years ending Aug. 31, 1939. This revealed that millers could not be expected to absorb the tax, which amounts to 70 cents on a barrel of flour.

But the board finds that with today's price of flour to the bakers, with the 70 cents a barrel tax added, will not justify any increase in the price of bread above that which has existed heretofore this year.

Youth Group Forms "Torch Club" in City

The nucleus of what promises to be a popular youth movement was started at the Y.M.C.A. Friday afternoon when several young men from the city met and formed plans for a "Torch Club" for which school boys and other working lads between the ages of 16-21 are eligible to join.

The temporary executive of the "Torch Club" will be Ben Ogilvie and Jack Salz while the adult leader of the group will be Mr. George Dudgeon, teacher at the Belleville Collegiate. This executive will be responsible for carrying on the interests of the club until September 20th when a wiener roast will be staged and at which the final plans for the winter's activities will be formulated.

Taking for their motto an excerpt from "In Flanders Field" the club will endeavour to carry on the torch of social responsibility thrown to them by other young men who have enlisted in the Army, Navy and Air Force. The club members will have a regular line of lapel pins etc., and initiation ceremonies are now being planned. Starting the first of October, they will begin a regular program of supper evenings every second week, while once each month there will be a social evening to which each young man will be expected to bring a member of the opposite sex. This meeting will be called "co-educational" night.

Until the regular evening meetings start in October, the school boys of the club will have the privileges of using the "gym" floor on two afternoons out of the week, while the working members of the club will be afforded these privileges on the same evenings.

74 Pieces Fireworks Found in Lumber Pile

Tweed, Ont., Sept. 7—(Special)—What is thought to be the cache of a thief or gang of thieves, was discovered here early today when 74 pieces of fireworks were found secreted in a lumber pile on the property of Paul Rashotte. The discovery was made by Raphael Rashotte whose curiosity was aroused when he saw pieces of colored paper sticking out from the bottom of the pile.

Fifty pieces of explosive fireworks including rockets, "cannons," etc., and twenty-four sets of display fireworks were included in the find.

Chief of Police Clare Hayes was notified and an investigation of shops having fireworks for sale revealed that no stocks had been stolen in Tweed. It is thought the fireworks had been stolen from another community and placed in the Rashotte lumber pile for future reference.

MAYOR'S WIFE DIES

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP).—Mrs. William Morrison, wife of Mayor Morrison of Hamilton, died early today at the Lake Simcoe summer home of Mrs. W. B. Horkins of Toronto. Apparently in good health previously, Mrs. Morrison was stricken by a heart attack at about one o'clock this morning. She had been visiting Mrs. Horkins for only a few days.

INSPECTS BASE SITES

Even while the news of the leasing of bases by Great Britain to the United States was still being set in headlines, Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, U. S. navy, was on his way to Bermuda at the head of a board which will conduct an inspection of the proposed sites.

NEW STRONG MAN

General Ion Antonescu, long a bitter foe of Magda Lupescu, is the new strong man of Rumania. He was called upon by King Carol to form a new government amid nationwide turbulence. He laid down his own terms for accepting the call, one of which was the exiling of Magda Lupescu. Shortly after Antonescu became military dictator, King Carol abdicated in favor of Crown Prince Michael.

BRITISH DEFENCES

A number of streets in one residential area were badly battered by high explosive and incendiary bombs. A resident said the Germans first set off fires with incendiaries and then used the glare to guide them in further attacks.

The almost continuous raids launched against the London area were begun at 4:50 a.m. yesterday, the first time since Sunday that the pre-dawn darkness had been broken by attack. The raiders came in masses of 300 or more, with waves of 20 or 30 planes flying over the city in relays.

So fast did the raiders come that on one occasion two bombs were dropped on the edge of the metropolitan area before a warning was sounded. This occurred just before the fourth alarm, which came at 8:53 p.m.

Urban Objectives Sought

British observers said the Germans apparently were devoting their night attacks to urban objectives and striking at Royal Air Force bases during the day in an attempt to gain supremacy of the air by knocking out the British fighter force.

Attacks on coastal bases by short-ranged Nazi fighters presumably were designed to push the British aerial defence line back, giving the invaders an area in which they would be comparatively free from fighter opposition.

Despite the increasing pressure being applied by the Germans, the Royal Air Force has been destroying an average of 2½ Nazi planes for each loss it has sustained, it was said. More than half the German losses were said to be bombers.

During yesterday's fighting the R.A.F. destroyed 45 German planes while losing only 19 themselves. During the period from Aug. 3 to Sept. 5 German losses were estimated at 710 planes.

Aircraft Production Minister Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper, The Express, warned that the volume of the German attacks "quite likely" could be twice as great as at present, but declared:

"The horde of planes hurled at us yesterday and hurled back represented the very most that could be done at that time in that area."

Defence Minister Travels by Air to Inspect West Camps

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston will leave Ottawa by air tomorrow for a swift inspection of military districts and camps in Western Canada.

Col. Ralston will travel nearly 5,-300 miles by air on the tour. The Minister has already visited the eastern camps.

Plans call for his return within a week.

Ralston will be flown by Royal Canadian air force pilots and will be accompanied by Col. A. A. MaGee, his senior executive assistant.

Compulsory Military Training Will Give Young Men Better Concept of Disciplined Team Work

Defence Department Wants Them to Get a Better Concept of How to Conduct Themselves as Members of a Group

By KEN CLARK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 7 (CP).—The young men who go to militia training centres for compulsory instruction are to return home at the end of a month in better physical condition, with a basic knowledge of military life and a better concept of how to conduct themselves as individuals and members of a group. That, at least, is the idea of the defence department.

The first men called up for training will be 30,000 single men of 21 years or childless widowers of that age. They will report to training centres about Oct. 9.

A defence department spokesman today explained the department attitude regarding these men, as follows:

"We don't want them to think of themselves as a herd. We want them to learn to perfect themselves as individuals, controlling that individuality in team work.

"It's the same as on a hockey team. A man wants to be a wonderful stick-handler. That's fine. His ability as a stick-handler is the same in relation to his team as his ability as an individual sharpshooter is to his platoon on battle field."

The department is laying a good deal of emphasis on initiative and skill in field craft. There will not be much teaching of highly technical stuff such as how to attain a certain objective with certain fire-power. But the young men will be taught how to dig a weapon pit (not a fire trench), how to move through the woods without noise.

As to physical training the courses have been carefully graduated to get the most out of the men and at the same time not to throw too great a strain on those unaccustomed to physical labor and sports.

45 Minutes "P.T."

Physical-training, known as "PT", will be in groups as small as possible. It will be without apparatus so that men returning from camp will be able to keep it up in their homes. The regular period of 45 minutes will be divided, 20 minutes for reflex and bend and 20 for games. There will be a five-minute rest period.

Here is a sample day in the life of the young Canadian defence student in the third week of his course, after he has been toughened a bit:

Ten study and drill periods of 45 minutes each with five minutes rest between, making a day of 7½ hours.

1 Physical training.

2 Anti-aircraft—how to deal with strafing and parachutists.

3, 4, 5. Marching—to bring a man to understand individual and corporate discipline necessary to route marching and up to the standard of doing eight miles (by stages—three, three, four, six and eight miles.)

6. Drill and arms drill—to teach a man how to conduct himself on parade and inculcate the idea of timing his actions with those of others.

7. Gas—to give a basic knowledge of the possibilities of chemical warfare, how to use and have confidence in a respirator and some practice in wearing respirators.

8. Drill.

9. Gas.

10. Bayonet drill—to teach a man how to handle a bayonet and improve his physique and mental alertness.

This sample day, being Monday, is the toughest day of the week. On succeeding days there are introduced such periods as military education, shooting, work in the field with digging and wiring and field craft which includes such exercises as stalking.

Studies include lectures on what it means to be a free citizen of Canada, democratic forms of government, the rights of citizens and soldiers.

NATIONAL ANTHEM TO CLOSE C.N.E.

General Manager Says Financial Results Exceeded Expectations of Directors

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—Elwood A. Hughes, General Manager of the Canadian National Exhibition, said today that financial results of the 1940 Fair exceeded expectations and that plans already are under way for the 1941 exposition. He said he hoped that theme of the Exhibition next year would be "Victory Year."

The two-week annual attraction for thousands of visitors closed tonight with community singing before the main bandshell and with the Royal Canadian Air Force Band, guards-of-honor and other troops in attendance. Hymns will be sung and the flag lowered. As the flag reaches the base of the pole cannonade of fireworks will be released and the National Anthem will close the fair.

Total attendance at the Exhibition, up to last night was 1,474,000, 3,000 more than up to the same date last year.

Prominence given to agriculture at the Exposition—largest annual fair in the world—was demonstrated yesterday when nearly $500,000 worth of the finest livestock in the Dominion paraded around the Coliseum ring following conclusion of several days of judging.

Parade Included Winners

The parade included only winners and represented only the topnotchers of stables and herds competing. Total value of which would be approximately $2,000,000. Five hundred animals paraded in the review of champions, fewer than in former years but estimated to be of improved quality.

The decrease was attributed to farmers hurrying home to gather crops. Stable boys and even Boy Scouts were enlisted to relieve the shortage of halter holders in the mass parade.

Gwendoline Hague, 24, of Weston, suburban Toronto, won the $500 exhibition scholarship in voice after competitions lasting several days. She is a dramatic soprano.

Disabled Fishing Tug is Found

Erie, Pa., Sept. 7 (AP).—The Lake Erie fishing tug Ethel J., missing since Thursday night, was found disabled yesterday 23 miles west of Erie and towed to port by a Coastguard cutter.

A timing gear on the tug had broken, leaving the craft drifting eight miles off shore and out of the steamship lanes.

Just before the tug was sighted, the crew of five had eaten the last of the food aboard.

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Cable Editor)

The exchange of United States destroyers for defence facilities on British territory in the western hemisphere, marking a development of tremendous importance in relations between the British Empire and the United States, was the outstanding event of the 53rd week of the war.

The British government granted 99-year leases on territory suitable for air and naval bases in Newfoundland and Bermuda. Similar facilities in British Guiana and in five British West Indian islands were granted in return for 50 surplus American destroyers, classified as "over-age" since they were completed prior to 192.

President Roosevelt described the agreement as more important in some ways than the Louisiana purchase from France more than a century ago and he hinted that other similar arrangements may be forthcoming in future weeks. Prime Minister Churchill declared the exchange would cause displeasure in Berlin, but also would permit the United States to "take danger by the throat whilst it is still hundreds of miles away from their homeland".

The week also brought to a head the affairs of Rumania. King Carol, who tried to keep his realm together by first inclining to one side in the war and then to the other, was forced to abdicate in favor of his son, Prince Michael, by the new premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu. King Carol's downfall came as Hungarian troops occupied Northern Transylvania and Bulgaria prepared to take back Southern Dobruja. A few weeks ago Soviet Russia took over the third of Rumania's 1918 spoils, Bessarabia, as well as Northern Bucovina Province.

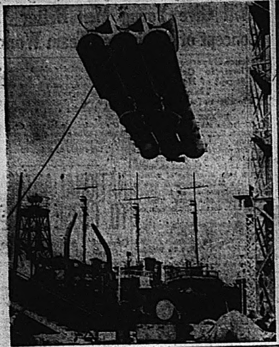
Hitler made a speech threatening the destruction of Britain's cities, and there was a speed-up in the tempo of the German air war on Britain—but with no more success than in previous weeks. The Royal Air Force continued to shoot down several times as many aircraft as it lost itself, and North American correspondents, roaming the country without restriction, found no evidence that the Nazi bombings had caused any appreciable slow-down in industrial production or caused serious damage elsewhere.

Mr. Churchill, in his speech in the House of Commons, disclosed that the Mediterranean fleet had been powerfully reinforced and that hostilities on a greater scale than heretofore might be expected in that region soon. Naval units, together with the fleet air arm, carried out successful attacks on Italian naval and air bases in the Dodecanese Islands off Greece.

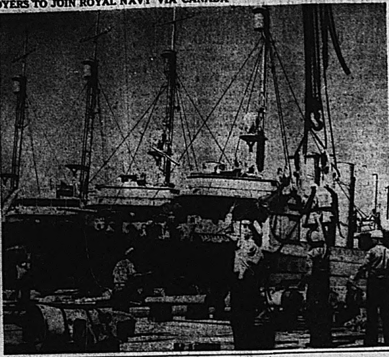
The seriousness of the movement favoring Britain and Gen. Charles de Gaulle in the French colonial empire was reflected in the designation by the Petain government of Gen. Maxime Weygand, hitherto war minister at Vichy, to go to Africa with full powers in an effort to restore the authority of Marshal Petain's government.

Glancing back 25 years: German agencies in the week of Sept. 1-7, 1915, suggested that the Kaiser's government would be willing to discuss peace with Britain, but the British war leaders replied that there could be no talk of a separate peace and that Britain would continue to act in co-operation with her allies. German zeppelins bombed London, causing civilian casualties but little material damage.

FIFTY U.S. DESTROYERS TO JOIN ROYAL NAVY VIA CANADA



Torpedo tubes are shown being hoisted aboard some of the Great War destroyers of the United States navy as they are rapidly being recommissioned for active service. Fifty of these destroyers have been turned over to Great Britain by President Roosevelt.



Idle since the World War, a large number of United States navy destroyers are now being refitted for active service. Armed with anti-aircraft guns, machine-guns, torpedo tubes and four-inch guns, 50 of these destroyers will soon join Britain's Royal Navy under an arrangement whereby the U.S. will have air and naval bases on British territories of the Atlantic.

United States navy yards are busily engaged in the work of reconditioning a large number of destroyers which were built near the end of the last world war. Fifty of these destroyers are now consigned to Great Britain in exchange for which the United States obtained air and naval bases on British Atlantic territory. A number of the destroyers are shown undergoing repairs in dry dock.

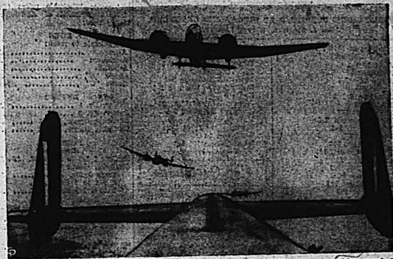
SAID INTERNED HERE

According to the New York Daily News, Prince Frederick of Prussia, 28, grandson of the former Kaiser, is now a prisoner in a Canadian internment camp. Ottawa authorities claimed they had "no official knowledge" of the Prince's internment in Canada. He was interned in London last month.

JUMPS FOR SCIENCE

A jump from 33,000 feet in which his parachute won't open for 31,000 feet will be made by Arthur H. Starnes, 35, in the interest of science. He will carry equipment to measure respiration and pulse during his leap from the stratosphere. He is shown in a low pressure chamber at Northwestern University Medical school, Chicago having his reactions tested.

BRITISH "NIGHTHAWKS" THAT BOMB GERMANY



Shown in flight here is a squadron of Hampden bombers, the big, long-range planes that now fly almost nightly to the heart of Germany on bombing expeditions. These craft have a flying range of 1,790 miles at cruising speed. Top speed is around 265 miles an hour.

ANOTHER U.S.-CANADA BOND

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Niagara Parks commission chairman, and Ontario minister of highways, presents to Margaret Anne Mather cuttings of Canadian gladioli to be planted in American soil. Occasion was dedication in Fort Erie, Ont., of Mather Park, named in honor of Alonzo Mather, 91, Chicago and Los Angeles industrialist, who donated the land. The park is the only memorial in Canada to a living American. The girl is a cousin of the donor.

JUST MADE for late vacationgoers are some swell jersey ensembles. A nice daytime model is in white jersey with beige binding the high round neck and forming plastrons for slit pockets at the bust and at the hips of the softly gathered skirt. Worn with a deeper beige jersey loose coat.

A GOOD DINNER tastes better if one is looking well. A lovely dinner dress is of dark red silk crepe done on long, slender lines with high, rounded neck and long sleeves. The snug bodice to the hipline is embroidered with rhinestones arranged in a large diamond pattern.

MORE CANADIAN TROOPS POUR INTO ENGLAND

A fresh contingent of Canadian troops, several thousand strong, have landed in England to take their place beside the thousands of other Canadian troops already on active service in the Mother Country. Warships guarded the huge gray transport vessels, LEFT, until the last of the new contingent had landed on the docks. On the way across, these two colored members of the contingent, LEFT, engaged in a little bingo to while away the time.

Barges at Dunkirk Bombed to Offset Threat of Invasion Reported by Air Ministry

London, Sept. 2 (CP)—Londoners took to air raid shelters late today as sirens signalled what appeared to be the start of a third night of Hitler's grimmest bombings, which already have left approximately 600 persons dead and 2,600 seriously wounded.

The sirens wailed at 5.09 p.m. (12.09 p.m. E.D.T.) after a 12-hour daylight calm during which a single German plane had been observed at a great height.

Weary firemen, policemen, anti-aircraft gunners, who had been catching catnaps in preparation for another night of the longest air attacks ever launched against one city, sprang to their posts.

Huge Fires Started by R.A.F.

During the lull which followed the "All clear" shortly after 5 a.m., the Air Ministry disclosed that 13 British bombers were lost yesterday and last night in the Royal Air Force's own mass raids against German shipping and continental objectives, including Hamburg, North Sea port, where huge fires were started. British raiders also sought to demolish Nazi barges and boats concentrated on the French coast for movement of invading troops.

Besides the large number of casualties widespread and severe damage was done in last night's raid on London.

Bremen and Emden, in Germany, and Dunkerque, Calais and Boulogne, in France, were bombed by large forces, the Air Ministry said and damage was done to oil tanks, ammunition stores, shipping and barge concentrations.

Its climate is mild compared with interior Alaska, the average monthly temperature varying from 10.5 degrees in January to 57 degrees in July. The lowest ever recorded was only 31 degrees below zero, which is often exceeded in parts of the United States and in southern Canada. REASON OF EXILE GIVEN BY PAPER

'Provocative Policy' Toward Soviet Union Believed Cause of Exile

Moscow, Sept. 9 (AP).—The Communist party organ, Pravda, claimed today "the real reason for the exile of King Carol" from Rumania was his "provocative policy" toward the Soviet Union.

Pravda said Carol provoked incidents on the Rumanian border and spread rumors that Russia was preparing to attack in an effort to justify the transfer of Transylvania to Hungary and obtain German-Italy guarantees for the remainder of his territory.

"The present government of Rumania saw through this provocative policy of Carol and his henchmen and has taken measures to exile Carol and punish his henchmen," Pravda said.

The dispatch was prominently displayed under a Kishinev, Bessarabia, dateline.

The Soviet government protested to Rumania against the frontier clashes twice before the latest Balkan turnover was completed.

Nazis Machine-Gun British Flier While Parachuting to Ground

New York, Sept. 9 (AP). — The British Broadcasting Corporation reported today that one of the British fliers in last night's fight parachuted from is disabled plane, was machine-gunned by German fighters as he fell, but made a safe "landing"—atop a barrage balloon. According to this report, picked up here by the National Broadcasting Company, the airman was hauled to safety by the balloon's ground crew. He was unhurt.

FIRST CAMP CASUALTY

Somewhere in England, Sept. 9—(CP)—Lieut. G. H. B. Stinson, of Hamilton, Ont., has the doubtful distinction of being the first camp casualty of a Central Ontario regiment which came over with the 2nd division. Riding his motorcycle along a loosely-packed gravel road Stinson's machine skidded rounding a turn, tossing him heavily against a concrete culvert. The cycle landed on top of him, fracturing a small bone in his right foot.

INVESTIGATE FALSE ALARMS

London, Sept. 9 (CP)—False alarm parachute attack warnings—the tolling of church bells— were being investigated today in five towns in Scotland. The inquiry was started when officials said they knew of no reason why the bells were rung, a signal reserved to warn of enemy 'chutists.

Londoners Argue as to Street Which Had Biggest Bombing

Red-Eyed Residents March to Work Happy But Confident After Two Nights of Constant Bombing

DAMAGE NOT SERIOUS

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 9 (CP).—Through dust and rubble-paved streets, red-eyed Londoners marched to work today after two nights of hearing death rain from the skies in the Nazis' terroristic intensification of the air war.

Obviously displaying lack of sleep, their main topic was the night's happenings as they boasted of their experiences. There were many arguments as to which particular street had the biggest bombing.

London was bombed for nearly 10 hours, the longest continuous raid on Britain since the war began. Starting at twilight and carrying on until dawn, the Nazi planes continually cruised over central London, making the night a Wagernian nightmare of karumps, crashes, bangs, screams, the drone of planes, flares, flashes and flames.

Many observers believed the skykrieg was more intense than on Saturday when 400 persons were killed. But casualties and damage last night were thought to be possibly less.

Dropped Over Wide Area.

Although bombs were dropped over a widespread area, I did not see a single trace of damage from the bus bringing me to work. Scrubwomen mopped the fronts of smart Regent street stores. Piccadilly Circus was the same bustling melee. An equestrian statue of King George III still stood imperturbable in Pall Mall. Nelson's statue kept silent watch over unscathed Trafalgar. Life in the Strand was the same as usual while Fleet street was its customary self.

The press agreed it was the air war in earnest and warned that still harder blows may come. But it glorified in Britain's ability to "take it".

Judged by Three Questions

The Times said the air offensive must be judged by the answers to three questions—whether Royal Air Force strength has been impaired,

FORTY MILLIONS SUBSCRIBED SOON AFTER LISTS OPEN

Bulk of Early Subscriptions Was From Large Investors

QUINTS TAKE $20,000

Military and Naval Display Feature Loan's Launching in Larger Centres

Ottawa, Sept. 9.— (CP)—A $20,000-subscription from the Dionne Quintuplets was one of the first to be placed on the books of Canada's Second War Loan of $300,000,000 which opened today throughout the Dominion.

Two hours after the books were opened subscriptions had been received for nearly 40,000,000 of the new bonds which bear interest at three per cent and return an average yield of 3 1-8 per cent at the selling price of 98.75.

Bulk of the early subscriptions was from the large investors. The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada subscribed for $10,000,000 worth, London Life Insurance Company $5,000,000, Canada Life Assurance Company $4,000,000, Noranda Mines and Affiliated Companies $4,310,000, International Nickel Company of Canada $3,000,000, Imperial Oil Limited and subsidiaries $3,000,000.

Military and naval displays featured the loan's launching in larger centres across Canada, while airplanes of the Royal Canadian Air Force "bombed" urban centres with leaflets urging citizens to "buy bonds to avoid bombing".

A note of international interest in the loan was shown in Montreal where S. D. Clough, President of Abbott Laboratories of Chicago, applied for $10,000 worth of bonds with a note saying, "just to show my heart is in the right place".

Restigouche Back Home After Long Voyage Overseas

Destroyer Acted as Convoy for Last Troops Leaving France at St. Nazaire

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 9—(CP)—If the fighting men of the Canadian destroyer Restigouche display a bit more swagger than usual these days, there's a reason. They've been in plenty of hot action against the enemy, and it was Jerry who came off second best.

On a three-months tour of front line duty in British and European waters that has just ended, members of the destroyer's crew believe their ship bagged a half-dozen enemy submarines. And except for a few dents left by the shrapnel of exploding bombs, the sturdy little craft came out of it unscathed.

The Restigouche during her stay on the other side of the Atlantic took part in the evacuation of British troops from St. Nazaire and other ports in France before the capitulation, harried constantly by Nazi dive bombers and submarines.

Members of the crew figured their vessel got "about six" of the subs unfortunate enough to pick on the Restigouche or ships she was convoying. Nobody bothered keeping score, but the seamen calculated that was about the tally.

Sank in Full View of Ship

One of the submarines sank in full view of half the destroyer's complement. After the Restigouche had attacked with a "pattern" of depth charges, the nose of the sub suddenly shot up out of the water and then slipped back vertically like a stricken fish. The explosions were believed to have broken her in two.

Dive bombers gave the crew some anxious moments, but none of them managed to score a hit on her. More than one bomb splashed into the sea just a few feet from her, to spray her sides with flying metal. But that was the extent of the damage.

The crew came out of all the action without a single injury. "We were mightly lucky," commented one seaman.

The Restigouche was skippered by Commander H. R. Lay, a native of Barrie, Ont. He is a nephew of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

CANADIAN FLIERS SHOOT DOWN 11 OF ENEMY PLANES

Quickly Disperse Big Formation of Bombers, Fighters in Saturday Raid

HAVE TOTAL OF 100

By SAM ROBERTSON

London, Sept. 9 (CP).—The Canadian squadron of the Royal Air Force knocked out eleven Nazi raiders during Saturday evening's air battle over southern England, bringing their total "kill" of enemy airplanes past the 100 mark, it was announced today.

The battle was said to have been the fiercest of the war.

Paced by their gallant legless leader, an Englishman, Squadron Leader Douglas Bader, the Canadians quickly dispersed a big formation of bombers and their protecting phalanx of fighters in an engagement two miles above the earth.

The Air Ministry said the mass attacks thrown against London and its surrounding area in the waning daylight of Saturday cost the Germans nearly one-quarter of the raiding force. The total shot down by fighters and anti-aircraft guns

ACTUAL TRANSFER OF DESTROYERS IS COMPLETED

British Officers and Tars March Aboard and Hoist Their Ensigns

U.S. TARS ASHORE

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 9 (CP).—First actual transfer of destroyers under the exchange of fifty "over-age" warships of this type to Britain in return for air and naval bases to the United States was completed here today with a minimum of ceremony.

British officers and tars marched aboard the group of destroyers and hoisted their ensigns, thus taking over the vessels on which United States and Canadian navy men had been rushing repairs and alterations to fit them for war purposes.

Only a short time previously United States sailors who had brought the trim vessels up the coast to this port last week went ashore and left the dock after their bugler had played "to the colors". The only ceremony before they left was the hauling down of the Stars and Stripes.

The Union Jack was hoisted on the bow of the destroyers by the British crews and the white ensign on the sterns simultaneously. Captains' pennants were run up on the mainmasts, indicating the destroyers were actually in commission of the Royal Navy.

The British tars lined up on the pier and then marched on board with their baggage.

Brilliant Student Faced With Choosing 1 of 3 Universities

Calgary, Sept. 9 (CP). — John Whittaker, a 17-year-old Calgarian with too many scholarships, now faces the problem of whether to go to Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., McGill at Montreal or the University of Alberta.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Whittaker, learned Sunday that their son has won another scholarship, his fourth since last Tuesday. John was included in the list of three winners of University of Alberta Matriculation Scholarships, which entitles him to three years' tuition fees.

The Alberta competition was open for Grade 12 students attending Alberta high schools.

The Canadian Pacific Railway scholarship which John won last week entitles him to four years' free tuition at McGill. Another scholarship awarded to the Calgary youth entitles him to $100 in cash with free tuition to Queen's University for three years.

John also won one of the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett scholarships awarded to Calgary high school students, worth at least $100 in cash.

Speedy Agreement On Conscription Bill Expected by Leaders

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP).—The United States Senate and House of Representatives will reach a speedy agreement on their conflicting versions of conscription legislation, it was predicted today and the House provision for a 60-day delay will probably be discarded in the process.

Senator Edward Burke (Dem.-Nebraska) was confident in saying that congressional action on the history making peacetime selective service measure would be completed "this week, possibly by Wednesday".

The Nebraska Senator said that the Senate-House conference would make several adjustments to reconcile the divergent versions of the bill, approved in one form by the senate ten days ago, and in a different form by the House on Saturday night.

CONSTANT RAIDS MAY BE PRELUDE TO AN INVASION

German Raiders Kill at Least 400 Civilians in Widespread Raids Over England

BRITAIN CONFIDENT

Docks on Thames Especial Targets and Many Fires Started

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 9 (CP). — German raiders killed at least 400 and painted the sky over London—blood red with widespread fires in a week-end of terror that may prove to be the prelude to an attempt at invasion.

Great numbers of planes which had been stationed in Norway now are poised in northern France within two minutes' flight of Britain.

Goering is reported to be in that sector directing the luftwaffe's increasing attacks against the embattled British Isles.

That alone seems to indicate that the Nazis consider the present phase of the war vital.

There are other reasons, which may not be discussed, for the belief that Hitler is preparing to make a tremendous gamble at invasion possibly within the next few weeks.

JEWS, RELIGIOUS GROUP TARGETS OF NEW DECREES

Antonescu Determined to Run Rumania Along Axis Powers Lines

NO DEMONSTRATIONS

Bucharest, Sept. 9 (AP)—New degrees aimed at Jews and a new Baptist religious group were issued by the Ministry of Culture today as Rumania's military dictator, Gen. Ion Antonescu, worked swiftly to reshape the nation on the axis pattern.

All Jewish "communities," one edict decreed, must give up their synagogues, hospitals and schools unless they can establish a membership of 400 in cities and 200 in rural areas.

A second order declared that members of Baptist Advent "sects" henceforth must be regarded as "without religion" unless they declare themselves orthodox Catholics or members of a recognized Protestant Church in Rumania. They were organized about 18 months ago under United States and British influence.

Antonescu apparently is determined to wipe out the last traces of the old Carol regime in Rumania.

High sources meanwhile declared evidence had been uncovered showing the axis-dictated Vienna award of northern Transylvania to Hungary was the direct result of a letter from Carol to Hitler.

"The king wrote to Hitler after the loss of Bessarabia and Bucovina asking for Nazi protection of Rumania's northeast frontier with Russia," these sources said.

Second Canadian Division Ready to Move Into Action

Task Already Assigned and Many Troops Have Taken Up Stations

WILL HIT HARD, FAST

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Sep. 9—(CP—Cable)— The Canadian 2nd Division will be ready to move into action immediately as part of the mixed corps now commanded by Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton should the Germans launch their long-threatened invasion of Britain.

This assurance was given by Maj.-Gen. Victor Odlum, general officer commanding the 2nd Division, after a midnight conference with senior commanders while churchbells in the neighborhood tolled a general alarm and raiders continued indiscriminate bombing forays.

Even as he spoke, battle-ready men of an Ontario brigade which arrived five weeks ago were speeding in lorries towards allotted defence sectors.

More recent arrivals stood by at action stations thrilled at their first experience of an active service night manoeuvre.

With informalities reminiscent of the "hugout huddles" of the last war, Gen. Odlum discussed with his lieutenants the role the division will play should a major emergency arise.

Task Already Assigned

He said their task had been assigned and that they would carry it out courageously and resolutely as part of a consolidated Canadian force.

Three prime essentials, the General said, are required in dealing with the foe—speed of movement,

President Signs Appropriation Bill At Hyde Park N. Y.

Ships Authorized by Congress Will Give U. S. a Two-Ocean Navy

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP).—Announcing the largest contract letting in its history, the United States navy placed orders today for 201 ships to cost a total of 3,861,053,312.

The department acted immediately after President Roosevelt signed at Hyde Park, N.Y., the $5,251,000,000 defence appropriation measure on which Congress completed congressional action Friday.

Along with the ship contracts, the navy announced that officials were signing contracts calling for the expenditure of an additional $31,653,500 to expand naval establishments.

Officials said also that negotiation of contracts for approximately 2,400 naval airplanes, to cost about $108,000,000, was in the final stages. Completion of these negotiations would bring the total amount of money involved in the current series of lettings to $4,000,706,812, they reported.

Two-Ocean Navy.

Almost all of the ships authorized by Congress to give the nation a two-ocean navy were covered in the contracts which went both to navy shipyards and private builders.

The time required to complete them, officials said, will vary from four to five years for battleships to 1½ to 2 years for submarines. The ships ordered include seven battleships, to cost around $100,000,000 each, eight aircraft carriers to cost around $47,000,000 each, twenty-seven cruisers to cost around $30,000,000 each, 115 destroyers costing about $8,100,000, 43 submarines costing around $6,000,000 each and one repair ship, cost of which was not disclosed immediately.

Dominion Gov't To Receive Fines

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP).—Opinion was expressed here today that the Dominion government would receive fines totalling $161,500 levied in Toronto Sept. 6 on nineteen Canadian paper box companies convicted of combining in restraint of trade.

In handing down judgment, Mr. Justice Hope stated:

"The penalties, as I understand, this proceeding having been launched by the Dominion government, go to the Dominion government." He said the Dominion government had sustained a heavy burden of court costs in conducting the trial, which lasted from June, 1939 to last July.

Civic officials at Toronto said Saturday that a demand had been made on the registrar of the Ontario Supreme Court that the fines should be paid the city of Toronto.

KING PAYS VISIT TO BOMBED AREA

Talked Sympathetically With Woman Who Lost Three Children

London, Sept. 9 (CP).—The king made a three-hour tour today of the London areas hardest hit by Germany's air raids, the east and south-east districts.

"Everyone has been wonderfully brave," he said.

In one district he went down into a shelter where a number of women and children were seated. Some had legs and arms bandaged.

He talked sympathetically with a woman who had lost three children.

Workers still were searching for bodies under wrecked houses at some of the places visited.

The king climbed a pile of debris by a bomb crater 75 feet wide and 5 feet deep. One worker showed him a piece of the bomb.

The mayor of the borough told the king he had not slept for three nights.

'We shall all have to learn to sleep by day and then sit up at night," the king commented.

Wherever he went, hundreds of men, women and children swarmed about him.

At one point, where people moved out of their flats had returned to get their belongings, there was a shout, "Are we downhearted?"

"No," they chorused in reply.

Two Observers Now Know What Concussion Means

London, Sept. 9.— (CP)—Two observers on the roof of the Associated Press building in the heart of London learned this morning what concussion means.

A big bomb struck about 100 yards away, dropped by a raider who swooped exceptionally low.

Edward Robinson found himself amid a clutter of bricks, blown to the roof from the blasted building.

Laurence Harris, an AP photographer, who was 'setting up' for a picture of the fire-ringed horizon, was jerked inward. Had he been thrown the other way he'd have landed five stories down.

A glass plate in his pocket was smashed by the concussion, Harris insisted, for he took care in falling to protect it.

DROWNS IN RAIN BARREL

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP)—Elton Roth, 15, was found drowned in a rain barrel on the farm home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Roth, South East of Tavistock Village in East Zorra Township, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Roth were away from home at the time.

Brothers of the drowned lad, returning from inspecting some trees blown down on the farm during a severe storm which had just swept the area were first aware of the tragedy when they saw the boy's leg protruding from the rain barrel.

YOUTH ELECTROCUTED

London, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP)—Lyl Cudney, 15, of R.R. 3, Mount Brydges was electrocuted early today as he stepped from a damaged auto in which he had been riding and encountered a 4,000 volt electric wire. The accident occurred a few miles east of the city.

An inquest has been ordered by Chief Coroner A. R. Routledge, the hearing to take place September 15. An autopsy will be held today.

NAPANEE HUNTER FAILED TO BEAT LAW

Urge to get in a little pre-season duck hunting proved too great for Blake Gordon, of Napanee on Saturday but although he managed to "beat the gun" in the matter of hunting ducks, he failed to beat the law and was apprehended by Game Warden Herb McCabe, who was patrolling the Napanee River.

Inspector McCabe heard shooting in a cove at the mouth of the Napanee River on Saturday and subsequent investigation revealed that duck hunting was in progress. Continued search on the part of the law enforcing agency resulted in Gordon being apprehended and concrete evidence of his intentions. Inspector McCabe found one wild duck in Gordon's possession, he revealed today. Charges of violation of the Ontario Game Laws were immediately preferred against Gordon and the case will be heard in Napanee court today.

RAIN IS WELCOMED BY DISTRICT FARMERS

Sunday's rain will be welcomed by farmers in the Hastings and Prince Edward districts as in some districts, the dry weather, which has caused the ground to become baked and hard, has considerably retarded fall cultivation. Ploughing has been held up in many instances and yesterday's rain will give considerable relief in this respect, while fall pastures will also benefit considerably as the result of the moisture.

VETERANS TO OPEN FALL TERM THURSDAY

With several important matters scheduled for discussion, members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch No. 201 will formally open their regular fall and winter meetings here on Thursday. President Fred Wiggins, anticipates a full turnout of members in view of the fact that much important business pertaining to the war will be brought before the club.

YOUTH QUESTIONED BY CITY POLICE

Apparently it's exceedingly poor practice to endeavour selling stolen goods, especially when there is a policeman in the vicinity, at least that is what 18-year-old Robert Hyderman of Picton found out here over the week-end. Hyderman was endeavouring to sell a bicycle to passersby on Front St. Saturday night and at a ridiculously low figur, so Detective Fred Izard thought when he overheard Hyderman's conversation with another young man regarding the sale of a bicycle in his possession. Detective Izard questioned Hyderman as to the ownership of the bike and subsequently held the youth in custody. Later Hyderman was given into the custody of Constable James Lovelace of Bloomfield and returned to Picton along with the bicycle found in his possession.

PREP AND JUNIOR CLASSES ON HIKE

About twenty boys of the Prep and Junior classes of the local Y.M.C.A. enjoyed a rather extensive hike on Saturday afternoon when they proceeded up the banks of the Moira River to Cannifton and beyond, where they enjoyed a swim, built a huge bonfire on which to cook their supper and played group games.

The presentation of pins to Vincent and Merle Massey, winners in a recent athletic meet staged at the "Y", was included in the afternoon's program of sports. A wiener roast around the bonfire concluded the day's fun with the boys arriving back at the "Y" shortly after sundown.

3 Cars Involved In Crash Sunday

A three-car rear-end motor crash occurred on Highland Avenue at the height of Sunday afternoon's downpour of rain and was apparently attributed to the close proximity of the vehicles involved.

S. G. Gibson, Ottawa, was proceeding easterly, as were two cars behind him. Mr. Gibson applied the brakes of his automobile as he observed a warning brake-light of another automobile in front of him. Mr. Grant Wright of Foxboro, was following Mr. Gibson and although Mr. Wright tried to stop his car in an effort to avoid striking the rear of Mr. Gibson's car, it was impossible and Mr. Wright's front bumper crashed into the rear of the Gibson car.

Following Mr. Wright was Albert Cowan, of Gananoque. Mr. Cowan's car crashed into the rear of the Wright car with considerable force, the impact hurling Mr. and Mrs. Cowan forward resulting in minor leg lacerations to the latter party.

Detective Fred Izard investigated the three-car crash while it was still raining and estimated $50.00 worth of damage to the Cowan car, $25 to Mr. Wright's and $15. to the vehicle driven by Mr. Gibson.

LT.-COL. E. W. RATHBUN

Deseronto, Sept. 9 — (Special)—Lt.-Col. Edward Walter Rathbun, age 75, died in Deseronto Saturday at the home of his step-mother, Mrs. E. W. Rathbun. He recently came to Deseronto from Italy, where he went to retire, but moved to this continent at the outbreak of war. After a short funeral service here this afternoon the remains were taken to Toronto for cremation and the ashes will be sent to England.

Col. Rathbun was a native of Deseronto and attended Queen's University. In 1903 he took over the management of the Rathbun Company on the death of his father, and he continued in that position until 1914, when he went overseas in the First Great War. He was vice-president of the Boiler Inspectorate and Insurance Company, a member of the Albany and Toronto clubs and a Mason.

Surviving are his wife, formerly Miss Aileen Blair, of England, his step-mother, two half brothers, H. M. Rathbun and L. M. Rathbun, Toronto, and two half-sisters, Mrs. H. P. Jones, New York, and Mrs. H. B. Standregg, Toronto.

Hungry Skunk Defeats Efforts At Landscaping

There are skunks and skunks. Usually considered harmless animals, there is one of this family of striped felines whose high-powered sense of advertising marks his presence a hundred yards away which takes the cake for pure "cussedness." At least so thinks a retired gentleman whose efforts at landscaping a summer cottage on Salmon Lake have been put to nought by the nightly depredations of the black and white "kitty."

It seems the gentleman in question, imbued with a desire to beautify the immediate surroundings of the cottage with young evergreen trees and more desirous of quick results, decided to fertilise his new forestation project with fish-heads and other discarded remnants of the daily catch. He finished his planting, placing the fertilizer deep in the holes, admired his work and inwardly congratulated himself upon a job well done.

But he had not reckoned with Brer Skunk. That nightly marauder on a nocturnal prowl for food, sniffed the midnight air. There was a delectable aroma of fish and Brer Skunk was hungry. He sat up, waved his appendage of plumed pennons in the breeze and decided to investigate. His nostrils took him to the base of one of the newly-planted trees.

A Sad Sight

Now the scene changes. It is early morning and the sun breaking through the lake mists shone down on a strange scene. The small trees were lying like maidens sleeping in their beds, in a gentle reclining position. Upflung earth at their bases told the story. Small fragments of fish bones gave telltale evidence of the work of the nocturnal visitor. The gentleman, to whom profanity is as strange as Italian warships to the British Navy, emitted a loud "darn."

But he was not daunted. That day he replanted the trees, placed more dead fish under them and with a sly wink in the general direction of wherever Brer Skunk may have been sleeping, covered the earth with stones.

But that night the enemy came up with a brand new idea. He had plenty of time in which to get in his nefarious work and he took it. Again the scene changes, and it is a sunlit morning on Salmon Lake.

More Hard Work Ahead

Near one of his trees stands the gentleman. He gazed, gasped and gazed again. He opened his mouth in surprise and chagrin, and a word that sounded suspiciously like "d—" awoke the morning echoes. For in front of his eyes, beneath the covering of rocks that protected his trees were burrowed holes. Brer Skunk had won the second round in the battle of fish and wits.

Now the gentleman in question is thinking of writing a warning to the Forestry Department, for, he thinks the striped enemy having established a food-hunting precedent, the great timberlands of the north country may be in imminent danger of destruction of armies of burrowing skunks, who have changed their mind about fish originating in the water, and instead are growing, like potatoes, at the roots of trees.

James Bronson Severely Injured When Hit by Car

Critically injured, 65-year-old James Bronson, Corbyville, R.R. 7, was rushed to Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning suffering with compound fractures of the right leg, a fractured left leg and a fractured skull as a result of a motor accident a mile north of Corbyville. His condition this morning was said to be unchanged.

Bronson was struck by a car driven by Earl Woodcock Tweed, when the injured man stepped directly in the path of the automobile, according to investigating Provincial Police Officers Burton and Grayling. The affair was purely accidental the officers stated adding that no charges will be laid.

Woodcock was driving north on the Belleville-Tweed highway when he passed a car driven by his brother. Thinking he was in trouble Woodcock slowed down but was waved on his way by his relative. As he passed the car he saw another vehicle parked at the side of the highway approximately two hundred feet ahead. Near it stood an elderly man and a boy. As he neared the parked car, Woodcock told police he saw the man step out into the highway, hesitate, then walk directly in front of his automobile.

Stopping his car after the impact, Woodcock raced back to find Bronson lying by the side of the road severely injured. He was taken to hospital where his condition is said to be grave. Evidence given police by eye-witnesses corroborated the statements of Woodcock.

DAY OF PRAYERS OBSERVED IN CITY CHURCHES

Auditoriums Crowded With Devoted to Pray for Divine Guidance in Present Conflict

NEED OF GOD STRESSED

In keeping with the far-flung sectors of the Empire, Belleville Sunday crowded city churches and the local Jewish Synagogue in observance of the National Day of Prayer and Intercession. The day was set aside as an Empire day for Divine guidance at the request of His Majesty King George VI.

Far from war's alarms, residents of this city dodged raindrops that momentarily threatened a deluge even as their English cousins in far-off London made their way to churches amid a hail of hurtling death that rained down from the battle-scarred skies of Britain.

The importance of prayer in invoking Divine aid in the Empire's darkest hours was stressed in every city pulpit. Crowded auditoriums heard brilliant oratory as ministers brought out in clear concise phraseology the need of the civilized world to turn to God and pray for His help in times when the hordes of pagan fanaticism under the banner of the Swastika, are hammering at the very gates of Christendom.

The very life of Christianity and civilization is threatened, one minister stated. "We stand on the threshold of a crisis never before experienced since the Saracens threatened to over-run the Christian world".

Another denounced the belief of those people who are of the opinion that this is not a Christian war He pointed out the rape of the Christian churches in those countries over-run by the invader. "Our very religion and religious freedom are at stake", he said, "and if Britain and Christianity are defeated, then we must know what to expect".

Need of God Stressed

The world needs God in these dark days as it has never needed Him before, yet another declared. "The Banners of Christ will ultimately go forward to victory, but we must show Him that we are sincere; that we have faith in Him; that we need His help and that we are firm in the belief that only through Divine assistance can our cause eventually triumph. We must put our trust in Him and in Him alone".

Civilization has strayed from God during the past years, and material things have taken the place of religion. The awful scourge of war and its devastating effects upon the nations has brought this fact home with a terrible reality, was the message of another minister. "But God has not forgotten us", he said, "and only by approaching Him with contrite hearts, and prayer for forgiveness and aid, can we eventually go through to victory. He is all-merciful and will look after His own".

And so from pulpit to pulpit in church, hall and other places of meeting for worship went out the clarion call for the need of turning to God.

Special Prayers Said

Special prayers were sung and said for His Majesty, the King and the Royal Family; the fighting forces of the Empire on land and sea and in the air, and especially for those gallant young Canadians, "the flower of the nation's manhood who with their young bodies and indomitable courage are standing between liberty, freedom and their homes and loved one, and an enemy that knows no mercy".

The National Anthem was sung perhaps with more sincerity and fervor than is seldom heard even in these days of the Empire's stress.

Winner of V. C. Believed Dead, Prisoner of War

Baltonsborough, Somerset, England, Sept. 9 (CP). — Mrs. Harry Nicholls, wife o fone of the first men to win the Victoria Cross in this war, has received a telegram from the commanding officer of the Grenadier Guards saying "very pleased to inform you your husband is safe and is reported a prisoner of war".

Nicholls, who won the award for bravery during the retreat on Dunkerque, had been believed killed.

His wife immediately wrote him a long letter informing him of the award. She told a reporter: "I don't suppose Harry knows about the V.C. I want to be the first to tell him."

Before joining the army Nicholls lived in Calgary, Alta.

No Relief for Those Who Did Not Cultivate Their Garden Plots

The edict of the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs handed down earlier in the year to the effect that reliefees placed in charge of municipal garden plots who did not fulfill their duties during the summer would be exempt from all relief benefits from the municipality, will be kept to the letter, Mayor Glen E. Thompson announced today.

Only fifty percent of Belleville reliefees have kept their pledges regarding the cultivation, and raising of vegetables on plots given them by the city, he added. The remainder allowed their gardens to go to weeds, and did not bother to cultivate or raise the produce, the seed of which was furnished gratis by the city.

"These people had better start looking for work in order to sustain themselves and their families through the winter," His Worship warned, "for the warning given them earlier in the year that no relief will be forthcoming if they refused to work the garden plots, will be carried out."

Some of the reliefees obtained employment during the summer months and could not find time to work their plots, he said, but the majority "just did not bother. Seeking relief will be just a waste of time for them this winter.

Police Blotter

Sneak thieves are again reported active in East Belleville stealing money from milk bottles, which had been left in payment for milk. A local dairy complained to police that on several occasions of a recent date cash had been stolen from milk bottles, which had been left for collection. Juveniles are believed responsible and today Chief Kidd warned that examples would be made of persons apprehended and convicted of this contemptible crime.

H. S. Dewey, 40 Bettes St., reported the theft of two grease guns which were stolen from his private garage over the week-end.

Police were also asked to investigate the whole breaking of windows at the rear of 144 Front St. Chancey Ashley, the owner of the property, stated that mischievous juveniles throwing stones through the windows, were responsible.

Several inebriates were taken into custody over the week-end, as were soldiers of the C.A.S.F., who were reported absent from their units without leave. Last night's inclement weather saw seven transients seeking dry sleeping quarters at the police station, the largest number to register before the night sergeant, since the National Registration. All such men were in possession of their individual registration cards.

POLICE COURT

Charges of vagrancy preferred against Hyman J. Brown and Joseph Iseman, both of Toronto, were withdrawn by Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson when the pair appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today. However, more serious charges were then read against the pair, when they faced charges of theft, commonly referred to as pick-pocketing. On these latter charges the pair pleaded not guilty and the cases were enlarged for one week, bail being accepted at $500 each.

Brown and Iseman were apprehended at the Belleville Fair following a complaint registered by Alex McLaren of Milltown, who stated his pocket had been picked and $11 missing. Today Iseman and Brown were charged with the offence, but both pleaded innocent.

When the names of David Green and Wilbert Maybee were called in court today there was no response. Chief Kidd asked that a bench warrant be issued in each case and the pair brought before the court. Both were to have faced charges of intoxication.

A resident of Picton pleaded guilty to having imbibed too freely of intoxicants on Saturday night and the conventional 14 days in jail was imposed when the accused man was in default of the payment of a fine levied.

MUST PREPARE FOR SACRIFICES SAYS MR. ILSLEY

Canada's Second War Loan Opens Today and Response is Expected to be Whole-Hearted

PAMPHLET "RAIDS"

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP)—The men and women of Canada are being called upon today to lend the Government part of their savings and income so the war may be pushed with all speed and vigor.

With the opening of Canada's $300,000,000 Second War Loan today, there is an obvious answer to the question, "What can I do to help?" Finance Minister Ilsley says.

Everyone who can save should make the necessary sacrifices and do so. "And we must make these personal sacrifices effective by using our savings to buy War Loan Bonds," Hon. Mr. Ilsley told a nation-wide audience last night, speaking over the network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"If the democracies are to survive, we must be prepared for sacrifice far beyond those already made," the Finance Minister said. "And we must be prepared to make those sacrifices willingly, gladly, in order to preserve our freedom."

"If we are to win this war and preserve our democratic way of life, we must accomplish more by voluntary action than the Germans are doing [illegible] compulsion."

The second War Loan went on sale today at nine a.m. Opening of the loan is being marked by military displays throughout the nation. Pamphlet "raids" by the Royal Canadian Air Force, posters and newspaper advertising are directing the attention of the people to the necessity of co-operating in this phase of the war effort.

The bonds are for a 12-year-term at three per cent interest. Selling at $98.75, they will actually yield 3 1-8 per cent.

The government is stressing the need for persons with medium or small incomes taking a large part of the loan. "Many of us will have to buy more than at first we think we can buy," said Mr. Ilsley. "I hope that many of you will take out your pencils and do some real hard figuring on the amount of the contributions you can make to this loan."

Saving meant sacrifices but the enemy was sparing no effort to maintain his fighting forces at their maximum. They were not asked to co-operate, they were compelled to obey.

Mr. Ilsley said that Canadians had understood the magnitude and vital character of the issues involved in this war right from the beginning.

"Overnight we achieved unity of purpose and outlook. East and west, French and English, city and country, rich and poor, we all resolved that the Nazis would not overrun and dominate the world," he said.

The tempo of Canada's war effort continued to increase. As it increased, demands upon the people of Canada would continue to increase "until the full strength of the nation is put forth".

In August, for instance, war expenditures averaged $2,000,000 a day. During September the Air Force alone expected to spend $1,000,000 a day. The bills to be met were mounting rapidly.

It was the essential spirit of sacrifice which was now "raising us out of our softness and selfishness," which would carry us through to victory," he said. That spirit would ensure the success of this second war loan.

CAR BACKED OFF FERRY, 4 DROWNED

Three in Front Seat Manage to Break Window and Are Rescued

Cobden, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP)—Four persons were drowned Sunday and three others escaped when an automobile backed off an Ottawa River ferry, running between Fort Coulonge, Que., and La Passe, Ont. The dead are Joseph Poisson, 50, Westmeath, Ont.; his wife; then five-year-old son Ralph; and George Mousseau, 58, of Fort Coulonge.

Three others, who occupied the front seat of the car, David Mousseau, Gatineau Point, Que., driver of the car, and Mr. and Mrs. Tennisse Mousseau, Davidson, Que., managed to break a window and climb out.

The car backed off the ferry into 25 feet of water as the barge, drawn by a motorboat, approached the Ontario side of the river. The driver of the car was instructed to back his automobile so the weight of the barge would be more evenly distributed on the barge as it slipped into the dock.

The three survivors were picked out of the water by J. Laporte, operator of the ferry, who was driving the motorboat at the time. Laporte and his brother immediately began diving, fully clothed, to rescue the other four. They found the car resting on the bottom, nose down, but were unable to reach the four imprisoned in it.

Canadian Pilot Watches Fires Spread

London, Sept 9 (CP Cable)—A Canadian pilot who took part in Friday night's Royal Air Force raid against military objectives in Germany's Black Forest Sunday described the flight as "a very straightforward trip."

The raid he told of in such matter of fact language was most effective and caused fires visible 40 miles away.

"We picked up the Rhine and then flew towards Freiburg," said the pilot, whose name was not announced. "Having got to our target area we combed it from south to north.

"There was a southerly wind blowing and we watched fires spread. By the time we finished one of the crew counted three groups of 36 fires. Most of them seemed to be whipping up very well. I got the rear gunner to keep them under observation after we left. He reported that from 40 miles away he could see a red glow over the horizon."

THE TRUE FACTS

Some people have been wondering at times when listening to news broadcasts from London whether they are, being given the true facts of the damage done by Nazi bombers. So often it is stated that the only damage that resulted was the wrecking of numerous houses or other civilian property.

That seems to have been very well answered in dispatches to the press by the Associated Press correspondents who have been permitted to visit the industrial areas of Birmingham, Manchester and London and see for themselves the extent of damage caused by the Germans. They were allowed full freedom of action.

In Birmingham one correspondent hired a car and driver and as a result of his survey was able to find only two small factories where production had ceased. Some others were hit during the past few weeks but the damage appeared slight and work was proceeding without interruption. Production had dropped only five percent for the whole area.

He writes, 'My estimate is based on observation of the damage done by bombs to essential parts of works and on talks with workmen. I used no Chamber of Commerce figures nor Government figures. In fact the survey was made not only without official guidance but without official knowledge, except that I reported to local police as a registered alien, as a matter of course.

The experiences of the other correspondents were precisely the same. In London where the Nazis have dropped thousands of bombs, a Canadian Press staff writer states that the enemy has scarcely scratched the surface of the great city. Scores of private homes and stores were smashed but only a couple beyond repair. Workmen were repairing gas and water mains broken during the previous night but factories were working without interruption.

Another writer visiting Liverpool says the great port and industrial centre has been only slightly affected by repeated Nazi raids. He went freely through the dock area. The only damage he saw was one hit on a dock which had damaged a grain elevator and one small trawler was sunk. Industrial production has been slowed down, because most factories stop work during an alarm. The principal damage, as in other places, was to the outlying residential areas and industrial suburbs.

According to the German stories it would appear that the industrial areas of Britain are in a state of ruin but like so many of their statements they are as unreliable as Hitler's promises.

The British only suppress news when it might prove of value to the enemy and then it is released when that value is lost. However, we can rely on what is given out from London and forget the Nazi propaganda. As the American correspondents found along with others who have made similar surveys we may rest assured that Britain is meeting the menace of German fury and is not getting the worst of it by any means.

FRANCE UNDER THE NAZIS

The effects of German control in occupied France are described by Walter Kerr, of the New York Herald Tribune, Paris office, in an uncensored dispatch from Lisbon to New York recently. From what he has to say it would appear that the French people are missing the fulsome life that they formerly enjoyed. The dispatch follows in part:

"German-occupied France is an economically twisted country, with millions of people broken in spirit, doped with propaganda, groping about in an effort to reorganize their lives as best they can," he writes.

"They have little money, and their homes are destroyed or inaccessible. A long search brings news of a missing father, brother, or son buried by the roadside in a grave marked by a rifle or bayonet or guarded in an over-crowded prison camp.

"Food is poor. Men and women are living under restrictions such as they never knew before, showing little resistance and more concerned as to what caused the collapse of the country.

"Germany rules. All communication and transport facilities are in her hands. She controls essentials by right of requisition and superior force and nonessentials by the simple fact that she has all the easy money. She is well provided with paper money that has no value anywhere except in the occupied areas, not even in Germany itself."

He describes the population as "deadened" by the unnecessary curfew hours, the propaganda campaign against England, the iron regulations, and the sight of grey-clad troops.

"As long as they feel the way they do, overpowered by the army of occupation and bewildered by their own collapse, Frenchmen will show little resistance to German arguments. The old story—Jews, politicians, the English—is being told all day long and many believe it because they do not know what else to believe."

Mr. Kerr declares that nevertheless there is an undercurrent of resistance.

Every German propaganda poster is torn, although death is the penalty for defacing them. Many Frenchmen listen regularly to the London broadcasts in spite of the severe penalties.

The French pay no attention to the daily goose-stepping parades down the Champs Elysees, but the Italians, whom France allowed to live in France, march proudly along, keeping step, as if each one had captured single-handed a Maginot Line fortress.

Describing German control of the press, Mr. Kerr says that the first French language paper to appear, "La Victoire," published by Gustav Herve, "an anti Democrat at heart and a pro-German by inclination," was not pro-German enough to suit the Nazis. It was suppressed because he printed an editorial advising his readers to beware of the unjustified press campaign against the British.

The "Matin" has become a potent weapon of German propaganda. This paper and others like it have become violently anti-Jewish and anti-British. They are carefully controlled by the Germans and mistakes in grammar show that many of the articles are written by them.

"It was not a coincidence that one of the first Germans in Paris after the occupation was the man in control of the press, Capt. von Grote, former correspondent in Paris of the Deutsche Nachrichten Bureau, which is still regarded as a news agency in many parts of the world."

Nazi Broadcast Vile Libel

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 9—(CP)—For the benefit of relatives of Canadians serving in the Royal Air Force, an official of the Air Ministry branded as "false and malicious" a German broadcast purporting to record the death of four Canadian airmen.

The broadcast, made to America Aug. 22, was believed by officials to have been a "vile" attempt to impress youths now enrolled under the Empire Air Training Scheme.

"But," said a ministry spokesman, "If there still is anyone who does not realize the depths of foulness to which the Nazi propaganda machine is descending this example may convince him."

Picturing Canadians as flying an antiquated machine and paid a premium to fight without parachutes and other essential equipment, the Nazi report told of the "death of four Canadians" which a German announcer said had been brought down in a Bristol Blenheim by German anti-aircraft guns in France.

Ordinarily, the ministry would have ignored the broadcast as routine propaganda but a spokesman said officials had taken into consideration the feelings of parents of all Canadian fliers and wanted to assure them that the entire broadcast was false.

"Now, first of all," said the spokesman, "it is quite definite that the whole story is imaginary. No Blenheim manned by Canadians has crashed in France. In fact, Canadians in Britain do not use Blenheim planes at all."

No Names Given

Failure of the Germans to name the Canadians was described by the spokesman as another weakness of the report. He said it would have been "The easiest thing in the world to do if the story had been genuine."

The spokesman added:

"There are two very striking points about the story. First, an attempt is made to suggest that Britain is careless of the lives of her sons from the Dominions and sends them out in antiquated machines without protective equipment. This is a vile libel, as hundreds of Canadians can testify; soon it will be thousands.

"No aircraft could even take off from a British airdrome without parachutes, and no one is prouder of his aircraft than the Canadian pilot. But no doubt the idea that the British staff might be afraid of the Dominion airmen going home to tell how badly he is equipped is one which occurs naturally to the Nazi mind.

The broadcast was expected by the spokesman to be the prelude to a similar series in an effort to sabotage the Empire scheme.

Battle Colors For Canadians

Commanding officers of the 1st and 2nd Canadian Divisions have declared themselves in favor of reviving the distinctive shoulder patches used by units of the 1st and 2nd Divisions in the last war. Consideration is being given the matter, it is further reported at Ottawa.

The "battle" patches, as they were called, were worn in the first Great War only by soldiers in France, or on draft for France. The general idea was to afford quick identification in the forward areas, among the troops themselves, without similar enlightment of the enemy. An oblong patch of red cloth just below the shoulder was the common mark of the 1st division, with blue, French gray and green for the 2nd, 3rd and 4th. Battalions were distinguished by the shape of smaller patches sewn above the divisional patch—a circle for the first battalion in a brigade, semicircle for the second, triangle for the third and a square for the fourth. Their color indicated the brigade. The principle was followed out, with necessary variations, in the patches of divisional and corps troops such as engineers, artillery and cavalry. Transport vehicles of the various formations were similarly distinguished by painted emblems, and commanding officers' pennons bore the conventional device indicating the brigade or battalion.

His own familiar patch encountered on the street in London was a welcome sight to the soldier on leave and in need of a few shillings loan. It was a sign of home when he made his way back to the unit in France, and provided a touch of color in the khaki ensemble on parade. Preserved by ex-service men in their post-war organizations it has helped keep alive the old esprit de corps. With all its sentimental, decorative and utilitarian attributes, use of the battle patch for the new Canadian Corps should not require unduly prolonged consideration at Ottawa.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

New Drug to Control Epileptic Attacks Used in Stubborn Cases Only

When a new drug or remedy for the treatment of some special disease is recommended by a physician or group of physicians, even in an ethical medical journal, most physicians prefer to wait until other physicians or groups of physicians have made tests and have reported their experiments with the new remedy. It is possible therefore for a remedy to receive favorable and unfavorable reports within a short time. Thus the new remedy for epilepsy, dilantin sodium, received very favorable reports to be followed within a few weeks with unfavorable reports owing to the severe reactions to its use in some cases.

What many physicians and epileptics forget, however, is that the sodium dilantin is not recommended as the first or best method of treating epilepsy, but to be used only after all other methods of treatment have failed to give results.

The treatment of epilepsy for many years was by the use of bromides which "quiet" the nerves. Then came the present drug so widely used, phenobarbital, which was the greatest advance in controlling epilepsy in its whole history.

It is true, of course, that many epileptics can keep themselves free of attacks by watching their diet—cutting down on liquids and starches, and increasing their fat foods. I have spoken before of a case where I was able to keep the patient free of attacks for over a year by washing out his stomach twice a week.

Drs. H. H. Merritt and T. J. Putnam in the Journal of the American Medical Association report their experience with dilantin sodium in 200 cases who had not been relieved by the usual remedies—bromides, phenobarbital, and diet. Of this group 58 percent were completely relieved of grand mal (severe) attacks of epilepsy and 27 per cent were improved. In patients with petit mal (slight) attacks, 35 percent were relieved and 40 percent improved.

Dr. D. P. Phillips in Journal of the Michigan Medical Society states that dilantin sodium was used for control of epilepsy in the State Prison of Southern Michigan in 14 patients who had not been helped by the usual methods. The attacks stopped in all 14 cases and the prisoners' behavior and attitudes were improved.

However, sodium dilantin is more poisonous, not as safe as other drugs, and should be used only when the other methods fail to give results.

Victory May Bring A New Europe

(The London Times)

The anniversary of the signature of the Versailles Treaty passed at the week-end unhonoured and almost unnoticed. Twenty years of disillusionment and crisis have quenched the facile idealism and no less facile optimism which marked the end of the last war, and have encouraged the cynic to see in the present war nothing more than a clash of rival imperialisms struggling for the mastery. This view is not, however, shared by the great masses of people in this country or by their friends abroad. Inexorable events have thrust into the background the discussions about war aims which were so popular in the first months of the war. That is necessary and right. The Prime Minister expressed the mood of the nation when he declared that our only present war aim is victory. Nevertheless the British will to victory is still bound up with the conviction that our war aims stand on a different plane from those of the enemy, and that victory for our arms will point the way to a new social and international order in Europe. The comparative lull which has followed the French defeat is unlikely to last for more than a brief space. But it will serve only to strengthen our resolution if we seize such a moment to reflect a little on the issues for which we fight.

This need not mean an excursion into some airy Utopia. "We must build our Utopia," as Lord Halifax said a few months ago, "on the foundations which themselves will be well laid and solid." We must digest the hard lessons of the war as it goes on; and these lessons have not all been military. One of the hardest, yet most certain, of them has been the bankruptcy of the principle of neutrality as practised by weak and relatively unarmed European states. This country abates, and will abate, nothing of its traditional support of the right of small nations to pursue and cherish, in security and independence, their own way of life.

But the conception of the small national unit, not strong enough for an active role in international politics, but enjoying all the prerogatives and responsibilities of sovereignty, has been rendered obsolete by modern armaments and the scope of modern warfare. The freedom and self-government of national communities in Europe will need other defences and a broader foundation in the future. Economics reinforce the same lesson. Europe can no longer afford a multiplicity of economic units, each maintaining its independent economic system behind a barbed wire entanglement of tariffs, quotas, exchange restrictions, and barter agreements. Probably the gravest error of the last peace settlement was that it encouraged disintegration at a time when integration was already the crying need. The new order in Europe must seek to create new ties, not to dissolve old ones, to build, not to break up.

This is the truth which lies behind projects like the United States of Europe or Federal Union. The utility of these particular slogans may well be open to question. "The United States of Europe" suggests a trans-Atlantic analogy which has little or no application to modern Europe. Federation is a complicated constitutional form of proved value in certain conditions. But those who live under federal constitutions are as keenly conscious of the shortcomings as of the blessings of federation; and these shortcomings tend to become more, not less, apparent in the contemporary world. There is a danger that exponents of a new European order may bring discredit on what is fundamentally sound by investing it in a wholly unreal atmosphere of constitution-mongering. In its generous last-minute offer to France the British Government cut the Gordian knot by proposing a complete Anglo-French union, whose form would be left for consequent elaboration. There is much to be gained by considering the fundamental issues of European order, but little profit in the discussion of legal forms. The problem of the new European order is, after all, the problem of every political organization: how to combine individual liberty with the authority necessary for social cohesion.

Alas, Poor Adolf

Adolf Hitler, as he stated in his latest speech in Berlin's Sportpalast, has been worrying because people who live outside the range of German guns don't like him. "We want to construct a new state," he complains. "Why do others hate us so?"

We can only say that in his modest and diffident way he did not court popularity. He did not win the approval of those who believe in free institutions when he used a minority party to trick the German people out of their liberties; when he abolished opposition parties; when he outlawed German citizens of Jewish faith or origin; when he persecuted Protestants and Catholics for preferring God to himself; when he imprisoned, silenced, killed or drove into exile all of Germany's creative minds; when he completed the conquest of a country not his own by butchering a considerable number of his own followers.

He did not seem lovable when he promised to respect Austrian sovereignty and broke that promise; promised to respect Czech sovereignty and broke that promise; made a treaty with Poland and bombed her cities, stole her territory and suppressed her independence; denounced the Communists as the scum of the earth and then made an amicable plunderbund with them; promised lasting peace at Munich and tore up that promise a year later; invaded Denmark, Norway, Holland, Luxembourg and Belgium without provocation; sent his armies to bomb and machine-gun helpless old men, women and children fleeing from the violated regions.

He has not endeared himself on this side of the water by sending his agents to stir up trouble and dissension, openly in Latin America, more furtively in this country; by making it evident that wherever in the world a dirty or brutal deed was to be done, he would do it, encourage it or endorse it; by sending at the head of his bleak cavalry the four horsemen of ignorance, prejudice, tyranny and death.

Perhaps he only wanted to be liked. Let it rest at that. He isn't.—N.Y. Times.

FIREARM ROSTER NEARS DEADLINE FOR ALL COMERS

R.C.M.P. to Have Complete List by Sept. 15—Visiting Hunters Get Special Permits for Guns

Ottawa, Sept. 9—(CP)—Complete record of all firearms in Canada will be assembled at the offices of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police here by Sept. 15—deadline for the registration of all rifles and shotguns in the country.

Recommendations of the special committee on the Defence of Canada Regulations, adopted by the House of Commons at the past session of parliament, were that the government, to guard against dangerous fifth column activities on the Dominion, should have complete data at its disposal on how many guns there are in Canada, and who has them.

After Sept. 15, anyone having a rifle or shotgun not registered with the Commissioner of the R. C. M. P. will be liable to a fine of $50, 30 days in jail, or both.

While every gun within Canadian borders must be registered, hunters from the United States will not be affected by the regulation, as such persons must have their weapons registered anyway before bringing them into the country.

Previously under the Defence of Canada Regulations it was forbidden for any alien to carry firearms.

An order-in-council passed last month, however, amended the regulations to permit bona fide tourists and visitors from allied and neutral countries to carry firearms in Canada provided they get permission.

This permission may be obtained by applying to R. C. M. P. Commissioner S. T. Wood, or to H. D. Scully, Commissioner of Customs, at Ottawa. The application must state the description, make and serial number of the gun as well as the applicant's name, address, occupation, point and date of entry, and the purpose and duration of his visit. A character reference is also required.

Customs Entry

When the application has been approved, the R. C. M. P. will forward a permit to the customs collector at the designated entry point who will deliver it to the tourist on his arrival. Weapons admitted in this way must be taken out of the country again and ammunition imported will be dutiable.

No permits will be granted for automatic weapons, and all applications for bringing revolvers into Canada will be turned down unless the applicant wishes to bring in such arms for the purpose of entering in a competition.

A firearms permit issued by the R. C. M. P. will not operate as a hunting licence. This must be obtained as usual from the Provincial authorities. Visitors arriving at the frontier with firearms for which no permit has been issued will have to leave them behind at the customs office there until the requisite permit has been obtained.

R. C. M. P. officials said they had received more than 1,000 applications from Americans wishing to bring firearms into the Dominion in the first month after the order in council was passed on July 23.

Registration of a rifle or shotgun is a simple procedure for the law-abiding citizen. Owners simply apply to local police for a permit. The R. C. M. P. has issued about 1,000,000 forms, printed in both French and English, which must be filled out in triplicate by the applicant.

The application states the nationality of the holder, the type and description of weapons he wished to register, and the purpose for which he has these weapons. One copy is retained by the owner and must be produced at the request of any peace officer, second copy is forwarded to the R. C. M. P. and the other is kept by the police who issued the certificate.

If the police officer is satisfied that possession of the weapon by the applicant is not contrary to the public interest, he will register the firearm. Registration of a firearm may be refused or cancelled, however, in which case the weapon must be delivered up within 10 days.

Under the regulation, no person is allowed to buy or sell firearms unless he holds a permit to do so. Dealers in rifles and shotguns may obtain a blanket permit, good for one year, permitting them to buy weapons for re-sale. Normal procedure for a person who wishes to buy a gun would be to pick out the weapon he wants in the store, secure its serial number, and procure a permit to buy before actually making the purchase.

Thus a dealer in guns must register all the guns he has in stock, obtain a permit to sell them, assure himself that the buyer has a permit to buy. The buyer must have a permit to purchase the weapon, and register it after he has bought it. Both dealer and buyer must keep a record of the whole transaction.

Not Transferable

It is forbidden under the act to "Give, lend, barter or transfer possession of any firearm to any person who is not the holder of a permit to purchase."

Failure to comply with any of the above regulations may make the person involved liable to $100.00 fine or three months imprisonment or both.

Revolvers are not included in the act, as a section of the criminal code which became law in 1934 already requires the registration of all pistols and revolvers. The regulations make no exceptions apart from members of Canada's armed forces.

By Sept. 15, every rifle and shotgun, including those given the Provincial Government for use among home guards and even weapons in the North-West Territories must be registered.

Canada's War Chiefs
BRIGADIER KENNETH STUART
Deputy Chief of the General Staff

(This is one of a series on military chiefs directing Canada's armed forces).

By KEN CLARK

Canadian Press Staff Writer
(Copyright, 1940, by The Canadian Press)

In a wide, bare office at National Defence Headquarters in Ottawa, Brigadier Kenneth Stuart holds down one of the biggest jobs in Canada's expanding army. He's Deputy Chief of the General Staff.

That means that if for any reason the Chief of Staff Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar, is unable to discharge his duties on the spot, then Brig. Stuart would be in command. To put it mildly it is a most important job.

On anything other than business the brigadier is a very difficult man to see. But every day he is at his desk, much of the time working in his khaki shirt sleeves.

He wears a pair of light, horn-rimmed spectacles. He has a neat, graying military moustache. Sometimes he smokes, his cigarette packages lying precisely on his cleared desk. Sometimes he writes in a round, vertical hand, and he numbers each paragraph 1, 2, 3.

The deputy chief of staff is a lean, spare kind of a man with a pleasant voice and an easy manner, an engineer, a professional soldier now middle-aged who was born at Three Rivers, Que.

In 1917 the then Colonel Stuart was operating with the 7th Battalion, Royal Canadian Engineers around Vimy Ridge and at Passchendaele. The next year at a place called Hangard Wood the Canadians were advancing under what the official records delicately call "heavy shell fire" and Colonel Stuart's outfit had to put a bridge across the River Luce.

In the Record

The commanding officer personally supervised this operation the official record says, and the fact that field guns were able to cross the bridge five hours after zero (the time they gave the word to go) "Largely contributed to the success" of the operation.

For this sort of thing over a period of years the Brigadier got the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross. A couple of times he was mentioned in despatches "for consistent good work and devotion to duty."

"Personally reconnoitred the route for artillery under heavy shell fire," the record reads, but if you were to ask the brigadier about it he would be embarrassed.

Everything about the office where he works now is nice and precise and military. The military do not like civilian hero worship of hysteria and it is really, as the brigadier explained, a little out of line even to see the press.

On the other hand the brigadier has a sort of journalistic vice. He says he is more proud of his work with words than anything else. In 1929 he became editor of the Canadian Defence Quarterly and did that on the side until the current war broke out.

Otherwise he was commandant at the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont. With him it's a business, war. It runs in the family. Last December the Brigadier's son, V. C. Stuart, graduated from R. M. C. as did the brigadier, and recently the son got his wings as a pilot officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

These particular Stuarts were mostly in the wars, except for the brigadier's father who was in the Church of England at Three Rivers. Before that the family lived in England for 300 years and the grandfathers and great-grandfathers were army men.

Before attending R. M. C. the brigadier went to Bishop's College School at Lennoxville, Que. He was commissioned in the Royal Canadian Engineers in June, 1911, and proceeded to the school of Military Engineering at Chatham, Eng.

He remained there for two years and served about nine months with the 1st Division (British) at Aldershot. He went overseas in command of the 1st Army Troop Company, Royal Canadian Engineers. Then he commanded the 7th Field Company and then was second in command of the 7th Battalion.

After the war he was stationed as a permanent force officer at Winnipeg, Calgary and Quebec until in 1925 he went to the staff college at Camberley, Eng.

On his return he was stationed in Victoria as District Engineering Officer and went to Ottawa as Assistant Director of Military Intelligence in 1930. He stayed four years at Defence Headquarters.

Then the brigadier went to R.M.C. as second in command, remained in that job for five years, and came back to Defence Headquarters on the General Staff as Director of Military Operations and Intelligence. He held this office when war broke out and on Oct. 15 he was sent back to R. M. C. as commandant.

Last July 6 he was appointed Deputy Chief of the General Staff. But there is nothing Colonel Blimp about the brigadier. Rather it is reassuring to visit headquarters and observe the professorial attitude of this professional soldier who has sufficient humor and pliability to understand it might be advantageous if the general public learns indirectly something about who is conducting operations.

No Food Shortage In England Says, Regt. Sgt.-Major

(By Edwin Johnson Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Somewhere in England, Sept. 9—(CP)—Regimental Sgt.-Maj. [illegible] Browett, of Hamilton, Ont., thinks it is high time something was done to disabuse the minds of people back home about reports of food shortage in England.

Returning from five-days disembarkation leave, Browett waxed lyrical when asked how he had fared with his ration card.

Well, if what I saw is what they call wartime rationing, I'll be content to be rationed for the rest of my days," he said. "Why, I've never seen so much food in the palmiest days of peace. Where I went we had five meals a day and an occasional snack thrown in. Of course, I couldn't keep up with that pace."

A veteran of the last war Browett journeyed to London accompanied by his 20-year-old son, Roy, serving with the same regiment from Central Ontario. They rambled around London taking in the principal points of interest, visited friends and relatives and returned to the quiet of camp life after experiencing an air-raid and two false alarms.

"I found Londoners take great pride in their private raid shelters," Browett, senior, remarked. "But I never saw anybody using them. They appeared too curious about what was going on above their heads."

MARRIAGE BUREAU FINDS CANADIANS MUCH IN DEMAND

British Agency Promoting Wedlock and Early Births Can't Fill All Requests for Maple Leaf Husbands

By HAROLD FAIR
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 9 (CP)—Beneath the cage of a couple of passionate lovebirds in an office overlooking fashionable Bond Street, two English girls have been working on a never-finished jigsaw puzzle for 18 months—helping people find suitable husbands and wives.

But they have their troubles now that the Canadian soldiers are here. The number of English girls wanting Canadian husbands is twice the number of Canadians seeking a spouse. The war, naturally, has given the bureau its heaviest business. Six Canadian soldiers who corresponded with English girls after answering the bureau advertisements before coming to England have since married them.

"We can't get enough Canadians," lamented blonde Heather Jenner who started the "Marriage Bureau" with petite, brunette Mary Oliver. "The English girls are crazy over them. We have 200 Canadians who want wives and twice that many women who want Canadian husbands."

These marriage brokers are out for business even if the caller is just a bachelor reporter seeking to learn how the mate-providing system works. Before I could even ask, Miss Jenner cracked "Can we find you a wife?"

Soldier Rates

If the mate-seeker is in the fighting services the fee is cheap—30 shillings ($6.68) except for officers. For civilians and officers they talk in terms of Bond Street—five guineas (about $23). "And yet," said Miss Oliver, "we have 20 Canadian officers who want wives."

When the fee has been paid, the applicant fills out an application form listing age, figure, religion, height, nationality, income, color of hair and such personal details and specifies the type of girl wanted. The brokers check the "demands" with available material and arrange for a personal introduction. Then it's up to the pair to see how they suit each other.

The fee entitles the applicant to considerable assistance. The bureau suggests where the boys could take the girls for tea, dancing or dinner. If they become engaged, the brokers obligingly help with wedding details.

Among the assets of Canadians, Miss Jenner and Miss Oliver placed the Canadian accent high. Also, the prospect of the wide-open life in the Empire appeals to English girls. Next to Canadians, they prefer Australians.

The Canadian applicants, who consult the bureau after reading its advertisements at various places here, favor country girls. They want their women intelligent but not too sophisticated.

There is no set period between meeting and engagement but Miss Oliver said the bureau discourages rush war weddings. Often after a couple has been keeping company for three weeks or so they telephone and say the middle aisle is not far away.

Bonus For Babies

Feeling that just helping applicants find partners is not enough, the girls offer a bonus of £50 ($222) if a baby is born in the first year of marriage to the wife of one of their clients providing he is in the fighting services.

A British army colonel won it twice over. "He had twin sons and we had to produce £100 ($445)," Miss Oliver said. "That's our war work."

The bureau's civilian business still thrives. Miss Oliver thought the blackout had a lot to do with it and mentioned one applicant telling her how lonely he got these dark nights. In addition, they are asked to find wives for a considerable number of English business men.

One of the civilian clients, she said, is an 84-year-old widower who, to use an English expression, is "walking out" with a 16-year-old girl.

"In fact," Miss Oliver added, "We have men from peers to chimney sweeps and the girls include farmers' daughters, debutantes and mannequins."

COMMUNAL MEALS FOR LONELY MEN

Great Yarmouth, England—(CP)—One of the problems of war — how to get on without your wife— is troubling civic officials of this coastal town.

Many wives have been evacuated. Many restaurants have been closed. Husbands have to cook their meals at home. The result is not entirely satisfactory in many cases.

To overcome this difficulty the mayor is trying to introduce a scheme of communal meals on a no-profit basis. The plan is in the preliminary stages but officials hope to obtain a communal dining room and provide meals for the wifeless husbands.

These "grass widowers," still enjoying their experiments with the can-opener, haven't yet shown much interest in the scheme. The organizers believe a few more weeks of burnt beans and undercooked hamburger will soon bring them around.

Gals Today Shun Face-Bleach

Don't you love the woman who is so devoted to her husband that she wears the same old hair-do for y'ars and y'ars?

By HELEN FOLLETT

Old Timers who deplore the get-up of the modern girl should be reminded that they went in for face bleaching in a big way when they were younger. Being displeased with a complexion because it was not gardenia white, they'd get a chemical divorce from it. Charlatans flourished. Women of today wouldn't be that silly.

A lot of water has run under the beauty bridge in the last twenty years. Drastic measures aren't used any more, unless plastic surgery can be called drastic, but that is being done by men of good standing in the medical profession, which is a different matter. If facial defects interfere with social and business life, make a woman unhappy, they should be corrected at any cost. But the bleaching of long ago was a sort of pet diversion.

Dark Discolorations

It is next to impossible to remove dark discolorations, like liver spots, by home treatment, and no woman should try to do it. Mild bleaches can be tried, often make conditions better. What they do is to fluff off discolored cells, working slowly so that no inflammation results. Home remedies, other than peroxide or strained lemon juice, or a combination of both, should not be used.

x x x

Don't you love the woman who is so devoted to her husband that she wears the same old hair-do for y'ars and y'ars? What does he know? If she pops into a beauty shop and gets a this-day coiffure he soon realizes that he has kept his best girl out of the fashion pageant and ought to be ashamed of himself.

The thing to do is to keep in touch with what's new. If you don't, you'll feel that you are getting mildewed and it will affect your thoughts and feelings Keep on marching. Don't fall behind. Changing fashions enliven the spirits. Go git 'em.

FASHION FLASHES

LEISURE HOURS are nice. A delightful hostess gown is of blue grey silk jersey, the skirt marked by wide saddle drapery held at the side of the waist with a large jewelled plaque.

COVER UP your shoulders as is done with so many of the smartest evening frocks. A just out model has a high neck and broad folds of the fabric just covering the shoulders. Back is very decollete. The fabric is black silk jersey and the snug bodice is embroidered all over with pearl nailheads and tiny rhinestones.

LOOK AROUND for new blouses. They're handsome! A shirt blouse in deep violet satin is marked by much drawn-work and hand-fagotting between the tucks in front. Fastens with tiny jet buttons.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Certain Dictator Considers Ladies' Pants Destructive

We of a democracy often wonder how the dictators can find time to attend to so many chores. Take Signor Mussolini, for example. When he's not pontificating from his balcony about the reincarnation of the Roman empire, or having his photograph taken in bellicose poses, he has time to give to the subject of ladies' pants.

He doesn't like them. "When a woman is persuaded to put on pants, she forfeits her femininity", he argues. And like other dictators, Mussolini likes women plenty feminine. Il Duce wants more and more soldiers for cannon fodder, if the Roman Empire is to be revived. He says they'll be needing more and more cannon fodder for the next twenty or thirty years.

But he's after bigger and better bambinos, to be drilled, taught to shoot, help to create his dream of a new Roman Empire. But if the Italian signorinas are going to take to slacks, they forfeit the appearance of femininity and who will marry them, wails the Duce?

Women to be wooed and won must create an aura of womanliness, or, as we term it in our blunt American way, they must suggest sex appeal. When discussing the subject of slacks, the Italian dictator seems to have guessed right. In these garments ninety-nine women out of a hundred look decidedly unfeminine. But the feminine argument on the subject is "other women wear them why shouldn't I?" They thereby clinch the age old argument that women dress for each other rather than for the effect their clothes have on men.

Mussolini wears pants himself, and yet if he has done any extensive reading concerning the ancient Romans, whom he so greatly admires, he must know that writers of that period were fond of ascribing the decadence of the time and the empire to the influence of pants.

Clad in their streaming togas, the noble Romans were indeed a sight to see. And no present-day matron with a thickening waistline worked harder to keep down the tell-tale adipose than Romans when Rome was mistress of the world. But when pants began to put in an appearance, under the decadent Emperor Heliogabalus, the Romans scorned them as a feminising innovation from the Oriental provinces, and the fight between toga and pants was on.

Pants seemed to have won the day, and you know the fate of ancient Rome. Mussolini who has done everything to promote marriage among young Italians, even going to the extent of paying for two-day honeymoons from the provinces to Rome, then stepping out on his balcony to greet them and urging them to be fruitful, is taking this question of slacks sadly to heart.

Even for the sake of a free wedding tour, a normal man might hesitate before falling in love with a woman wearing slacks. Please remember there is no divorce in Italy, or, at least, there was not until a very short time ago. But whether slacks may open the road to divorce and a man's plea to have his matrimonial bonds severed on such justifiable grounds as a slack-wearing wife, remains to be seen.

Who knows, perhaps slacks worn by Italian women are a subtle defensive measure. Perhaps they don't want to marry, in spite of pressure put upon them by the state. Italian women have plenty of character and brains. Producing sons for cannon fodder may not appeal to them.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Your Children's Manners "Go Back to School", Too

These are the days when you are planning to send your children back to school.

Are you proud of the manners that they are taking back to school with them?

Or have you, during the long summer vacation, permitted the children to "let down" on their manners so that, when they present themselves at school, their manners will be loose-jointed, and at tag-ends?

I hope you're not one of the mothers who allow their children's manners to become tarnished during the summer play months, and then expect the teacher to do the job of polishing them up!

During the summer many children are allowed to storm in and out of the house with never a bow or a "How do you do" to a guest. Naturally if they have done this, they have lost the habit of saying "Good morning" to the teacher before they take their seats in the classroom.

"Please" and "Thank you" . . . those courteous twins . . . have they been allowed to pass out of the manners-picture during the summer? Then of course you cannot expect an immediate re-birth on the first days of school.

And what about the abrupt "Yes" and "No" without the polite addition of the name? Has that habit grown like a weed in summer's garden? If (as I hope) you have not let down on insisting on your child's not using the slipped "Yes" and "No", but have graciously led him into the habit of saying "Yes, Mother", "No, Father", "Yes Mrs. Smith", he will with habitual politeness say to his teacher, "Yes Miss Brown', "Please, Miss Brown', "Thank you, Miss Brown". Miss Brown's life will be pleasanter and happier. And . . . don't forget this . . . Miss Brown will know, inevitably, what kind of parents your child has, from what kind of home he comes. What the home discipline and example are.

Health Precautions for School

This is the third of a series of special articles on preparing the child for school, written for The Ontario Intelligencer by the personal physician to the Dionne Quintuplets, who are themselves starting regular school work for the first time this month.

About the most important thing parents can do to insure a child having a good start in school life is to see that his health is so protected that he misses no school through illness.

When I was a boy attending the little country school, we all missed a lot of days every year through mumps, whooping cough, measles, or one of the more common communicable disease. Today next, to colds, these communicable diseases still cause more time to be lost at school than any other reason.

When I was a boy, these epidemics of "childhood" diseases came along almost every year. I think we rather looked forward to them too, as a reason for a holiday. In those days the common belief was that every child must have these diseases, so the sooner he got them over with the better. No one took precautions against them.

Today we know children do not have to, and should not run the gamut of infectious diseases. Now we do everything to prevent these diseases, for although they may be of a mild character, very often they leave behind a weakness that stays with the individual all his life. Some times it is the eyes that are affected, sometimes the heart, or the kidneys, or the ears. Men are sometimes sterile because of an attack of mumps in boyhood.

So parents of children starting to school this month, owe it to them to see that they are protected as far as possible against these diseases. Up to now, these children have been leading a comparatively secluded life within the home. With the beginning of school, they rub elbows with children from many homes, and sooner or later one of them will come in contact with another child who is carrying the bug that causes one of there diseases referred to above.

Before the child starts to school, take him to your family doctor, if you haven't already done so, and have him toxoided —immunized against diphtheria. Have him vaccinated for smallpox as soon as possible. The latter is mandatory anyway and the earlier you have it done the better.

When you have done this, you have taken precautions against two of the most serious diseases that can strike your child. All the Quintuplets have been both toxoided and vaccinated, and they are much more protected from infection than is the ordinary child.

Toxoiding is not a serious discomfort to a child, and the younger it is the less reaction it gets from it. Vaccination is the same. It doesn't bother children now, for vaccination has come a long, long way in the last few years. Vaccines are much purer and reactions much less severe.

At the same time ask your doctor about protection against other diseases. They now have developed serums for most of them, but results aren't so sure. I imagine he will suggest that nothing be done about them, unless there is an epidemic and in that case he will probably suggest some sort of immunization.

A trip to the dentist is a good idea also. In other words, a child should have a complete checkup to insure he's in the best possible physical shape for school.

A Dr. Dafoe Hint

The younger schoolchild needs a maximum of rest and sleep at night. He must have regular hours, with movies, radio and other things that ordinarily keep him or her up late, restricted to Friday and Saturday nights. At the beginning of school age, chances are the child needs a larger bed equipped with a heavier mattress, and a room by itself, to insure complete rest.

Peter Fraser, 85, Well-Known Guide, Dies at Weslemkoon L.

Peter Fraser, grand old man of the north woods, and dubbed by a host of fishermen, hunters, trappers and other types of urban sportsmen, the "Wizard of Weslemkoon" is dead.

His age, according to his widow was 85, but incidents stored away in the recesses of a wonderful memory, as related to his friends in the warm interiors of hunting cabins on stormy nights, would indicate that he was much older. He passed away at his home near the "Lake Landing" last week, after suffering for a lengthy period of time.

The fine old man was a legend of the north woods. His vast storehouse of knowledge of lake, forest and stream and their denizens marked him as a living encyclopedia of northland nature. And with his passing another of the few remaining connecting links with the grand old pioneer days when men hewed a living out of the virgin forests, and roamed streams, lakes and woodlands for their sustenance, disappears.

He was well-known to the hunting, fishing and camping fraternities of not only this city, but, of a large surrounding district. His friends were legion. His knowledge was sought after by many. His word was law in the northwoods and few dared question his judgment regarding the habits, habitats and characteristics of fish, flesh and fowl.

Much Sought After as Guide

Of French-Scottish extraction, the late Peter Fraser lived practically all his life in the vicinity of Weslemkoon. A born naturalist, he "took" to the "life of the wilds" at an early age, and never forsook it. He soon learned the haunts of his feathered, finny and four-footed friends. And in later years he turned this knowledge to profit, becoming well known as one of the best-versed guides in the north country.

He was a prime favorite with Mr. Stewart Robertson, the late Senator Corby, and their friends, when they were regular hunting visitors at the "Corby Camp" at Weslemkoon. His vast anecdotal knowledge of the days of the pioneers proved a source of unenviable entertainment to these and other members of the hunting fraternity with whom his knowledge and work brought him in contact.

In the shadow of the north woods he raised his family. Stalwart sons some of them are now on farms near the scene of their boyhood. Others have gone out into the world where they have made a name for themselves. Another is in the uniform of His Majesty the King.

Peter Fraser will be greatly missed. His passing creates a vacancy that will be hard to fill.

Madoc Oddfellows Hold Decoration Service

Madoc (Special)—On Sunday afternoon the members of Madoc Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 179, held their annual Decoration Service. The members and visiting brethren and Oakdale Rebekahs assembled and were addressed by Dr. R. Beatty, P.D.D.G.M., with Bro. Percy Holland, P.G., as chaplain. Music was furnished by the Salvation Army Band of Belleville. A beautiful wreath was placed at the Cenotaph by Major E. T. Nayler, P.G., and the Last Post and Reveille played by a bugler of the band followed by the National Anthem.

Bro. C. I. Ross read the names of the deceased brethren of Madoc Lodge buried in Lakeview cemetery and elsewhere, also Rebekah sisters deceased. Bouquets of flowers were placed in the cemetery by the I.O.O.F. brethren. At the close of the service the band gave a short concert which was very much appreciated.

Wedding Anniversary

On September 8th, 1915, Mr. Hugh McIntosh and Miss Elizabeth Borthwick were married at the home of Miss Anne Cross by the late Rev. W. S. McTavish. On Friday evening, September 6th, 1940, their neighbors joined with them to celebrate with them their twenty-fifth anniversary. Mr. Ben Millar, acting as chairman, called the meeting to order and Mrs. Will Miller read a short address speaking of the esteem in which his home community has always held Hugh, and the place that Mrs. McIntosh soon won for herself among her new neighbors.

Mrs. Ford Tumelty and Mrs. Russel Lewis presented them with a gift of silverware, knives, forks and spoons. Mr. Miller called on the following for short speeches. Messrs. Russel Lewis, John McCoy, Robert McCoy, James Kincaid, Wm. McBeath and William Miller. Lunch was served and a very friendly get-together much enjoyed.

VEHICLE DAMAGED AFTER HITTING POLE

When he fell asleep at the wheel of his motor car, while driving into Belleville on East Dundas Street early Sunday morning, an automobile driven by Everett McDonald, Trenton, went out of control and crashed into a hydro pole badly damaging the vehicle. Three occupants of the car escaped with minor injuries.

McDonald told Constables Ellis and Taylor, who investigated, that he must have dozed off to sleep, as he remembered nothing of the accident. The front axle, top and sides of the motor car were badly damaged as the result of the impact, while the pole was snapped off at the base.

Bomb Splinters
From Battle of Britain

(By Louis V. Hunter Canadian Press Staff Writer).

"Panic" bombs are the latest the Nazis have pulled from their bag of terror tricks. The fuse has been shortened so the bombs explode more quickly and experts say they are designed to injure human beings rather than property.

Bombs used in earlier raids took a fraction longer to explode, partially buried themselves and the earth took some of the shock and splinters.

Londoners are following these rules in a "sleep campaign" to render abortive the nuisance of night raids: Doze in the tram or bus on the way to work or home; relax completely after the midday meal, even if sitting in a chair; if at home, doze in a quietened room.

A few weeks of this and the normal night's sleep of eight hours can be reduced comfortably to four or five hours.

London shops are offering for sale "mergency" suits for air raids. Designed along the lines of workmen's overalls, they are made of heavy material and can be slipped on in a jiffy. A zipper closes the front. The more expensive models include hoods.

Woman in wartime: With bombs falling around her, Mrs. Parks, a London air raid warden, rescued and tended an injured mother and baby; put out several fires with a stirrup pump; sent a soldier to a warden's post with concise reports; returned to her post, found the warden stunned, so manned it alone for eight hours.

A house in the midlands was wrecked by a bomb and there was one casualty—a rescue worker who saved a parrot from the ruins. It bit him.

Mrs. Charlotte Clark, an office cleaner who lives in the London area, went to cook her lunch after a raid and found in the saucepan — an unexploded incendiary bomb, nestling among pork chops and potatoes. The bomb had dropped down the chimney.

A post blitznight conference was held at a golf club in the northwest of England to solve the problem of what happens if a member plays into a bomb crater—a point not covered in the rule book. It was decided players should not be penalized by the extra hazards and a ball sent into a crater now can be picked up and dropped on the turf.

"No window cleaners wanted." So read a sign outside a store in the southwest London area where hardly a window pane was left whole after a raid. Farther down the street, outside a junk shop with its front blown out, was a placard which said: "We buy anything except broken glass—we've plenty of that."

Nurseries have been organized in the larger London shelters. Babies (complete with bedding) are carried to the shelters where they are placed in cots and attended by nurses.

"Laugh," said a young wife whose husband, by prompt work, had helped to dispose of an incendiary bomb which fell between a church and a house in the London area. "I couldn't help it. "I couldn't help it. You'd have laughed too if you'd seen people rushing out of their houses in pyjamas and night dresses. It was like a fancy dress party."

Villagers of Denby Dale, in response to the call for scrap metal, are giving their historic iron pie dish which is 15 feet long and 5 feet wide. One of the biggest Denby Dale pies was made in 1928. Five bullocks were baked in the dish and it provided a plateful for 20,000 persons.

The War Today

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London dug for its dead and injured today as news came that the Royal Air Force had smashed German war industries, set a large section of Hamburg aflame and destroyed concentrations of boats and barges probably intended for use in an invasion attempt by the Germans.

British authorities expressed the view that the Germans would not be able to launch an invasion attempt by sea because of the exposed nature of the concentration points. They said the Royal Air Force had observed the barges for some time and waited until there was a large number before destroying them and that the R.A.F. could repeat its performance indefinitely.

London expected the number of persons killed in Saturday and Sunday raids would total about 600 when the final check was made, although authorities found their first estimates of 400 for Saturday night deaths were almost 100 too high.

Thames docks were hit last night and work at some was disrupted while supply authorities prepared to divert shipments to other harbors and take them to London by rail and road.

Last night's raiding was indiscriminate and apparently aimless as German planes flew at great heights above a layer of heavy clouds, so that anti-aircraft fire could not be found by searchlights.

These tactics resulted in hits on such non-military objectives as tenements, hospitals and museums. Two world famous museums were hit. The censor would not permit correspondents to cable their names.

From a military standpoint, authorities said, the Germans were wasting effort and ammunition in such raids, apparently in a fruitless effort to demoralize civilians. Londoners were tired, jaded and blazing mad, but they showed no signs of wanting to call off the fight.

The R.A.F. maintained its systematic destruction of militarily important German targets and made no effort to retaliate against Berlin's civilians.

Tremendous fires were seen blazing in German forests, particularly the Black Forest, where British airmen spotted factories and supply depots hidden among the trees.

Meanwhile a large convoy of reinforcements arrived in the middle establishments is expected momentarily. The strength of naval forces in the Mediterranean has been doubled recently in preparation for such a move and yesterday troop arrivals were described as the largest yet seen in the sector. Hundreds of nurses from Scotland accompanied the troops.

Many of the men were among the most seasoned in the army, veterans of the French campaign that ended in the withdrawal from Dunkerque.

British Communique

London, Sept. 9 (CP)—A joint communique issued Monday by the Air and Home Security Ministeries on casualties in Sunday night's air raids follows:

"The attacks were severe and continued throughout the hours of darkness. Bombing was widespread over the London area and was, for the most part, indiscriminate. Damage was heavy and comprised many targets of non-military character, including three hospitals and two museums.

"The number of casualties cannot at present be assessed, though so far as information is available it is not anticipated that the number will exceed those of Saturday. The figures given for the attacks on that day are now found to be rather lower than was announced. According to present information, 306 persons were killed and 1,337 seriously injured.

"Docks on both sides of the river were again subjected to heavy and repeated bombardment with high explosive and incendiary bombs and a number of fires broke out. Many of these fires have been extinguished and all the remainder are now well in hand.

"London has once more been the main objective of the enemy and its citizens have met the blind savagery of these latest attacks with admirable courage and resource."

American Tourists Questioned for Taking Pictures of Airport

Discovered "shooting" motion pictures of the panoramic scene afforded by the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force yesterday afternoon, Dr. T. M. Coppa, Michigan State Health Department, Detroit and his wife, spent a few uncomfortable moments explaining matters and establishing their identity to R.C.A.F. officials before they were allowed to proceed on their way. A film taken from an expensive motion picture camera was confiscated by airport officers.

Alert air force guards noticed the lens of a motion picture camera protruding from the rear window of an automobile as it sped past the base shortly after two o'clock. A woman was operating the crank of the machine. Travelling at a high rate of speed, the occupants of the car apparently did not hear the order to stop, and continued down Highway No. 2, towards Belleville.

Deeming pursuit futile, air base officials immediately notified the Belleville Police Department, and Plainclothesman Fred Isard was appointed a reception committee of one. He met the car at the Front Street bridge and escorted occupants to the police station. A few minutes later Flying Officer Hammond, A.P.M., of the R.C.A.F. arrived with an escort and accompanied the Americans to the base for questioning and investigation.

"Just a couple of tourists who were not cognizant with Canada's war time regulations," explained Flying Officer Hammond, adding that Dr. Coppa and his wife were merely on a sight-seeing trip. The camera, he added, was a very expensive one. It was returned to the embarrassed tourists after the film had been confiscated by air base authorities.

Indifferent Fish Treat Anglers Rather Unkindly

Fish in the Bay of Quinte and other grounds are apparently becoming war-conscious according to the majority of fishermen who tried their luck in various spots over the weekend.

The finny denizens exhibited a lackadaisical attitude being content to follow the bait, sniff at it, turn up a disdainful nose and swim away to keep the family appointments. A fairly stiff wind whipped the waters of the bay near the city, according to the sportsmen, and although a number of fish were seen, no great catches were reported.

In the waters of the lake of Black Creek, the same conditions prevailed. The fish exhibited the same don't-give-a-darn attitude and treated anglers with a superciliousness, that aggravated rather than amused. Fishermen had to be content with a few small hungry pike, which didn't know any better.

A Different Story

Conditions were somewhat better in Weslemkoon Lake according to Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson, and Sheriff Jack O'Flynn who spent a few days last week in that popular fishing grounds. Three days' efforts resulted in handsome catches of bass, to mention nothing of the dozens which were thrown back by the conscientious if enthusiastic fishermen.

Cars Extensively Damaged in Collision

Damage to the extent of four hundred dollars was caused to automobiles driven by Colonel Roscoe Vandewater, Foxboro, and Murney Eaton, Belleville, following a collision near Chatterton yesterday afternoon that resulted in severe facial lacerations to Thomas Eaton, Belleville father of the driver of the Belleville car. A wound that necessitated four stitches was dressed by Dr. Helliwell, Foxboro physician, at scene of accident. The others escaped injury.

According to Motorcycle Officer Jack Hatch, who investigated the accident, Colonel Vandewater was proceeding from the driveway of the Chatterton United Church and Eaton was driving down highway toward Belleville, when the accident occurred. The impact caused considerable damage to both vehicles. Investigation into the circumstances surrounding the collision will be continued today, the traffic officer stated.

Priceless Treasures In Safe Keeping

London, Sept. 9—(CP)—Officials today said the priceless treasures of two famous but unnamed museums bombed last night by the Germans, had been moved along with the contents of other galleries, to specially constructed repositories in August, 1939.

"There has been no damage to any of them. They are secure from any bomb," officials said.

The same precautions were taken with the contents of scores of private galleries, warehouses and antique shops.

Ex-King Carol Said Bound for Canada

London, Sept. 9 (CP Cable)—The diplomatic correspondent of the Sunday dispatch wrote Sunday that Canada is believed to be the ultimate destination of Carol of Rumania. The correspondent said the former King left Rumania still wealthy and that he owns a ranch in the Dominion. The report could not be confirmed in official circles here.

No Objections at Ottawa to Carol

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP)—Canada remains open to former king Carol of Rumania as a haven of exile should he desire to come to the Dominion now that he has abdicated, it was said here today.

Suggestions in London that the former king might eventually come to Canada aroused interest and speculation in the Capital which has already provided haven for members of The Netherlands royal family driven from their own country by European conflict.

There was no confirmation however, of a report by the diplomatic correspondent of the London Sunday Dispatch that Carol of Rumania already owns a ranch in the Dominion.

So far as could be learned from government officials there would be no restriction against the former Rumanian monarch entering Canada to live, providing he complied with all immigration regulations.

No intimation has been received by the government from Carol or any spokesman on his behalf, of a desire to take refuge in Canada.

At the immigration department, however, it was said that if the former Rumanian monarch's friend, Madame Lupescu sought to enter the Dominion with him regulations would bar her entry.

Princess Juliana of The Netherlands, and her two children, came to Canada soon after her country was conquered by the Germans. They now are living in Ottawa.

AIRMEN ARRIVE AT EASTERN PORT

300 in Party and They Will Presumably Participate in Air Training Scheme

An Eastern Canadian Port, Sept. 9 (CP)—A liner carrying about 300 airmen who presumably will participate in the Empire air training plan arrived here today from Great Britain.

Only officials were permitted to board the ship, which apparently carried few other passengers, and newsmen were unable to learn whether the Air Force men came from the United Kingdom or from other parts of the Empire.

The first group of student fliers arrived from overseas about three weeks ago.

The liner, which was to proceed to another port after a stop of several hours here, was one of the few this season to arrive here without children evacuated from the United Kingdom.

Slayer of Vom Rath Given Twenty Years

Berlin, Sept. 9.—(AP)— Herschel Grynzpan, Polish Jew who killed Ernst Vom Rath, a member of the German Embasy staff in Paris, was disclosed today to be serving a 20-year penitentiary term to which he was sentenced by a French court "under German supervision".

Nazi sources suggested that this meant that Grynzpan probably had been transferred to a jail in Nazi-occupied Paris or Germany.

He was found, they claimed, in Sante prison in Paris after German occupation of the French capital.

Grynzpan, then 17, shot Vom Rath in the Paris Embassy Nov. 7, 1938, and the German died two days later. As a sequel anti-Jewish violence flared in Berlin and other German cities on Nov. 10.

BULLETINS

London, Sept. 9 (CP)—Casualties in last night's air raids are expected not to exceed those of Saturday, the Air Ministry announced today. A recapitulation of Saturday's figures listed 306 persons as killed and 1,337 as seriously injured.

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 9 (AP)— A British patrol entered Italian-occupied Ethiopia from Kenya colony and advanced as far as Gorai, a British headquarters bulletin said today.

London, Sept. 9 (CP)—The submarine Phoenix is considerably overdue and must be regarded as lost, the Admiralty announced tonight.

London, Sept. 9.—(CP)—The Admiralty announced tonight that three Italian supply ships had been sunk by two British submarines in the Mediterranean.

BRITISH LINER DOCKS

An An Eastern Canadian Port, Sept. 9 (CP)—A passenger liner from Great Britain, one of the few to arrive here this season without evacuated children aboard, docked here today.

There seemed to be few passengers aboard the liner.

Customs and immigration officials climbed the gangplank but no other persons were permitted aboard immediately.

LONDONERS SEEK SANCTUARY OF THE COUNTRY SIDE

Many Residents in East End Made Homeless by Bombing Raids

HATE TO LEAVE

London, Sept. 9—(AP)—A bedraggled caravan of the old, the weak and infirm, the homeless and the shaken, came straggling out of London's east end toward the countryside and safety today.

I stood on a street in the east end and watched the refugees pass.

There was a mother, her face contorted by fear of the past and of the future, carrying her baby. Families walked slowly along, toting bulging suitcases.

One woman herded three children in front of her. They did not want to leave. Kids seldom do. I asked her where she was going.

"I'm going hop-picking, same as I should have done if my old man hadn't said Kent wasn't safe." She looked behind her at a section pocked with craters, marked by scores of houses shattered by bombs.

"Safe," she said. "Don't make me laugh."

One group in an upholsterer's truck said they were going to the country "where it's quiet and maybe we can sort of collect ourselves a mite." They had little baggage. It was buried under wreckage back there.

Public assistance officers have worked themselves groggy since Saturday evening. In one London County Council centre, 500 refugees have been fed, given beds and first aid.

Fifty more stood in line for bread, butter and tea in a dreary room of another district. They just shuffled along and silently ate their handouts.

Some women wore light coats over nightgowns. Men wore odds and ends. One had on nothing but long woolen underwear and a pair of ragged pants. His feet were bare.

Their faces were blank. The magnitude of the catastroph which had struck them dulled their minds to all else.

Anyone who is bombed for five minutes, let alone 19 hours out of 48, is scared and shaken, especially if there is little sleep and only "pick-up" meals.

To these folk, each explosion may mean the end of everything they hold dear, homes, clothes, furniture. Leaving familiar sights and sounds is the hardest wrench of all.

Berlin Communique

Berlin, Sept. 9 —(AP)— Text of the German High Command's communique Monday follows:—

"Fighting plane units, despite bad weather, continued reprisal attacks against London Sept. 8 and during the night. Aerial photography gave proof of the effectiveness of the previous raids.

"During the nocturnal raids, attacking units could distinguish their targets from afar because of the raging fires. Again docks and port facilities, oil tanks, gas and electricity works, as well as storehouses on both sides of the Thames were attacked with bombs of all calibres.

"Several airports in the vicinity of Lincoln also were raided. In the Firth of Forth an 8,000-ton merchant ship was severely damaged by bombs.

(These claims were not substantiated by British sources.)

"British filers last night concentrated raids on a Hamburg residential section. Several apartment houses were damaged and a number of civilians injured. The total damage, however, was small.

(Wharves and a railroad station were among the targets hit, a British statement said.)

"The opponent's total losses yesterday were 22 planes, two of which were downed by anti-aircraft, the rest bagged in airfights. Four of our own planes are missing."

(Eight German planes were destroyed yesterday against three British, an Air Ministry announcement said.)

Rome Communique

Rome, Sept. 9 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued the following communique Monday:—

"Haifa by day and Alexandria by night again were attacked by our Air Force.

"At Haifa, where our planes came by surprise without giving the defence time to intervene, direct hits were scored on a refinery, damaging plants and causing large fires.

(The British account of this raid has not yet been issued.)

"Ships and baseworks were bombed at Alexandria. The railroad between Alexandria and Mersa Matruh (Egypt) also was bombed. All our planes returned.

(A British statement said the raiders were driven off from Alexandria.)

"In East Africa our planes bombed Boma, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and a railroad station and fuel oil depots at Port Sudan.

"Enemy planes bombed Mogadiscio, Massaua, and Berbera without causing casualties. The damage was very light.

Indians, Tigers Practically Tied for American Loop Lead With Yanks a Game Behind

Bobby Feller Does Fine Relief Job to Beat Chicago in Tenth

TIGERS RALLY

Detroit Comes from Behind With Tommy Bridges as Relief Worker

(By Judson Bailey, Associated Press)

Nobody knows exactly who is running Cleveland Indians, but when Bob Feller goes out there on the mound everybody knows who's pitching, win, lose or draw.

Last Wednesday Detroit Tigers roughed up Bob so ruthlessly that Manager Ossie Vitt announced Feller would be rested until Tuesday. But there he was yesterday, back out on the hill doing a relief chore for the beleaguered Tribe and getting credit for his 24th victory.

He went to the mound at the start of the ninth inning with the score tied at 4-4 and hurled two scoreless stanzas (one hit, three strikeouts, one walk) before Jeff Heath doubled and scored the run that beat Chicago White Sox 5-4 in the 10th.

This broke a six-game tailspin by the Indians who kept them mathematically in front of the Tigers, although the two are tied in games won and lost. The Yanks also won to stay a game behind.

Detroit battled from behind again to beat St. Louis Browns 5-4. Schoolboy Rowe suddenly blew up and let the Browns score four runs in the fourth inning before he could get help. Dizzy Trout loaded the bases in the seventh and finally Tommy Bridges was called out for his first relief job of the year. He got credit for his 10th victory when Rudy York homered in the eighth to break a tie score.

The Yankees overwhelmed the Red Sox 9-4 to dim Boston's pennant hopes, although the club is only five games behind the leaders and at least technically in range.

Washington Senators and Philadelphia Athletics divided a doubleheader. The Senators squeezed through to a 7-6 triumph in the first game, the A's taking the five-inning nightcap 4-0.

Cincinnati Reds were spellbound by Vern Olsen and Chicago Cubs captured a 3-1 decision by bunching 10 hits in the first six innings against Milkman Jim Turner.

This was the cue for Brooklyn Dodgers to take a doubleheader from New York Giants and they did, 7-2 and 4-2, to shave the margin between first and second place in the National League to 6 1-2 games.

Pittsburgh Pirates swept a doubleheader from St. Louis Cardinals 16-14 and 5-4 and took over third place, but the big show for St. Louis fans was Johnny Mize hitting three home runs in the opening tussle. He thus became a record-holder as the first player ever to perform this stunt four times in his career. The homers brought his season's total to 41.

The last place Phillies turned the tables on Boston Bees and took a double bill 2-1 and 3-1.

In four successive games (one with St. Louis Browns and three with Chicago), Detroit Tigers made a total of 18 hits and scored five runs off John Niggleing, Bill Dietrich, John Dungan Rigney and Jack Knott. . . . They compiled a betting average of .151 and lost all four games—they've won five straight since then.

REAL STRUGGLE IN INT. LEAGUE FOR THIRD PLACE

Jersey City and Baltimore Waging Fine Duel for the Spot

LEAFS WIN

Toronto Divides With Buffalo on Saturday and Takes Sunday's Contest

(By the Associated Press)

Although the recent spurt of Newark Bears makes them a most dangerous threat for the Governors' cup playoffs, the International League pennant race has boiled down to where it's no longer a question of who will win as it is of when will the Red Wings win.

The real race is the struggle for third place between Jersey City and Baltimore.

Jersey City and Baltimore, separated by a game and a half, failed to reach a decision yesterday when the third-place Little Giants pulled out a 4-3 decision in the second game of a doubleheader after taking a 9-3 drubbing in the first.

After the Orioles battered out 13 hits, including homers by Nick Etten and Red Howell, while Floyd Stromme hurled six-hit ball, Hugie East turned the tables. He blanked the birds with one hit until one was out in the seventh. Then Eddie Collins' triple, Howell's single and another Etten homer brought three runs. East finally left with two out and two on base and Roy Henshaw polished off the last man.

Newark Scores Twin Win

Hank Borowy and Lefty Johnny Johnson pitched Newark to a double victory, giving the Bears a record of six straight victories with six different pitchers going the route and none allowing more than nine hits. Borowy hurled a two-hitter in a duel with Less Hinckle, then Johnson gave seven hits and got strong support, including a homer by Bud Metheny.

Rochester went down 11-4 in the opener, getting only four hits off Max Macon in the opener while Montreal Royals blasted Terschel Lyons, Charlie Brumbeloe and John Berly for 15. Then Hank Gornicki stopped the Montreal sluggers cold with a three-hit hurling job to a 3-0 victory. Boze Berger's four errors accounted for most of the Wings' first-game scoring, but Boze hit four-for-four to drive in five runs.

Buffalo, with a rookie-laden lineup, took its 14th defeat in 23 meetings with last-place Toronto 6-2. Two bright spots, however, were the four straight hits by Rookie Bill Harnick and one-hit relief pitching by Angell for 6 2-3 innings after Earl Cook was driven out.

Lachine Oarsmen Winners of Regatta

Lachine, Que., Sept. 9 CP)—Lachine oarsmen gained decisions over visitors from the Ottawa Rowing Club in a regatta here Saturday.

Lachine scored handily in the senior single shell event when Craig Campbell skulled his way to a win with Milton Benison of Lachine second, and Art Royle of Ottawa third.

In the heavyweight eights, an Ottawa team stroked by Syd Williams placed second to a Lachine entry, with another Lachine shell third. In the heavy fours, Lachine placed first and second, with Ottawa-stroked by Williams, third.

The day's program was curtailed when teams from Brockville, Ont., and from McGill University failed to appear for the scheduled four-team regatta.

Yesterday's Stars

Curt Davis and Jim Wasdell, Dodgers: Six-hit pitching by Davis won first game while Wasdell hit home run and singled across deciding marker in 11th against Giants in second game.

Bob Feller, Indians: Stopped White Sox for two innings in relief to get credit for 24th victory.

Buck Newsom of the Tigers is never at a loss for words, reports Arch Ward, sports editor of the Chicago Tribune. "In the recent series between Detroit and Cleveland, when Manager Oscar Vitt of the Indians said he wouldn't permit Newsom to wear a piece of tape around his fractured thumb, the Tiger moundsman replied: "If I want permission, I won't go to you, I'll ask Keltner or Trosky." And they do say a rumor prevails in Brooklyn that Leo Durocher, scrappy chief of the Dodgers, will be the next manager of the Cubs, and that he will be succeeded in Brooklyn by Coach Chuck Dressen, who once managed the Reds when Larry MacPhail was general manager of that club.

Old Lady Luck seems to follow the Wooler softball nine wherever they go and dog their trail with good fortune. By now it is safe to assume that Wooler eliminated Hastings in a third game at Campbellford on Saturday. For eight innings it was as good a softball game as we've witnessed this season. Hastings scored one run in the first and another in the second, Wooler pushed one across in the fourth and drove Dave Wilson from the Hastings mound with a three run barrage in the fifth, Hastings got one in the sixth and knotted the game at 4-4 in the top half of the eighth. But Wooler came back in their half to score one and take a 5-4 advantage. Strangely enough both teams scored a run in the 8th as the direct result of wild pitches. In the top half of the 9th, however, Hastings scored three runs as the result of Dave Wilson's triple and the rest were attributed to walks, errors and Jim Stacey's wildness. Darkness was settling fast, as Wooler opened the second half of the ninth as Austin pasted one of Wilson's slants for a triple. Neither the umpires nor the Hastings infield saw the rabbit-like spheriod skim through the infield and the umpires promptly called hostilities and the score reverted back to the eighth inning giving Wooler the game 5 to 4, Hastings' ninth inning rally for three runs being just a wasted effort.

It was a tough game for Hastings to lose, but no person has control over the elements of nature. Darkness was settling rapidly and the Hastings management was warned of this fact by several unbiased fans who were present. However, neither Red Hamill nor Dit Clapper, the two coaches at the time, would heed these warnings and therein lies the solution to their defeat. Incidentally both Clapper and Hamill were in the khaki of the Peterborough Rangers, with which unit they are getting in their military training before reporting to the Boston Bruins for autumn training.

Incidentally Dit Clapper informed us that Ned Vitterall, of Peterboro is also training with the Rangers. Ned has applied for immigration papers and hopes to play hockey with Baltimore again this season. Billy (The Kid) Taylor and Roy Covert, the latter being an ex-Belleville puckster, are both getting in their military training in Oshawa. Incidentally both Taylor and Covert play softball for Oshawa and will be with the Motor City nine in a third game to be played with the Kingston Tanners in Trenton this week.

Those cross-currents of wind you feel are the New York Yankees soaring upward in the American League and the baseball experts leaving by the back door after having assured us all season the Yanks were finished.

Three bouts are scheduled for the opening of professional wrestling at the Hume Arena this evening. The card is one hundred percent heavyweight, three of the contestants have appeared locally before and proven their ring wares before the public. Nick Pavich, the Greek grappler, Johnny Gyroffy and Mike Dominic all have seen action here on previous occasions. Strangely enough each meets a strange face to the local wrestling picture. Pavich meets Sam Draginals, a fellow-countryman, in the feature bout of a three-card match.

We forgot to mention that Wooler meets Port McNickoll in their next round. Here in town the Montrose and Orfuns, of the Neighbourhood League, get away in the league finals tonight continuing Tuesday and Wednesday. Kingston and Oshawa will meet Thursday at Trenton.

Sport Hash — It was a case of too much lefthand pitching when the Kingston kids passed out of the junior O.B.A. picture at Port Hope on Saturday....Bob Elliott's nine fell before the T.A.B.A. winners 12 to 3 in a third and final game....Doc Empson's South Hastings team is slated to play in Delore this afternoon and back here Wednesday....Peterboro' was rubbed out of the senior Inter-City play-offs Saturday being beaten 12 to 2 by Parkdales.... Like the local 'Oilers' the Petes were minus several players, who are engaged in N.P.A.M. training ....Detroit and the Yankees won two over the week end while the Indians were splitting with the White Sox and the tangle in the American League is a thrilling one ....Cleveland leads Detroit by: a mathematical point, while the Bronx Bombers are one game astern....some fine relief hurling by Bob Feller and Tommy Bridges was all that saved the Indians and Tiegrs from defeat yesterday ....The Camp Borden "flying gridders" are arranging an exhibition game with the Montreal Big Four squad and "Slammin' Sammie" Snead won another golf title at Scranton over the week end, just for good measure.

3 RANKING STARS IN THE FINALS

Miss Marble Plays Miss Jacobs While Bobby Riggs Takes on Don McNeill

New York, Sept. 9 (AP)—In this rapidly changing world, it's nice to know that there is some status quo left.

Take tennis, for example. Last year in the finals of the National Singles at Forest Hills, Alice Marble played Helen Jacobs for the women's title and Robert L. Riggs of Chicago played Welby Van Horn of California for the men's title.

Today you'll recognize three of the old faces.

Miss Marble and Miss Jacobs will meet for the third time in the Nationals. Miss Marble has won on both previous occasions and there is no reason to believe that the 32-year-old Miss Jacobs, her best playing days far behind, will remove Miss Marble from her throne.

Riggs will take the centre court against the only stranger in the group. He's Don McNeill of Oklahoma City, regarded as the one hope that tennis next year will have a new ruler.

The way McNeill raced through, around and over Jack Kramer, the young Belvedere Gardens, Calif., giant killer in the semi-finals yesterday impressed everybody— including Riggs. He did it by 6-1, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

For Bobby had previously had a bad day of it, barely outlasting the erratic Joe Hunt, the naval academy's prize athlete, in a five-set lullaby that practically put all 12,000 customers to sleep, lasting as it did for more than 2 1-2 hours. The score was 4-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

Four Teams to Operate In Quebec League

Ottawa, Sept. 9 (CP)—Four teams Ottawa Senators and Royals, Concordia and Canadiens, all of Montreal, will operate definitely in the Quebec Senior Hockey League this coming season, it was decided yesterday at a league organization meeting here.

Quebec Aces and Cornwall Flyers were granted until Sept. 14 to notify the league of their intentions regarding the 1940-41 campaign. Selection of a seventh club, regarded as almost a certainty, will be made from any new applications by a committee composed of George Slater, President, Eddie Croneau, Vice-President and Jimmy Foley, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Quebec and Cornwall teams were granted the additional week's time before signifying their intentions of operating again after both had been refused reductions in the guarantees given all Montreal teams on visits to their cities.

New York, Sept. 9—(P)—Scooparade: Don't be surprised if Abe Greene, smart chairman of the New Jersey Boxing Commission, is elected president of the N.B.A. this week. He's in the running with both throttles wide open since his old pal, Ed Foster of Providence, let it be known he isn't interested. . . . Joe Louis said yesterday he may fight Tommy Farr in Los Angeles in November.

Bing Crosby Enters National Amateur Golf Tournament

Mamaroneck, N.Y., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Glamor and romance finally have come to the National Amateur Golf Championship in its 44th year for Bing Crosby, himself, was among the 150 players who were digging around the winged foot club today in the first qualifying round of the title event.

Whether Bing will be around when match play starts on Wednesday—after the 64 low qualifying scores for 36 holes have been posted—is another matter, for he belongs only to the ordinary, or garden variety of golfer.

The entire field practiced yesterday, but there was only one gallery. It followed Crosby from first tee to final green, where a feminine fan stuck out her foot and prevented Bing's approach from rolling into a trap.

Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., the defending champion, shot a 68, four under par, in his final tune-up. Yet the only reason any one saw him do it was the fact that he was playing around with Bing. Crosby, who is rather short off the tee and stabs with his putter, had a 40 coming back after going out in 43. That adds up 83.

Unless his game improves radically, big is not likely even to qualify, because this tournament is full of youngsters who can't croon worth a cent but can hit a golf ball out of sight.

BEE BUZZES INTO SECOND SAFELY

Cooney, centre fielder for the Boston Bees, slides safely into the bag on his double in the sixth inning of the game between the Bees and the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds, New York city. Burgess Whitehead covers the bag for the Giants, who lost, 2-0.

INAUGURATING FOOTBALL IN EASTERN STATES

Jim Poole, (23), of the New York professional football Giants, makes a leap for Merlyn Condit (35), of the Eastern College All-Stars in the annual charity football game which inaugurated the eastern states 1940 football season at the Polo Grounds, New York City. The All-Stars led 6-0, at the half. Condit is from Carnegie Tech.

LONDONERS ARGUE

whether the war effort has been seriously damaged, and whether civilian morale has been shaken.

The paper said the answer as to the effect on the R.A.F. is given by figures showing the night's German air losses as compared with British. It said "local" damage Saturday night was larger than in any previous raid but that the answer to the war effort damage question was no different to the R.A.F. one.

It added that though there were extensive fires which affected some factories, docks, shipping, communications and oil reservoirs, the damage, as the official statement put it, was "severe but, judged against the background of the war it is not serious."

A visit to areas bearing the brunt of Saturday's attack convinced the writer that the answer to the third question also is in the negative.

Hitler Quite Angry

The Daily Telegraph felt that "what the raids mainly reflect is the impotent rage of Hitler now that he realizes that he has at long last met his match." It considered that "there are no words adequate enough to express the admiration due to the fortitude with which the people of London endured their gruelling ordeal."

The Daily Express urged its readers to bear in mind that "this orgy of destruction arose not only from reprisal but from the bitterness of defeat."

"On Saturday," it declared, "Goering's men took the biggest thrashing they have ever yet had from anyone."

The Daily Mail's cartoonist Illingworth summed up the reaction with a drawing of stern old Father Thames looking fiercely in the eyes of a wraith of the scowling Goering appearing over London as a huge shape labelled "Nazi Air Terror." Old Thames says, "Well, what am I supposed to do now—look frightened?"

The Manchester Guardian devoted its entire leading editorial to the London raids. It said that if the Germans were seeking the attrition of British air strength, they were wearing down the luftwaffe more rapidly than the R.A.F.

"If their aim be reprisals, and yesterday it was definitely proclaimed by the German high command that that was their aim, with Goering himself in charge of operations in northern France, the citizens of Berlin may well have heard the news with misgiving; that is a dangerous card to play against a force of such striking power as the R.A.F.

"It would also be another admission of the great damage and embarrassment to Germany's war effort that has been written night after night during the past three months all the way from the Ruhr to Hamburg or the now blazing military hiding places in the Black Forest."

CAROL OF RUMANIA BEGINS HIS EXILE

Stocks and Holdings of Ex-Monarch Confiscated by Rumanian Government

Lugano, Switzerland, Sept. 9 (AP)—Carol of Rumania began his second exile today in luxury despite a Rumanian order freezing his millions of dollars in stocks and holdings at home.

Accompanying him to temporary haven in this tranquil Swiss lakeside resort was Mme. Magda Lupescu who shared his previous exile in 1925.

Before, when Carol renounced his right to succession rather than give up Mme. Lupescu, they spent five years in France. Now, the abdicated king's associates said, he is undecided where to go.

Some of his followers said Carol might go on to the Riviera after a short stay in Switzerland, and make his home at one of his chateaux there until he made definite plans.

The wealth he had in Rumania was sequestered yesterday in a decree by the military dictator Gen. Ion Antonescu who forced Carol out and made the king's 18-year-old son, the former Crown Prince Michael, nominal ruler. Whether the holdings would be released eventually to the banished monarch or would be kept by the state was not disclosed.

Wealth Sequestered.

Carol's arrival late yesterday was met by the friendly cheers of the Swiss townfolk. His farewell salute from Rumania had been a shower of machine gun and pistol bullets with which Fascist Iron Guardists splattered his train.

Swiss authorities extended him hospitality and took precautions to assure him privacy in one of the resort city's finest hotels.

C.N.E. ATTENDANCE INCREASES 16,000

1,642,000 Persons Attend—Cash Receipts, Also, Are Greater Than in 1939

Toronto, Sept. 9 —(CP)— The 62nd annual Canadian National Exhibition is over but already officials are working towards next year's fair with the hope that the exposition in 1941 might have "Victory Year" as its theme.

Wartime Canada was exemplified in the two-week fair that closed Saturday night with a huge display of fireworks. Attendance records soared beyond those of last year, bearing out contention of directors that the largest annual fair in the world could progress even in wartime.

Drawn by war exhibits of the Royal Canadian Air Force and industry, by livestock, agriculture, sports and entertainment, 1,642,000 persons poured through the gates, an increase of 16,000 over 1939.

Spending power of the public, apparently increased in recent months, was reflected in higher cash receipts in every department that makes up the C.N.E. Sales increases over last year averaged 10 to 20 per cent and ran as high as 50 per cent in some cases, it was reported.

CHINESE DENY REPORT

Chungking, China, Sept. 9 (AP).—Chinese military circles denied today a French report that Chinese troops had crossed the frontier into French Indo-China. They declared the report was Japanese-inspired.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Torrid Zone"

James Cagney, Ann Sheridan and Pat O'Brien make up the triple-threat star cast of the Capitol Theatre's next attraction, "Torrid Zone," opening on Friday. In the featured supporting cast are Andy Devine, Helen Vinson, Jerome Cowan and George Tobias, among a host of others.

"Torrid Zone," as its title indicates, has its setting south of the border, down below Mexico way. Pat O'Brien is the big boss for the fruit company that owns most of Puerto Aguilar, which also makes him the virtual boss of the whole territory. He and his ace plantation manager, played by Cagney, having a standing feud, and are constantly striving to outsmart each other. Ann Sheridan, as an American torch singer trying to earn a slightly dishonest living in the tropics by cheating the natives at cards after wowing them with her singing, helps the feud along.

O'Brien has her arrested and is trying to have her shipped back to the States, and Cagney inadvertently helps her to escape from her captors. She responds by falling in love with him, but he is far from receptive to her until circumstances give her the chance to prove that she's something more than just a gorgeous and unscrupulous show girl.

Romantic Triangle

Also in love with Cagney is the wife of the plantation manager whom Cagney succeeded. Jerome Cowan and Helen Vinson play the husband and wife roles, respectively. Gravel-voiced Andy Devine plays Cagney's pal, and George Tobias is cast as the gay but dangerous rebel who is trying to drive the fruit company out of Puerto Aguilar, by such means as blowing up their trains, and making off with a majority of the plantation's workers and food supply.

There are any number of exciting encounters with the rebel and his guerilla bandits, climaxing a fight-to-the-finish battle in the brush, when Cagney takes the rebel leader captive and brings him back to the plantation and confines him to a shed. Unhappy because of Cagney's apparent lack of interest in her, Miss Sheridan confides in the prisoner, who proves a most sympathetic listener.

When O'Brien storms in on the plantation to find out why the fruit shipments aren't going out on schedule, the rebel escapes and holds them all up at the point of a gun. By a ruse, Cagney gets the gun away from him.

Cagney, O'Brien Clash

The plot revolves around O'Brien's efforts to keep Cagney in the tropics, and the various ruses by which he manages to do it. Running parallel with this theme is the romance between Miss Sheridan and Cagney, which gets off to a bad start but climaxes in brilliantly successful fashion.

A new tune which is already gaining hit proportions over the airwaves is "Mi Cabellero," written by M. K. Jerome and Jack Scholl and introduced by Miss Sheridan in the nightclub sequences of the picture.

"Torrid Zone" has been hailed by the preview critics as one of the most tempestuous dramas of many seasons, crammed to the hilt with romance and action, and zestfully acted by its brilliant cast. William Keighley, whose most recent successes include "Each Dawn I Die," and "The Fighting 69th," directed, from the screen play by Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald.

ITALIAN BOMBERS RAID ALEXANDRIA

One Person Killed, Several Injured During 2-Hour Alarm

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 9 (AP)—A formation of Italian bombers raided Alexandria during an alarm of two hours early today and repeatedly dropped explosives in an effort to hit the concentration of British warships here.

Navy antiaircraft and searchlight activity met the raiders and they were driven off to sea.

One person was killed and several were injured in the attack. The casualties included women and children of the native population.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, September 10
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to the lunar transits this should be a very lively and enterprising day, with much hard work. New projects particularly attract the attention, with all the energies and initiative under high pressure. This with application and industry should be productive and should reap enduring returns. It is probable that some sudden change or upset may tax the patience, but in the long run splendid success should crown the efforts.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of great activity, with the forces and faculties under high stimuli. New propositions are particularly attractive, but it will take much industry, perseverance and application to attain enduring results. Some slight upsetting occurrence will not impede favourable progress.

A child born on this day will be energetic, have fine creative ability. It will also be ambitious, hardworking, faithful and have outstanding executive ability.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Dr. Christian Meets the Women"

Jean Hersholt in "Dr. Christian Meets the Women" and also Raymond Massey, the screen's greatest dramatic actor in the mightiest role of his great career, "Black Limelight," two great features, are now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

In an excellent characterization of the kindly physician-hero, Jean Hersholt surpasses the quality of his performance as the same character in the two previous issues in the successful series, "Meet Dr. Christian" and "The Courageous Dr. Christian." In this picture Mr. Hersholt offers a surprise performance which skilfully blends heartwarming homespun comedy with sincere drama.

A splendid cast including many Hollywood favorites supports Mr. Hersholt in "Dr. Christian Meets the Women." The romance department is occupied by Frank Albertson and Marilyn Merrick, a lovely newcomer. Additional feminine charm is provided by Dorothy Lovett, who is top-featured as Dr. Christian's nurse. Edgar Kennedy, of "slow burn" comedy renown, mixes his unique and hilarious brand of humor with straight drama in an able performance and Rod LaRocque, memorable for his silent screen roles and outstanding portrayals in recent films, merits plaudits for his physical culturist depiction. Maude Eburne, Vaco Ann Borg and Lelah Taylor round out the cast with equally fine performances.

The companion feature, a picture that will also appeal to the whole family, Raymond Massey in "Black Limelight" is a melodrama that has much more to it than the usual screen films offer in suspense and thrills. It has a story that is decidedly unusual. And also although it boasts a great male star, the greatest role in "Black Limelight" is portrayed by a woman, and this woman, Joan Marion, gives a performance that will have every woman in the theatre cheering her on and sympathizing with her in her deepest moments of heart-stirring emotion.

"Dionne Quintuplets"

Latest Fox News Events is also now showing at the McCarthy and in addition to its many pleasing highlights, it presents the latest motion pictures that have been taken of the "Dionne Quintuplets", a splendid attraction that should be seen by all.

ACTUAL TRANSFER

Rear Admiral Stuart Bonham-Carter, officer commanding the 3rd battle squadron of the Royal Navy, told newspapermen Saturday the ships were "magnificent". They were almost identical with some of Britain's own ships, he said, and would fit into the Royal Navy without difficulty.

Arrived on Friday

The destroyers arrived here Friday, having sailed from Boston just a few hours after President Roosevelt announced the U.S. was exchanging them. All of them had been decommissioned because of age some years ago, but some had been back in service on the U.S. neutrality patrol.

A couple of hours after they arrived here, British tars who will man them arrived here in a liner.

They were taken aboard the ships almost immediately, and since then have been familiarizing themselves with the vessel's operation and making certain changes called for by Royal Navy standards.

There was no information here as to when the rest of the ships in the history-making swap would be sent on their way.

CANADIAN FLIERS

was 99, and 35 more probably did not reach home.

A Polish squadron, going joyously into action against the despoilers of their homeland, shot down 10 bombers and three fighters, bringing their total for four days to 25 raiders.

The Canadians' 11, their second largest score, made it a memorable day, and was made up of four Dornier bombers which carry a crew of four men each, six Messerschmitt two-man fighters and one Messerschmitt single-seater. The achievement rivalled that of Aug. 30 when a dozen of them faced 70 raiders and destroyed 13 without loss to their own ranks.

The greater part of their confirmed total bag was collected while they were serving in France and during the evacuation from Dunkirk. Official records show they smashed down 72 "over there".

The fighter squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force did not make contact with the enemy during Saturday's big show. They were serving as aerial watchdogs over their home station at the time and the Nazi thrusts did not reach that sector.

EXPLODES NEAR HOSPITAL

London, Sept. 9 (CP).—A time bomb exploded early today near a hospital where many of those injured in Saturday bombings were getting blood transfusions in the accident ward.

A large lump of granite was blown against a wall within a foot of a window of the ward and the lighting system was affected but first aid work continued by candle light.

AT THE BELLE

"Rhythm on the River"

For some unaccountable reason, when two persons of the opposite sex are forced to wait for an elevator, one or the other, or both fall into something closely resembling mental panic. Why this is so no one has been able to figure out, but the fact remains, and you might consider the remedy given below the next time the situation confronts you.

For those who have little or no occasion to find out for themselves the following reactions to the problem at hand are offered.

First off, you are in a great hurry, you make a dash for the elevator corridor, but slow up perceptably when you notice a young lady (or vice versa) waiting for a lift. You cough a couple of times, then boldly walk up to the "down" button and push it with determination. Then you act unconcerned with the other's presence and walk briskly to the end of the corridor. About now you feel you might venture a look at the other person, which you do. If you're wearing trousers, you immediately appraise the young lady from head to foot. You find out she's not bad at all. This adds to your confusion so you start whistling. You don't realize it, but you are picking up a tune she has been humming. You break off quickly, and your palms start perspiring. More coughing here. No elevator yet.

You're really getting fidgety now. You go over with renewed determination and punch the blazes out of the button. You act very put out with the whole mess.

Finally the "down" car comes along. The operator slams open the door and requests you to step lively, please. He is now in a terrific hurry. You stand aside, gallantly to allow her to enter first. She stands staring ahead unconcernedly.

You're afraid to make the break for some reason or another, and by this time the operator has decided you're waiting for the "up" car and goes on his way. It never occurs to you that she is going "up," so you go through the whole thing again, only now you push the "up" button so she won't think you're a dope. You have to ride to the end of the line in the "up" car, and by this time you're ready to go home and beat mamma.

There has been only one remedy found to counteract this form of mental palsy. The thing to do is go back where you came from and wait until he (she) is long since gone. It wastes time, but it leaves you in a better frame of mind.

What brought all this about is a scene in Bing Crosby's new laugh-crammed romantic musical hit "Rhythm on the River." Bing and Mary Martin, his leading lady, wait for an elevator in very much the same manner described above. If you think this observation is far-fetched, run over to the Belle Theatre tonight or Tuesday, matinee and evening and see for yourself.

"Flying Blind" by VERA BROWN

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Contrary to her expectations, Judith slept. She rose feeling that things were not so bad after all. She packed Tex's bags for the trip south before she left at 10 for the hospital. It was pouring rain, a perfect deluge.

At the hospital Tex was dressed and waiting. His rumpled, torn dinner coat was a mess.

"Glad you brought my top coat. I look terrible."

"You do! How's the head?"

"I don't know whether it's head or hangover, and the Doc won't tell me."

Judith hesitated before she asked about Sonia.

"She left an hour ago. She's all right."

So, bandaged head and all, Tex and Judith went to the hotel. As they entered the lobby, Lee Holt was waiting for them. Judith walked on to the desk for their key.

"You look like a war hero!" Lee shook Tex's hand. "I haven't had a chance to congratulate you."

Tex responded rather sheepishly.

"It just shows a guy should keep off the ground!"

Lee grinned: "Some guys, anyway. You certainly made the papers."

He handed Tex copies of the latest dailies. There on the front page was the story of the accident. Pictures of Sonia, her hair flying prettily about the hospital pillow, of Tex, all bandaged up, and of Judith with Dudley.

Tex groaned.

"I suppose every paper in the country will use this!"

"The price of fame, my boy!" Lee's eyes twinkled. Maybe this would be a good lesson. Lee adored Tex with complete hero worship. As a flier Tex was everything Lee hoped to be. But Lee could not forgive Tex for his latest escapade. He admired Judith, too.

When Judith came back, Tex handed the newspapers over to her. Might just as well get that over, he thought ruefully.

"Here's some nice reading!" he invited.

The publicity was devastating. Judith had known there would be headlines plus pictures—but not this tremendous spread! The color rushed into her cheeks.

"Let's get on upstairs. We'll be late," Tex said shortly. In the room while the bandaged flyer changed his clothes, Judith did last-minute packing. She was going back to New York just as soon as the funeral party was on its way.

Silence hung between them uncomfortably. As Tex put his wallet into his day-time suit and rummaged for a clean handkerchief, Judith finally spoke: "I laid one out on the chair."

Tex found it. Then he said impatiently: "You're sore!"

"I'm not, Tex. Really I'm not. I'm just glad you weren't hurt seriously."

"You make me feel like a heel. Why don't you make a scene?"

Judith got up, came over to him, stood on tip-toe and kissed him.

"I won't quarrel with you today, Tex. You're half-sick. Now we're ready. I'll take your big bag with me. Come."

Going down in the elevator, other passengers stared at Tex's bandaged head.

When they got into a cab to go to the Duttons, Tex grumbled: "I feel like a fool with my dome done up this way!"

"It'll come off in a day or two," Judith consoled. Deep in her heart she was laughing a little. Tex was paying for his folly.

Elsie, a pathetic figure in black, was waiting quietly for them to come. The young widow clung to Tex, seemed grateful that he was there at last. So distraught was she, however, that she failed to comment on the bandaged head. That saved some embarrassment.

There was half an hour before it was time to leave for the prayers which were to precede their departure.

Judith left Tex with Elsie and went to thank Mrs. Dutton. She found her erstwhile hostess in the sun room downstairs in a clinging green negligee.

"I was hoping I'd see you before you left," Mrs. Dutton greeted.

"What Mrs. Stone would have done without you, I don't know. You're really kind!"

Mrs. Dutton smiled at Judith.

"I'm so glad I had the chance to do this. What is a big home for if you can't share it with people who need it?"

"And we needed it so badly, Mrs. Dutton!"

Mrs. Dutton added, "If later I can help Mrs. Stone, let me know. She'll need friends."

Then of course Mrs. Dutton asked after Tex.

"He's rather uncomfortable today, but he's all right. Fortunately it was nothing serious."

Mrs. Dutton hesitated. Judith knew she wanted to tell her something, then had thought better of the impulse. Judith was sure she knew what that something was. She wanted to warn her against Sonny Winthrop!

"Why don't you come back here after they go? You'll have three or four hours before your train leaves."

"I'm afraid not, Mrs. Dutton. I've packing to do, and I've promised to see Mary Hartwig.

Judith could not bear to face the keen eyes of this older woman again that day. She did not need her warning.

Later in the crowded little chapel, prayers were read over the closed casket. There were masses of flowers, and everybody in Cleveland's flying world was there: the Duttons, and Jameson, Sonia, et al. Dudley sat near Judith, but she did not speak to him.

It would be over soon, and in a few days Tex would be back in New York with her. Everything would be all right then. Elsie did not weep, not until on the wind-swept station platform she kissed Judith good-bye.

As Tex said his good-bye, he whispered: I'll be home the first moment I can get away."

The train finally pulled out, taking Marvin Stone on that last journew home. The crowd dispersed. Judith made her way to the street. The rain had let up and she determined to walk. It would do her good. She had plenty of time.

As Judith walked she saw Sonia drive by with Jameson. For one awful moment she thought Sonia saw her. Sonia did. But Jameson did not recognize this girl in the rain as the same radiant creature who had sat on his right at dinner the night before. So the car swept on with swishing swiftness.

Judith took the side streets after that. She did not want to talk to anybody and was afraid Dudley might find her.

(To Be Continued)

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being lam chops nothing special, and ma said to pop, Blantch Hipple dropped in to see me this afternoon.

Did you tell her I was asking about her health? pop said, and ma said, certainly not, why should I, when did you?

Well anyway I'm asking about it right now, so that'll go for the next time, pop said, How is she? he said, and ma said, She's as strong as a horse, she's never any other way. She noticed right away that I had done the living room over. She's quite famous for her prowess at decoration so I was anxious to get her candid reactions. She seemed quite impressed by what I had done, but still I seemed to notice a certain amount of mental hemming and hawing, so I assured her that any criticism she had to make would be received with open arms and an open mind, because if we dont learn from the criticism of people who are suppose to know, how are we ever going to learn, isn't that right, Willyum? ma said.

It's so right that books could be written about it, and by gollies I believe books have been, pop said, and ma said, Well, she held back with all kinds of evasive subterfuges, but finely I made her speak out. In fact I told her I would feel personly hurt if she didn't, so at long and at last she plumped out with the implication and the inference that one or 2 bright cushions would lighten up the effect. Can you beat that, Willyum? ma said.

I could beat it with 3 or 4 cushions, naturelly, pop said, and ma said, It would of been better to maintain an aloof silence rather than come out with a remark like that. Did she think I had decorated a living room or a circus? ma said, and pop said, Maybe she had stopped thinking, may be her mind was a blank?

Well that's what I think, and I'm glad to have your supporting opinion, ma said, and pop said, At your service day and night.

Being the end of the subject.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP)—The market registered a sizeable sell-off on Toronto Exchange today. Golds posted a decline while industrials and base metals also showed a loss. Trading was slow, total shares were 145,000.

Wall Street weakness was a depressing factor in Toronto and practically all the interlisted issues lost ground. Soft spots in golds included Teck Hughes, Macassa, Aunor, Coniaurum, East Malartie, Kerr-Addison, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Preston and others.

All senior base metals, including Hudson Bay, Noranda, Nickel and Smelters declined fractions and losses of 5 to 15 cents came out for Ventures, Steep Rock and Pend Oreille.

Home Oil, Calgary and Edmonton and Anglo-Canadian were down 6 to 15 cents and bids were lower for other western oils.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 9—(AP)—Bearish interpretations of the war news tended to dampen stock market spirits today and leading issues dipped fractions to more than 3 points before attracting a little support. Selling dried up after a fairly fast opening and, near the fourth hour, losses were shaded in most cases.

Intensification of German bombing raids on Britain, brokers said, offset pleasing business developments at home and many traders inclined to cash in on last week's rally.

Bonds skidded with stocks and major commodities slipped.

Shares on the losing side included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Sears Roebuck, U.S. Rubber and International Paper Pfd.

Canadian issues were easy. Hiram Walker dropped 1 1-4 points and Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram lost fractions.

Butter and Egg Prices Steady

Toronto, Sept. 9.—Toronto's produce markets had a quiet day Saturday.

Trading was slow on the butter market. Buyers appeared to be awaiting publication of the all-Canada stock figures, expected on Tuesday, before making extensive purchases. Supplies of first-grade Ontario creamery solids were light and the price was firm at 23c.

The egg market assumed a quietly steady tone. All quotations were unchanged. A-large eggs selling to wholesalers at 32c and to retailers at 36c. Grade A pullet eggs were in the greatest demand. A premium of ½c to 1c per dozen was obtainable on government-inspected shipments.

daring, and effective use of weapons.

"Should the Germans attempt to invade the country we shall have a distinct advantage in knowing the ground over which we would have to operate," he added. "It is up to us to take advantage of the enemy's confusion, harry him and chase him out before he establishes a foothold. So act boldly and strike fast and hard."

Throughout the conference, which lasted 90 minutes, enemy planes flew high overhead followed by criss-crossing searchlights. Bombs thundered somewhere far off but none dropped in the 2nd Division area.

After a short rest unit commanders were up again at dawn directing the distribution of new arms and equipment, preparing standby operational orders, reconnoitring lines of communication, and otherwise preparing for a possible emergency.

Comfortable in Camp

Units of the division which arrived last week are now comfortably settled in camp. Many of the men had expected to find conditions something akin to those at Salisbury Plain in the last war. They were amazed when they marched into a modern billet surrounded by playing fields, gardens and woods, with bristling settlements within easy reach. All are looking forward to landing leave soon.

During the weekend newspapermen and photographers trekked to the camp to give the latest contingent the "once over." They saw a famous Highland regiment from Quebec go through its paces and were entertained impromptu to a parade square sing-song by members of a French-Canadian regiment from Montreal.

There was a rush to a mobile recording van when the men were invited to address a brief message to their friends back home. Throughout the proceedings the cameras clicked briskly, especially when the newsmen located Gerald Johnston of Winnipeg. They discovered he had been leading man to Mae West in the stage production of "Diamond Lil" years before she became famous as a screen star.

CONSTANT RAIDS

"This is the most critical month of the war," a high military source told me.

"The increasing crescendo of air attacks has not yet reached a high note but it is possible it may mean the Nazis hope to have things their own way in a week or so.

"We remain fully confident."

Britain Remains Firm.

This statement, foreboding in the possibility it held out for the immediate future but reassuring because of the genuine note of contagious confidence expressed in the last sentence, was given me in an air raid shelter last night

Thunder broke out in the sky as the interview opened.

We had sat through the raid siren, but the claxon warning that raiders were close to a district dotted with government headquarters sent us to a shelter sunk two floors below the ground.

Down there we were far removed from the steady drone of bombers, the sickening crump of bombs and the angry bark of anti-aircraft guns reverberating into the night.

The bombers came over as dusk was fading and a dark velvet cloak was falling over the blacked out city.

A brilliant glow lit the eastern skies as the Nazis struck again at their targets of Saturday when they flung across London the most terrific onslaught yet levelled at a British city.

It was estimated that five successive waves totalling 250 planes came over London early Sunday evening and through the night relays of raiders were over the sprawling capital for 8½ hours, often bombing indiscriminately.

700 German Planes Used.

A formation totalling 700 planes was used against Britain in the day and night attacks Saturday. The Royal Air Force and gun crews aground knocked down 99 of them.

Even in the east-end slums, a poor section inhabited by Jews and European refugees from Nazi terror, where many lost everything, morale remained high. People were not frightened. They were just mad.

Sunday night's raiders again flung the first fury of their steel at the inner districts and fires were burning at two o'clock this morning.

In addition to the eight German planes that fell during the sporadic daylight raids Sunday one venturesome raider apparently collided with a barrage balloon during the night bombing.

As the flaming balloon tinted the night sky south of my observation post atop one of London's tallest buildings, an eerie white light fountained from the ground immediately below it. The white flame burned fiercely for two minutes, then died.

A phone call to that district confirmed that the plane had crashed.

OFFICIALS WARN

An Air Ministry announcement indicated the casualties from last night's bombings would run in the hundreds, approaching those of Saturday. A recapitulation of Saturday's figures showed 306 killed and 1,337 injured, lower figures than the previous estimates of 400 killed and 1,400 wounded.

Targets

The attacks were "severe" and "widespread," the Air Ministry said, but "so far as information is available, it is not anticipated that the number (of casualties) will exceed those of Saturday."

Heavy damage was done to many non-military targets, the Ministry added. Mentioned were three hospitals and two museums. Unofficial information was that two world famed museums had suffered. (Censorship forbade their identification.)

"London has once more been the main objective of the enemy and its citizens have met the blind savagery of these latest night attacks with admirable courage and resource," the communique said.

Authoritative Royal Air Force quarters said it was "extremely difficult" to combat the raiders. They circled at great heights behind the protection of heavy clouds and rain. Searchlights could not penetrate the clouds and fighter planes had difficulty finding the bombers. Such weather is to be expected three nights out of five during the coming autumn and winter, it was pointed out.

But Britain's dogged bomber force was reported by the Air Ministry to have set fire to a great swath of Germany's port city, Hamburg, in a three-hour and 15-minute raid last night. Salvo after salvo of heavy bombs and hundreds of fire-spreading missiles were dropped by a large force, a communique said.

At the same time authoritative sources declared Hitler's plan of following up the London bombings with an invasion was being systematically broken up by British counterattacks on his concentrations of barges and boats at French bases across the Channel.

red glow of fires and the incessant thunder of the London anti-aircraft barrage.

The attack surpassed the eight hour and 18 minute raid by 700 Nazi planes Saturday when 400 persons were killed and 1,400 were injured seriously.

The London press declared unanimously that invasion is the direct objective of the full force air war.

An air ministry official said September is "undoubtedly a very critical month of the war" and added that even if England had four times her force of fighter planes "It would still be impossible to prevent some of the bombers from reaching the capital."

"Had a Nice Lot Together"

"We waited until they got a nice lot together, then struck," said one source in telling of the latest of these attacks on Calais, Boulogne, Dunkerque and Ostend Saturday night.

Authorities said activity of the London docks has been disrupted by the German hammering in that quarter, and that London's people will have to be supplied food by truck and train, but asserted that if Hitler's object is to break civilian morale he has underestimated the British character.

Describing the raids on Germany, an Air Ministry bulletin said many sticks of bombs strewed the Blohm and Voss shipbuilding yards and that two fires were reported close to the mouth of the Elbe tunnel.

"Undeterred by the storm of anti-aircraft shells, the glare of searchlight concentrations, patches of thick cloud and much ground haze, the raiders cruised above the great dock area on the banks of the Elbe," said the bulletin.

"Methodically pinpointing their target, they released salvo after salvo of heavy bombs and hundreds of incendiaries. Repeatedly, stocks of heavy bombs were seen to crash across the docks and port installations."

Returning pilots declared they could see the glare of the resulting conflagrations in the sky as far away as 60 miles as they headed down the river for home.

The raids on London last night were made by an estimated 150 machines.

More than 30 persons were believed to have been killed when a huge bomb demolished a whole block of flats in one East London district.

Channel Ports Shelled.

Bombing by the Royal Air Force of German-held channel ports during Saturday night has offset the threat of a sea-borne invasion of Britain, the air ministry announced.

A brief statement issued by the air ministry news service said R.A.F. bombers, striking at channel ports nearest Britain, had done extensive damage to shipping and harbor installations.

Observers noted that the air ministry bulletin issued Saturday night concerning R.A.F. bombing activities spoke of the bombing of barges at Dunkirk.

Communique

The News Service said:—

"Enemy threats of invasion by sea were countered last night (Saturday) by a series of air attacks on Channel ports during which extensive damage to shipping and harbor installations was inflicted by aircraft of the bomber command.

The Admiralty announced that dive bombers and torpedo seaplanes of the fleet air arm attacked two German supply ships off the coast of Norway and left one of them sinking and the other with a heavy list. Both were abandoned by their crews.

Despite "poor visibility and vigorous defenses," the R.A.F. dealt the following blows, the Air Ministry announced:

Hits at Calais, France, across from Dover, where bombs burst between the basin and the entrance to the harbor. Gun emplacements and searchlight batteries there also were bombed.

Bombardment of the Colmar Airdrome, in France, where a hangar was hit and aircraft set afire.

Attack Krupp Works

Attacks on the Krupp Works at Essen, war factories at Emden and Zweibrucken and the oil plant at Gelsenkirnhen, all in Germany.

Bomb explosions on rail depots at Mannheim, Ehrang and Hamm, Germany.

As the grey dawn ended London's latest night of horror—the last raiders had disappeared shortly before the long alarm was lifted at 5.35 a. m.—the uncounted dead were still being dug from the wreckage of buildings and police and air raid wardens searched for delaying explosives.

Fires could be seen in almost every direction from the heart of the city. Stuka dive bombers carried their screaming attack to the centre of London for the first time, Plunging close to earth to direct their blasts.

Time Bombs Used By Nazis.

Bombs fell near the Houses of Parliament in Westminster, which lie alongside Westminster Abbey and other landmarks. It was stated officially that the parliament buildings were not hit. Two world famous museums were damaged. (The censor prohibited their identification).

At least two time bomb explosions were reported. One damaged a hospital where doctors and nurses worked to keep apace with the injured brought in by ambulance crews. Bombs hit three other hospitals, demolishing a wing of one of them.

In addition to the usual incendiary explosives, earth-shaking explosions told that the raiders were using their biggest bombs.

A communique by the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security said that although the raiders were never over London in great mass flight at any time during the night, they kept coming in "successive relays".

Damage was reported as "widespread". There were many new fires, especially along the banks of the Thames river, again the bull's-eye for most of the bombings.

Services Temporarily Disrupted.

Public services were reported temporarily disrupted. Many homes and some mercantile buildings were damaged. Some of the business and public buildings hit were in the centre of the city.

Heavy explosions shook The Associated Press building, knocking down a staff member watching the raiders and a photographer setting up his camera for a picture.

Some sections of the city, however, apparently escaped with little or no damage. There was no sign of bomb ruin along main thoroughfares of the Hyde Park area, the Strand or Picadilly.

Break Through in Darkened Skies

The night raid followed a 51 minute alarm at noon Sunday. At that time no bombers appeared over the city.

In the late afternoon coastal anti-aircraft batteries beat back some German planes, but as the sky darkened the Nazi fliers began to break through. The attack grew in intensity until midnight, when there was a lull. New Nazi squadrons appeared, however, and kept up the bombing until daybreak.

Some of the attackers operated independently, some circled the city, others climbed high over London and dived past barrage balloons at the heart of the capital.

Most of the raiders struck from the east but some swooped in from the northwest. There were scattered reports of bombings elsewhere along the east and south coasts and in Wales, but London bore the brunt.

Most of London's millions stayed in hiding through the night — in public or private shelters, trying to get some rest amid the din.

Few ventured onto the streets, but when the all clear signal came they poured out, haggard and grim, to view the damage and go about their business.

Traffic Forced to Detour

Bomb craters pock-marked many streets, forcing traffic to detour. Taxi cabs were in constant demand. Bus service was irregular. Some buses, abandoned during the raid, were smashed by direct hits or collapsed walls.

A direct hit on one bomb shelter in a southwestern section of the city was reported to have killed an undisclosed number of persons.

Most workers had to walk to their offices and factories. Many of them were sleepless except for what rest they could get on pillows and blankets they carried to the shelters. Subways were operating.

But Britons were advised to be ready to take even more One Air Ministry official commented:

"We have not yet reached the top note of this crescendo of air attack."

Block Hit Squarely.

Flames completed the ruin of one block of flats, hit squarely by bombs.

Rescue crews worked for several hours getting the injured out of the flaming wreckage and sending them to hospitals.

The total number of injured was not even estimated as the work went on in the hard hit sections. Casualties in central London, however, were reported to be light.

Train passengers caught by the raid took shelter in stations. Some bombs struck so near that window glass showered the floors.

Passengers stranded in one station saw a German bomber smash into a barrage balloon. Plane and balloon plummeted in flames.

"Will she soon be going, too?" wonder these Brooklyn navy yard workmen as they paint the United States destroyers Twiggs (127) and Philip (76). They're similar to the 50 which U. S. is trading Great Britain for defence bases and may be included in the deal. Even if they're not, there may be another deal later, between the two nations.

AMBITION REALIZED, BUT NOT AS ANTICIPATED, AS NAZIS LAND IN ENGLAND

This German youngster, shown as he was helped ashore at Margate, is one of the members of the crew of a German Junkers bomber shot down in an aerial dogfight over the sea during one of the engagements of the "Battle of Britain." The British lifeboat crews along the coast have been constantly on duty fishing friend and foe alike out of the sea during the air battles.

This German raider arrived in England in not quite the manner planned. He is one of the crew members of a German Junkers bombing plane shot down in a dogfight off Margate. The Margate lifeboat put to sea to aid the stricken foeman. All of the crew was rescued. While this photo was being made an aerial battle was still going on over the sea.

DECK CLEARED FOR BRITAIN?

The littered deck of the U.S. destroyer Twiggs, which is being "polished up" at the Brooklyn, N.Y., navy yard, is shown as sailors prepare the vessel for active service. The Twiggs is of the same type as the 50 destroyers traded to Great Britain by the United States in exchange for air and naval bases on British possessions in the western hemisphere. It may be one of the warships included in the deal.

Helps Canadian Team Defeat U. S. Champs

No old cow-hands but 10 very nimble digits were used by pretty Gwyn Powell, of Saskatoon, in lending support to the Canadian National Typing team when they defeated the United States champions in this year's International Typing Marathon at the Canadian National Exhibition. The Canadians were in such high spirits when their competitors conceded defeat today that Gwyn donned some apparel she said was appropriate to her native province and astounded the crowds watching the contest for the C.N.E. and James H. R. Cromwell trophies.

The annual sports day of No. 1 Service Flying Training School at Camp Borden was climaxed by the presentation of wings to 41 graduates of the intermediate training squadron. The graduating class is shown, UPPER RIGHT, and a general view of the presentation scene is shown, LOWER RIGHT. C. L. T. Sawle, of Edmonton, is pictured, LEFT, as Group Captain A. T. N. Cowley, O.C. of the training school, pinned the coveted wings on his breast.

UNITED STATES CONSIDERING TURNING OVER TANKS TO CANADA

General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the U.S. army, revealed that the army is going to release several hundred old world war tanks to Canada for training purposes. He stressed the fact that negotiations were still underway, but commented that "we are very favorably considering turning over the tanks." Some of the old rolling fortresses in question are shown here. General Marshall said that they are of no use except for training.

NAZI NIGHT RAIDERS SHOWER BOMBS AT RANDOM

Objectives in Germany, Holland, Belgium, France Heavily Bombed

Germans Abandon All Pretense of Confining Attacks

Fires Started in Immediate Vicinity Of St. Pauls and the Guildhall

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—German bombs smashed into the heart of London today in the city's third successive all-night bombardment, spreading ruin and starting fires in the Capital's financial and business districts and in the immediate vicinity of famed St. Paul's Cathedral and the Guildhall.

A bulletin said the raiders showered the bombs at random "without any distinction of objectives" and abandoning "all pretense" of confining the attacks to military targets.

The Bank of London, London Bridge, the big law courts, and the financial district all are within a few blocks in the mid-city area shaken by the thunderous explosions.

Bombs which fell in the neighborhood of St. Paul's struck warehouses, setting them aflame. Large forces of firemen worked feverishly to prevent the blaze from spreading. They were aided by the auxiliary fire service and fought the fires with the aid of water towers.

COURT WILL NOW GET SOME OF THE MONEY

Chicago, Sept. 10 (AP)—A man with $1,423 in his pocket demanded a free ride on a street car because, he said, "policemen don't have to pay and I want to be a policeman for a day." Jack Scrant, 34, rode 36 blocks before a real policeman boarded the car and arrested him. A search disclosed the $1,423 in currency, which Scrant said was the money from his mother's estate. He was charged with disorderly conduct, resisting an officer and assault and battery.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Front page news! The fact that most newspapers give the weather forecast a prominent pace in the ear of the front page is evidence enough that weather is Page One news. Such is man's dependence upon the weather that if the forecast and other current weather information were not forthcoming for a single day almost disaster would result. In a situation pictured recently by an imaginative writer, shippers, not warned of a storm at sea, lost their cargoes; fruit growers caught by a frost, lost their crop; movie companies, having prepared for an outside take, lost money on account of rain; airlines, due to lack of weather information, could not carry out their schedules; and many businesses were handicapped.

ONE-THIRD LOAN SOLD FIRST DAY SAY OFFICIALS

Finance Minister Urges Everyone of Moderate Means to Purchase Government Bonds

ALL MUST SHARE

Ottawa, Sept. 10 —(CP)— Early reports to the Bank of Canada today indicated total cash sales of Canada's second loan of the Second Great War have accounted for $141,000,000 of the $300,000,000-objective.

The $141,000,000 figure was given out by loan officials at 12 o'clock noon EDT.

A statement said: "While reports of the larger national subscriptions continue to be fairly satisfactory, the smaller subscribers have not yet responded to the offering in sufficient volume to meet the need.

Private Subscriptions Slow

"Private subscriptions are coming in at a slower rate than was the case of the first war loan."

The first loan of the war was for $200,000,000 last January and it was heavily over-subscribed with a large response from small investors.

Books opened for subscriptions to the present loan yesterday and the statement from loan officials today added: "It is expected that the Minister of Finance will be able to indicate a clearer picture of the response to the loan this evening, after receiving reports from dealers throughout Canada."

The first great response yesterday, mainly from large investors, was considered satisfactory but Finance Minister Ilsley urged every person of moderate means to lend his or her share if the full amount of the loan was to be subscribed. All Canadians must share the responsibility for making the loan a success, the Finance Minister said.

Scores of large corporations subscribed more than $100,000, several subscribing more than $1,000,000 each.

English Lady Worried Lest Indian Soldiers Not Receive Welcome

Somewhere in England, Sept. 10—(CP)— An elderly English lady who has happy memories of the years she spent in British Columbia, is worried lest the Indians that came over with the 2nd Division may find the hospitality of the British people a "trifle cool."

"I understand that a large number of Indians came over with the latest contingent from the Dominion," she wrote, "and I therefore like them to know we are proud of them and appreciate what they have done. I should welcome a visit from two or three of them during their leave and shall do everything possible to make their stay an enjoyable one."

FIGHTER PLANES TURN BACK NAZI DAYLIGHT RAIDS

Londoners Sent to Shelters After Third Weary Night of Constant Raids

R.A.F. STRIKES BACK

"Very Heavy" Demolition Bombs Dropped on Centre of Capital

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—Wave after wave of German air invaders sent harried Londoners underground four times in daylight today but up to early evening there had been no renewal of the devastating Nazi bombings.

The forth alarm wailed at 5.55 p.m. (12.55 p.m. E.D.T.) as the gathering dusk brought anew the threat of night raids which have kept the city's million in shelters each night since Saturday.

The German planes over Britain today were believed to be scouts sent to determine the damage done in the preceding three nights of attack. British fighter planes turned them back.

Other Nazi planes were reported over Wales late today.

The fourth alarm came only 14 minutes after the all-clear signal had ended the third at 5.41 p.m. (12.41 p.m. E.D.T.). Those who had scurried for shelter barely had time to reach the surface before plunging below ground again.

Bombers Fought Off

One flight of reconnaissance bombers was fought off in a quick battle high above the centre of the city while sirens wailed just after noon. The second alarm was sounded at 4 p.m. (11 a.m. E.D.T.) and lasted 23 minutes.

Sounds of machine-gun fire overhead marked the lunchtime raid but no planes were heard or seen during the second alarm.

Traffic jams as well as alarms were the lot of the London popu-

HUNGARY CHARGES MACHINERY TAKEN FROM CEDED AREA

Magyar Press Says Large Quantity of Telephone Equipment Removed from Transylvania

CAROL TO LISBON

Budapest, Sept. 10 (AP).—Hungarian sources said protests developed today against the alleged disappearance of valuable machinery from northern Transylvania, newly occupied by Hungarian troops under cession by Rumania in the axis-dictate Vienna arbitration.

The Magyar press and radio charged that much machinery had been removed, particularly telephone equipment.

A protest to Bucharest and demands for reparation were reported in well-informed quarters.

The Hungarian radio also charged that Hungarians were being mistreated in Rumania proper and in southern Transylvania.

"The Hungarian minority policy toward Rumania will correspond to the treatment of Hungarians in Rumania," it warned.

More than half of the ceded area of Transylvania now is under the

AFTER R.A.F. BLASTED FAMED BERLIN COURTHOUSE

A view of the bomb-holed roof of the Moabit courthouse in Berlin, which was one of the targets of British bombers. The Moabit courthouse was the scene of many of Germany's famous political trials, including that of the Rev. Martin Niemoller, Lutheran pastor who dared disagree with Hitler's racial doctrines. The British planes swooped to 3,000 feet and dropped flares to light up their targets before bombing.

Merciless, 'All-Out' War Against Germany Wanted by Many in Britain

British Writer Says No Way of Instilling Sense Into Germans Except by Killing Them — No Mercy Should be Shown to Those Who Boast They Are Without Mercy

MUST FIGHT ON RELENTLESSLY

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—A call is being sounded here for a merciless, "all-out" war by Great Britain and military leaders are being urged to brush aside in their sky-war against Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy any ethics associated with the old school tie.

John Gordon wrote in a Sunday Express article last week that "in my view there is no way of instilling sense and sanity into Germans at this moment except by killing them." He adds the Germans are beyond missionary work, that they have "gone back to the jungle age."

"It was the German people, not Hitler alone, who made this war. They made it a war not of soldiers against soldiers, but of people against people. As they made it, so they shall have it. They who boasted that they were without mercy deserve no mercy. Justice is all they need. Let us see that justice is what they get."

The writer says that when Germany begins to whine under the whipping by the Royal Air Force "I hope there will be no sentimental nonsense this time about mercy for the poor, deluded Germans who never really wanted the war, but were just misled."

Must Retaliate

"For every bomb dropped upon the soil of Britain, we shall, before this war is finished, drop ten bombs into the heart of Germany. For every innocent civilian slaughtered to satisfy the blood lust of Hitler, a hundred Germans who now exhort their Fuehrer to greater and greater infamies shall pay the price."

Gordon finds it heartening to "see signs of a return to the old offensive spirit among our leaders ....Defense alone....can never win a war." He contends, to "achieve victory we must strike down Germany in Germany and Italy in Italy."

"We are still too much obsessed with the defense of our coast-line. We should be fighting the Battle of Britain in Germany. That is the only place where the knockout blow can get home. Parries are all very well but it is the solar plexus punch that ends the fight.

"When we go after wasps we don't content ourselves with a few slaps at the wasps that attack us. We go out and burn the nest. That's the way to deal with Hitler

Battleship Continues to Be Backbone of U. S. Naval Fleet

Fifteen Now in Service and Seventeen More Contracted For or Under Construction

COST HUGE SUM

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—The United States navy reaffirmed its faith in the battleship as the backbone of sea power today by staking $700,000,000 of its present and prospective building money on seven of the floating fortresses.

Despite contentions of some aviation enthusiasts that air power has made the dreadnaught obsolete, navy officials set aside this big sum for capital ships in a record $3,861,053,312 contract letting.

The seven battleships will be heavily-armored, long-range vessels of 45,000 tons or more, larger than any warships now afloat and the equal of those said to be under construction in other countries.

Reports circulated in the Capital, moreover, that three of them would be of 53,000 tons, larger than any other power now known to be building. This could not be confirmed.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem.-Georgia) of the House of Representatives naval committee told his colleagues that all seven would be 45,000-tonners.

Both Britain and Japan are believed to be building battleships at around 45,000 tons.

The navy previously had ordered four such superships, and officials said that two of these already were under construction. A number of 35,000-tonners are much farther along toward completion. By the time the latest batch of seven giants is completed four or five years hence, officials said, the navy's battle line will boast of 32 dreadnaughts in contrast with the 15 now in actual service.

SENTENCE IS UPHELD

Toronto Sept. 10 (CP)—Members of the Ontario Appeal Court today upheld a seven-year sentence imposed on Charles P. McCarthy, private detective and one-time member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, for perjury, by Mr Justice E R. E. Chevrier at Ottawa June 19.

The conviction was based on evidence McCarthy gave in a divorce trial.

CHILDREN HELP FATHER GET JOB

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 10 (AP) — Somewhere in Iowa a farmhand has a job because he has two children of school age. Iowa law requires that no rural school shall operate unless it has an enrollment of at least six.

Tommies Being Trained for Britain's Counter Stroke Against Dictators

Great Measure of Co-operation Achieved Among Three Services Correspondent Told

FIXED DEFENCES

(By J. E. Jarvie War Correspondent Australian Consolidated Press)

Somewhere in Southern England, Sept. 10 (CP)—Undaunted by Hitler's aerial blitzkrieg, the armed forces in this broad stretch of the United Kingdom are facing up to the possibility that this may be the platform for the often-promised Nazi attempt at invasion.

But perhaps even more important, they train and lay their plans with the thought in mind that here, too, may be the spring-board for the British offensive against the Nazis which Prime Minister Churchill has promised.

Lt.-Gen. C. J. E. Auchinleck, G.O.C. the southern command, a rugged six-footer who fought the Germans at Narvik, told me his outfit is putting the finishing touches to defence of the area but looking even farther afield—to the offensive.

Beaches along the coastline of nearly 50 miles, from the Thames to the Severn, are being held by the minimum number of men against possible enemy landings. More and more, Tommies are being trained for the British counter stroke against the dictators. This has been made possible by the steady growth of fixed defences and the laying of every conceivable sort of trap at

Year Ago Today Canada Proclaimed War Against Germany

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—(CP)— Just one year ago today Canada proclaimed a State of war with Nazi Germany.

The first anniversary of that decision at the side of Britain sees an even more determined Canada, intensifying her war effort now that Britain is fighting the battle alone.

Here are the steps before the official proclamation was issued declaring a "state of war" with Germany.

On Sept. 7, five days after Britain's formal declaration of war, parliament met in emergency session.

Two days later Prime Minister Mackenzie King asked for approval of the declaration of war.

On the night of Sept. 9 parliament approved the formal declaration. At a midnight session of the Cabinet the necessary proclamation was drawn up, given approval by the Governor General, and submitted by cable to the King.

At 11.15 a.m. the following day His Majesty's approval was received and 55 minutes later in an extra edition of the Canada Gazette the proclamation was published. Canada was at war.

Greatly Increased Gas Mileage Next Big Improvement for Motorcars

Gas May Cost More but Drivers Will be Able to Cut Fuel Bills at Least 20 Per Cent

NEW EXPERIMENTS

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Detroit, Sept. 10 (AP)—The next major change in automobile driving, the American Chemical Society was informed today, is likely to be doubling the miles per gallon of gasoline.

Laboratory tests already show that it can be done, and that while the gasoline for doubled mileage will cost more, the driver still may cut his fuel bill by perhaps 20 per cent.

The reports were made by T. A. Boyd of the Research Laboratories of the General Motors Corporation. Up to now, he said, the buyers of cars have preferred more power, more acceleration and more hill-climbing capacity rather than just more miles per gallon. They can't have both, he explained.

"It begins to appear," he then added, "that from now on car users may prefer to take the benefits of further improvements in fuel and of advances in engineering in terms of more miles per gallon."

American drivers today ride on what is known as 70 octane gasoline, on the average. Boyd said that 100 octane experiments show 55 per cent more miles per gallon at 20 miles an hour, and more than 40 per cent gain at higher speeds.

But above 100 octane a car gives 50 per cent more miles at 60 miles an hour and 70 per cent more at 20 miles an hour. One hundred octane is already on the market for aviation.

When it comes in for cars, Boyd estimated it would cost 10 cents per gallon to manufacture, or twice as much as present standard gasoline, but that with the greater mileage the driver still would save money.

Lighting Plants At Berlin, Bremen And Hamburg Hit

Barge Concentrations At Ostend, Calais and Boulogne Attacked

London, Sept. 10—(CP)—Heavy British bombers continued their pounding of military objectives in Germany and the occupied areas of Holland, Belgium and France last night.

Lighting plants at Berlin, Bremen and Hamburg shipyards, docks at the Kiel naval base and Wilhelmshaven and factories at Essen and Barnstorf, were bombed.

The heavy bombers also attacked shipping and barge concentrations in the channel ports of Ostend, Calais and Boulogne, and the German artillery emplacements at Cap Gris Nez, France, from which Nazi guns have been throwing shells at the Dover area.

Attacks were made on freight yards at Krefeld and Brussels and on several airdromes.

The air ministry's communique, issued Tuesday evening, follows:

"Last night R.A.F. bombers continued their attacks on military objectives in German and enemy-occupied Holland, Belgium and France.

"Among targets attacked were lighting installations at Berlin, shipyards at Bremen and Hamburg, docks at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven and Wismar, goods yards at Krefeld and Brussels, factories at Essen and Barnstorf, rail communications and several enemy airdromes.

Other forces of our bombers attacked shipping and barge concentrations in the ports of Ostend, Calais and Boulogne, and against gun emplacements at Cap Griz Nez. Three of our aircraft did not return.

TRADE MINISTER TO VISIT WEST

Will Obtain First Hand Information on Problems Facing the Government

Ottawa, Sept. 10 —(CP)— Trade Minister MacKinnon said today he would leave tonight for the Prairie Provinces to obtain first hand information on the problem facing the government in connection with methods of advancing cash against farm-stored wheat.

Outlining the efforts made during the past 10 days in consultations with Prairie Province governments, bankers and others to work out a satisfactory plan Mr. MacKinnon said "there is an inclination by the provinces to put the full load on the door-step of the Dominion."

Canadian chartered banks and elevator companies had refused to agree to a plan of advancing loans on the security of farm-stored grain, with a limited federal guarantee, the Minister said, and the provincial governments had declined, so far, to become joint guarantors with the Dominion in providing funds.

FLEET AIR ARM ACTIVE IN NORWAY SAYS ADMIRALTY

Enemy Supply Ship of 2,500 Tons in Haugesund Bombed and Hit Scored

MILITARY HUTS HIT

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that fleet air arm reconnaissances over the Norwegian coast confirmed that two of the three tanks of the oil depot at Dolvik attacked by naval bombers Aug. 8 were destroyed, while a third tank and a pipe line were severely damaged.

The Admiralty also announced that its dive bombers attacked a German military camp near Bergen in Norway yesterday and damaged two German supply ships along the Norwegian coast.

The text of an Admiralty Communique:

"Yesterday Skuas attacked an enemy supply ship of about 2,500 tons in Haugesund and scored a hit. South of Bergen a tanker of about 2,500 tons was attacked and damaged by near misses.

"A German military hut camp in the Bergen area was also attacked with bombs, and hits were obtained. Three of the huts were completely destroyed and others were damaged.

IDEAL WEATHER AIDS SUB ATTACKS

Admiralty Reports 84,575 Tons Shipping Lost in Week Ending Sept. 1st

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—The Germans and Italians destroyed 84,575 tons of British and neutral merchant shipping in the week ending Sept. 1, the British Admiralty reported today, bringing the total for the first year of the war to 2,771,333 tons.

The year's losses were listed as, British, 1,539,196 tons; Allies, 462,924 tons, and Neutrals, 769,213 tons.

The Admiralty said German and Italian shipping losses from the start of the war to Sept. 9 totalled 1,236,000 tons.

The losses for the last week reported—11 British, five Allied and a neutral ships—were said to be in excess of the average weekly loss since the war began, but below the average weekly loss since May 27, when the fighting was intensified.

The high tonnage of losses for the week was attributed by the Admiralty to "ideal weather for submarine attack."

Despite the losses, the Admiralty declared, the British merchant fleet now in commission is greater than at the outset of the war.

The report added that, in addition to German and Italian losses inflicted, the Allies during the year sank 33,000 tons of shipping which had been neutral but was seized or brought under control of Italy or Germany.

Splendid Muskie Caught Second Time

One of the unique oddities of angling was seen in a Peterborough County lake over the weekend when an Ohio angler and his wife hooked the same "muskie" twice, before landing the finny beauty.

Bud Fink, burly Youngstown, Ohio, policeman and his wife were the anglers in question. Mrs. Fink hooked one of the sleek black fighters of the northern lakes and played the fish like a veteran, but "Mister Muskie" broke water and at the same time broke Mrs. Fink's line fully two feet from her plug and got away.

Quite disappointed in their angling luck, as they had never landed a maskinonge, Mr. Fink began to cast over the same spot and making a strike, played it with caution, subsequently landing a fine 15 pound "muskie." Much to their surprise Mr. and Mrs. Fink found the latter's plug hooked into the side of the fish's mouth, it having been the same black beauty that broke Mrs. Fink's line a few seconds before, strange as it may seem.

C. W. L. Holds Regular Meeting

An interesting meeting last evening opened the fall activities of the Catholic Women's League. The President, Mrs. E. J. Mrs. J. Ten blankets had been donated to the Red Cross and had been received from the following C.W.L., 2; Miss K. Dolan, 2; Mr. P. Hayes, 2; Mrs. W. Belair, one Mrs. W. Davidson, one; Mrs. P. Fitzpatrick, one; Mrs. Hudon and the Misses McLellan, one. Tiny workers, Mary Black, Mary and Catherine Grant had contributed $2.75 to the Red Cross, made by sale of lemonade. It was arranged that Red Cross workers will be invited to a sewing meeting and social evening every two weeks.

Mrs. R. A. Flynn, convener of the committee in charge of the Graduation Dance, announced plans for this event.

In co-operation with the National Executive which has promised the gift of $25,000 to the Canadian Government for war purposes, the League will hold two bingos next week to raise their quota of this patriotic fund. The door prize was won by Miss Dorian.

The members were privileged to hear an inspiring address by Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, which was an interesting feature of last evening's meeting.

An Open Letter to the Public From Girl Guides of Belleville

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Public:

A short time ago, the country sent out an appeal to us to help collect all waste material which in the ordinary course of events would be destroyed. As you are now probably aware, practically everything is needed to help Canada and the Empire win the war. We sent you notice through the newspapers a few weeks ago saying that we would call and collect anything you may have saved for the Empire.

Now, that time is close at hand. We hope you have saved such things as rags, cast iron, steel, aluminum, copper, brass, even the brass bottoms from electric light bulbs, paper and magazines, tinfoil, leadfoil, mattresses, tires, old inner tubes, and tooth paste and shaving cream tubes.

All these articles may not appear to you to be of any value, but they are of vital importance to the country's war needs. Canada wants all of them and in as large quantities as can be secured.

On Saturday, October 5th, Girl Guide Troop Number 2 will collect any of these articles you may have saved. But in order to facilitate our work, and assist us in a generous way in making the collection, you may take whatever you have saved to the BELLEVILLE METAL AND WASTE COMPANY, CHURCH STREET.

Those unable to take their articles to this place are asked to telephone 737, 771 or 488. Please do not ask for any person in particular, just leave your address and we will see that your waste material is collected.

There is one important fact that we would ask you to take into consideration. PLEASE DO NOT INCLUDE TIN CANS IN YOUR COLLECTION AT THIS TIME. THEY ARE BULKY AND WOULD TAKE UP TOO MUCH VALUABLE SPACE AT THE PRESENT. There will, in all probability, be a call for tin later on. At that time you will be informed and the necessary arrangements made.

REMEMBER, SATURDAY OCTOBER 5th, IS THE DAY OF THE FIRST COLLECTION.

So dear Mr. and Mrs. Public, if you have not already done so, will you kindly save ALL your maste material as outlined in the list above, and have it ready for us when we call.

The need is urgent. We all must bend our shoulders to the wheel, so that victory will eventually come to our brave soldiers, sailors and airmen, who are doing so much in keeping the enemy from our shores and homes.

It is the least we can do to help them and the Empire. It is up to us to do our "bit" and this is one way in which we can show our willingness to back up with all our efforts, the resolution of Britain to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion.

We are doing our part. Will you do yours? We hope you will be nice to us when we call, as we will be to you. We will help you all we can, and we are sure that if you co-operate with us to the fullest extent, Belleville will be proud of this phase of her efforts in helping Canada win the war.

Sincerely yours,
THE GIRL GUIDES OF BELLEVILLE.

Bomb Splinters From Battle of Britain

(By Louis V. Hunter Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Air raids sometimes bear mixed blessings. J. Cooper, 70-year-old Londoner, was dozing on a sofa when a bomb blew him off it and buried him under debris.

"I lost by collar, but it's a funny thing, I got back my hearing," he said afterwards. "Deaf as a post I was before this raid."

A woman in whose home in the northwest of England all the windows were shattered during a raid surveyed a curious crowd outside the building and suddenly sallied out to confront them with a box bearing an appeal to "buy a Spitfire."

Mrs. Emma Edmead, 52, of East-End Stepney suffered a fatal skull fracture when she tripped over a chair hurrying into her backyard shelter after hearing gunfire.

"It will take more than this to frighten me," an aged Midlands lady told officials who insisted she should move from her damaged home. "I am not going to be turned out of my house in the middle of the night by the Jerries."

Enemy bombs are promoting Britain's war savings crusade, designed to reduce hoarding. The day after a Nazi bomb caused damage in a street of small houses in one town no less than 600 pounds ($2,670) was deposited in a savings bank by residents of the street.

John Burwood, veteran of the Dunkirk evacuation and home on leave in London, was killed during an air raid. His parents and another person also were killed when a bomb made a direct hit on their shelter.

When Skipper Ebenezerson and his trawler crew reached Grimsby and heard of the Mayor's Spitfire fund they gave 10 boxes of fish which were auctioned to bolster the collections. A crater made by a Nazi bomb on a football pitch in the area is helping, too. People paid to see it and the money went to the fighter fund.

Repeated air raids have made pigeons in London's Trafalgar Square raid-conscious. Observers report that on the first notes of sirens the pigeons rise and fly away. And they don't come back until the "all clear."

When some Londoners retire for the night they leave their shoes or slippers with the soles uppermost, and there is a reason for it. If there is a sudden explosion and flying glass the footwear will not (or should not) be filled with bits of glass.

Nine-year-old Michael Glenny had a lucky escape when a heavy bomb damaged his home in the London area. Michael had been placed for safety on a mattress under the staircase. When the bomb fell the mattress apparently curled up and protected the boy. Discovered afterwards still on the mattress and covered with debris in the crater.

Work on the paving on the one and a half mile stretch of road extending from the end of the present pavement on the Belleville-Madoc highway to Ivanhoe is being rushed to completion, according to officials of the County Road Superintendent's office.

If appropriations permit, the paving will be continued during the next few years until the entire highway is paved. A new surfacing is also being given the Stirling-Foxboro road, while other repairs in various parts of the county are being rushed before the cooler weather sets in.

R. A. Elliott, Deloro, Gets 24 1-2-lb. Muskie

Marmora, (Special)—A real piscatorial triumph was scored by R. A. Elliott, general manager of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited, when fishing for bass at Crowe Lake on Saturday afternoon with Tommy Paranuik. The prize was a maskinonge which tipped the scale at 24 1-2 pounds. The largest taken out of the lake for several seasons. It was caught off Cedar Point about 4.30 p.m. with a herring on a small hook.

As his enthusiasm for baseball eventually resulted in his becoming a president of the O.B.A.A. so now as a persevering disciple of Izaak Walton for the past quarter of a century his prowess as an angler will be considered by his many sporting friends to be top notch.

Belleville Subscriber To Loan Refuses to Buy Other Investment

Residents of this city with those of other parts of the Dominion are subscribing to the second Dominion War Loan in a generous measure.

Typical of Bellevillian's response is the instance of a lady resident of this city who prefers to remain anonymous who had an insurance policy fall due today. She was offered 6 per cent interest in another investment. She refused, and invested her money in the War Loan at one-half the interest she could have received elsewhere. "My husband is unable to go overseas, and this is one way in which we can do our share in helping Canada's war effort", she said.

American Consulate At Kingston Will Close at End of Sept.

Since the American Consulate at Kingston will probably be closed toward the end of September, those persons residing in this district who desire to obtain visas or border crossing cards, should apply at the consulate as soon as possible, according to N. B. Chipman, American Consul at Kingston.

Canadian citizens or British subjects domiciled in Canada who desire to visit the United States and remain not more than 29 days, may obtain border crossing cards if they are in possession of a valid Canadian or British passport and a letter from a responsible person or institution identifying them as residents of Canada.

No photographs are necessary for border crossing cards. Persons who desire to visit the United States for a period longer than 29 days on any one visit should obtain visas which require in addition to the passports and letters of identification, three photographs.

In this connection it should be noted that upon the closing of the consulate, the border crossing cards may be obtained, as at present, at any United States Immigration office. Although border crossing cards may be obtained at these offices, visas must be secured at a permanent American consulate.

Red Cross Workers Prepare for Campaign

Local Red Cross workers are busily engaged in preparation for the National Red Cross Campaign which is scheduled to begin on Monday, September, 23rd. President of the local branch, I. G. Hefkey, and Campaign Chairman, Howard Clarke have been granted the use of an office in the Chamber of Commerce building and this morning saw initial plans for the district campaign under way.

The national objective of the Red Cross in their forthcoming campaign has been set at $5,000,000, but the local objective has yet to be determined. Whatever the figure set for this district, however, Red Cross officials are confident of reaching their objective.

TURKEY GOBBLER IN UNUSUAL ROLE

Lack of interest in maternal duties prompted a Trenton turkey gobbler, the property of a man named Shofiler, to take over the business of raising the family himself. When his spouse refused to sit on seven eggs, the gobbler promptly accepted the duties and succeeded in bringing forth four young turkeys.

Each night the little fellows seek warmth beneath outspread wings of Papa who guards them as jealously as any hen turkey would. Meanwhile Mama turkey walks around the place apparently oblivious to the family brood.

History of Rock of Gibraltar Recounted by Dr. R. Anderson

Dramatic Word - Pattern Drawn Around Famous British Fort in Mediterranean

THANKED BY CLUB

The pages of history unfolded in colorful fashion before members of the Belleville Rotary Club at their regular Monday luncheon, when Dr. Reg. Anderson, one of Belleville's younger physicians wove a dramatic word-pattern in an address that had England of the early 18th century and the famous Rock of Gibraltar as the central figures.

The speaker, with an oratory of a short staccato style indicative of the experienced narrator, delved deep into the pages of time, interspersing a colorful continuity of events with digressive descriptions of the various locales and personalities incidental to his address.

He described the rejection of Gibraltar by the early Romans, Venetians and Vikings, as a strategical point. He told of the capture of the stronghold by Tarak, the Moor who spent 13 years fortifying the stronghold and whose fortifications remain in part today.

Describes England

Here, Dr. Anderson digressed temporarily with a vivid description of England from the time of the Anglo-Saxons to the reign of Queen Anne. Outlining conditions in ancient Britain he brought his listeners to the gay but hectic times of the early 17th century. He told them of British expansion on the continent, in the Americas and India, and of the Spanish War of Succession, which culminated in the Treaty of Utrecht after a brilliant series of victories by the famous Duke of Marlboro, progenitor of Britain's present leader, Winston Churchill.

Describing the England of this period, Dr. Anderson said that drinking was the most serious occupation of the nation. There was harsh treatment of the poor. People were poorly fed. Farmers made three pounds a year and were well off. Smoking was universal, and snuff-taking was considered a social grace. Quarrels were frequent with the gentry settling their arguments at the sword's point. The poorer classes fought with their bare fists and from this originated the manly art of pugilism.

The highlights of sport included dogfights, with an occasional mad bull "covered with fireworks, to whose tail was attached three cats" performing for the crowd.

"Warfare", he said, "was conducted by small professional armies who fought but six months of the year. The remainder of the time was taken up with drills, manoeuvres, and repletion of ranks caused by desertion, sickness and casualties. Deaths in battle were the least of the casualties that ensued. In fact, the speaker pointed out, battle losses were extremely light at this period. At the famous Battle of Blenheim, only 672 soldiers were killed. During the entire war year of 1794 only 1,879 met death in Britain's armed forces.

Turning again to Gibraltar, Dr. Anderson told the clubmen of the assembling of a combined Dutch and English fleet in the famous straits. Britain's object in taking the rock was not so much of a military or naval matter but rather to open up the channels of trade to the east shut off by the French-Spanish forces.

Ordered to Attack

After long argument, Sir George Cook, the British Admiral ordered his naval and political enemy, Admiral Byng to attack the rock. After two days "dickering", with the Spanish commander, the latter refused to surrender, and 1700 British marines, and twenty ships opened fire. In one day the vessels poured 30,000 rounds into the fortress against a Spanish force of 56 men, a few hundred poorly-trained militia and 100 guns without crews. The walls shattered, English sailors carrying torches to light their flintlocks swarmed through the breach. And here occurred the only casualties of the battle. A sailor inadvertently set fire to a powder magazine and the resulting explosion caused the death of 60 of his comrades.

Withstands Long Siege

For years afterwards, Dr. Anderson said, all efforts of the Spanish and French to recapture the stronghold failed. One of the most notable sieges in British history took place from 1779-1783 when the brilliant Sir George Elliot weathered a terrific three years storm of battle.

From that time until the present the history of the Rock has been dull. Today it is honeycombed with gun emplacements, magazines, storehouses etc., and is considered impregnable even to the Fascist dictators, he concluded. The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Owen Herity and club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian J. F. Pickering. President Percy McGuire was in the chair with the piano-less singing led by Sandy Burrows and Jack Deacon. Rotarian Jack Guthridge collected the fines.

DOWNTOWN CHURCH STRUCK TWICE

Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP)—The adage that lightning never hits twice in the same place was disproved here Sunday when a downtown church was struck twice within one minute. No one was injured when the bolts hit just after the service ended.

"I've never been so proud!"

"Doggone it!" said Mr. Picobac. He put down his magazine and blew his nose.

"Yes?" prompted his wife softly.

"Doggone it!" said Mr. Picobac again. "I've been reading about what our boys have done and are doing in the air, and on the sea, and on foot too . . . yes, and our girls as well. I'm . . ." He got to his feet as if to find words. "I've never been so proud!" he burst out at last. His wife went on knitting steadily. "Yes", she said, "I know how you feel. You'd like to be over there. But you did your bit in the last war, and you're working and paying to help in this one. So sit down for a mild, cool, sweet smoke. It will help you to carry on tomorrow."

When you smack your lips and say...

THERE'S A FLAVOUR I REALLY GO FOR

You'll get from your breakfast all the oomph you want!

KELLOGG'S FIRST FOR FLAVOUR say housewives and experts, too! In a recent survey across Canada—housewives reported their families preferred Kellogg's 5 to 1 as against any other brand of corn flakes mentioned. And the trained expert palates of tea-tasters, coffee-blenders, chefs, say the same. For instance, Mr. J. M. Cochrane, Superintendent of Hunts Limited, famous for their fine confectionaries, reports: "The conditions were strict, the test impartial, but there was no doubt of the result: Kellogg's rated first for flavour." Take a tip from the experts. And when you eat out, ask for Kellogg's in the wax-wrapped individual package.

If YOUR breakfast doesn't make your mouth water, it can't give you the extra energy you need. So insist on Kellogg's Corn Flakes, the breakfast that does these three vital things.

First, the very thought of the glorious flavour rouses your sleepy appetite. Second, they are jam-packed with essential energizing "carbohydrates." Third, they help keep you going through hours of work.

So get several packages right away. Proven first in flavour, Kellogg's take only 30 seconds to prepare. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

CORN FLAKES

SO ECONOMICAL! Only a few pennies to give the whole family breakfast or supper. Have you tried Canada's favourite cereal in the new family-size package? Ask your grocer.

Making Telephones for Canada

First telephone shop, Craig Street, Montreal. On the right is the present Northern Electric Plant.

• Soon after this Company began operating in 1880, it established its own manufacturing department. But costs were high, due to the limited market for telephone equipment.

So it was a logical step to establish a separate company to make not only telephone apparatus but related material to round out production. Out of it came in due time the Northern Electric Company, which now acts as manufacturer and supplier for the Bell Telephone Company and for other telephone systems in Canada.

An adequate supply, for day-to-day use and for emergencies, of standard telephone equipment is vital to telephone service. Telephone apparatus of every kind, manufactured in Canada by the Northern Electric, has made possible the co-ordination of construction and operating methods in all parts of the Dominion. The economies effected in production and distribution have contributed to the low cost of telephone service here.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

"REALLY COURTEOUS AND FRIENDLY"

"Gentlemen Unafraid" someone once dubbed the members of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Unnecessary eulogy perhaps, for the gallant men who wear the famous blue-grey of His Majesy's Air Force have proven themselves unafraid at all times, and gentlemen just as often.

Perhaps a striking example of the latter occurred on Sunday at the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force when two American tourists, unaware of the regulations of a war-time Canada regarding the photographing of air, naval and military bases, were detained and questioned regarding their identity and motives in using a motion picture camera to take pictures of the base. Taken to the Administration Building by courteous Air Force officers, the frightened tourists were immediately placed at ease by the tact, and gentlemanly conduct of the airmen. Within a few minutes they were entirely normal. Their fright and awe at the stalwart uniformed men who smilingly queried them as to how they were enjoying their holiday disappeared in the aura of congeniality in which they found themselves. They soon realized they were in Canada, a free democratic nation. How different would have been their reception had they been detained by uniformed Nazi troops. Explanations would have been laughed at. Their tourist credentials would have been confiscated "for further investigation." They would have been subjected to personal inconveniences, if not worse, that would have made them cringe in fright. And in all probability an undetermined stay in a concentration camp would have stared them in the face.

But this is Canada, and they were given courteous, friendly treatment. True they had broken the rules of the land, but their excuse was understandable and accepted in its true light, by officers cognizant with facts of their position. And in all probability those tourists left Canada with a different conception of the R.C.A.F. It meant to them "Really Courteous and Friendly."

THE NAZIS SAY GRYNZPAN IS NOW IN PRISON

A dispatch from Berlin states that Herschel Grynzpan has been sentenced to twenty years imprisonment by a French court "under German supervision."

Maybe we do the Hun an injustice but considering the fate of others whose crimes were not nearly so great we would be greatly surprised if Grynzpan still lives. It is not like the Nazis to deal leniently with any one, much less a Jew, who has shot and killed one of their precious gang.

The world will not forget soon the horrors of ruthlessness that the Nazis carried out after Grynzpan shot Vom Rath, a secretary at the German embassy in Paris. They made it an excuse to smash the Jews in the Reich. Stores were looted and demolished, synagogues were burned and to cap it all a tremendous fine equivalent to four hundred million dollars was levied on the Jews of Germany.

Now the Nazis expect the world to believe Grynzpan is serving twenty years in prison. They want the world to believe what nice lenient fellows they are but it is going to take more than the report of the imprisonment of a Jewish assassin to convince the world of their sincerity.

NO RELIEF FOR THOSE NOT WILLING TO WORK

No doubt many readers were surprised by the statement of Mayor Thompson which appeared in Monday's issue of this paper in which he was quoted as saying that only fifty per cent of people on relief in the city during the winter found time to cultivate the garden plots assigned to their use. The others, he said, would not receive any help during the coming season because of an edict handed down by the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs.

It is difficult to understand the reason for such neglect although there are always two sides to every argument and possibly these people may have some logical reason for not doing what was expected. However, if it is proven that laziness was the only excuse then we are quite in sympathy with the Department's ruling and believe it should be lived up to.

The raising of enough garden vegetables for winter use is not a hardship for anyone who is able to work even if only for part time. For those who have plenty of time it should be a bit of pleasant work by helping to put in hours that must be rather tedious otherwise. To many people, their garden is one of the chief joys of life whether rich or poor.

Those people who are not willing to help themselves by co-operating with the city should be dealt with in the way that they deserve and no one need waste sympathy on them if they have to suffer by reason of their own neglect.

OIL CANS DANGEROUS FOR FOOD

It has been brought to the attention of the Dominion Department of Agriculture that many persons are making use of oil cans for the canning of food.

The use of oil cans for food is considered to be very dangerous practice since they are made of Terne plate, a plating which is almost wholly lead, and very small amounts of lead are poisonous.

Cans made expressly for foods are entirely different and can be bought at a nominal price from hardware stores and mail order houses. Years of research have gone into the manufacture of cans for canning food, with the result that the inside plating is lead free. This is done to make it impossible for foods to become contaminated with lead, and no cans should be used for fruits, vegetables, meats or fish other than those made as food cans.

Oil cans are not food cans and should not be used for any food product.—Brockville Recorder.

London. — British ships on the contraband control have effectively stopped any trickle of oil reaching Germany and Italy from overseas.

So there is no mention of petroleum products in the list of goods seized by the contraband authorities last month.

The Ministry of Economic Warfare announced last night that 45,300 tons of contraband goods were seized last month—34,600 tons from neutral ships on their way principally to Italian ports, and 10,700 tons from Italian ships.

Among the cargoes were 8,000 tons of Phosphates, 6,800 tons of manganese ore, 4,500 tons of manioc (from which tapioca is made), 3,700 tons of ground nuts, 3,300 tons of coffee, and 1,500 tons of mica.

While Axis supplies are being diminished in this way, Britain's mercantile marine is actually greater now than before the war.

More Ships Than Ever.

Empire merchant fleets totalled more than 21,000,000 tons at the start of the war.

The figure is greater now in spite of U-boat attacks and losses from mines, because of new building, flag transfers, and seizures from the enemy.

Less than half our merchant fleet, however, is now being used to carry general cargoes. Hundreds of British and Empire ships are being used for troop-carrying, convoy duty as armed merchantmen, and as minesweepers.

But Allied ships have come to the rescue. The Ministry of Shipping discloses that between 3,500,000 and 4,000,000 tons of Norwegian shipping, more than 2,000,000 tons of Dutch, about 50,000 tons of Belgian and Polish, and 800,000 tons of French and Danish shipping are on charter to the British authorities, bringing food and supplies to this country. — London Exchange.

The Daily Life of a Housewife in Germany

(United Correspondents)
(M-15)

Women of education, experience of the world and some political training were implacably hostile to National Socialism, but unhappily most women in Germany were altogether unversed in politics. No politician had ever taken much notice of them, or promised to every German woman a husband and a home of her own. Millions of German women and millions of girls whose highest ambition was to become a housewife, went wild over Hitler, to the misfortune of their own and other countries and of themselves as well. How many German women are to-day cursing Hitler with the same hysteria, after seven years of unfulfilled promises?

While Hitler apparently stands at the very zenith of his power, the German housewife is being plunged daily into ever lower depths of despair. The small housewife in Germany is in the habit of catering for the coming week on Sundays. This is now a very difficult matter, for she never knows whether the so-called "unrationed" food will be available in the shops. Fruit and vegetables are often unobtainable for days on end (especially in industrial areas) and if there are any — brought perhaps by air from Italy — they are so expensive that only the very rich can afford a little salad, a lemon or a pound of apples. There is a shortage of market-gardeners in Germany. The Nazis have turned them into factory and munition workers.

Meat is allowed at two meals in the week. For Monday our small housewife arranges something quite simple, perhaps potato balls with mushroom sauce. Her food card promises seven pounds of potatoes per head per week, but on Mondays the dealer is often out of potatoes. His customer has to swallow her disappointment and alter the menu. Flour being available, she takes an egg (one egg is allowed each person per week) and some of the new substitute butter, and makes her rissoles.

Her husband, coming home hungry after a ten-hour shift at the works, complains of the smell. His wife defends her rissoles, though she, too, can hardly endure the fishy smell of the new "butter". She is then sorry for having argued with her husband over the rissoles, since men nowadays need very careful handling. Husbands of fifty may get a divorce from their elderly wives and go off with a young girl — in or out of wedlock. The Fuehrer's deputy, Rudolf Hess, said recently that the family was an artificial institution, "the work of man and not of nature".

Tuesday in many parts of Germany is "washing-day". Soap is very scarce and the synthetic article is a hard block which yields no lather. The washing must be done very quickly, for the new materials, consisting largely of celluloid, cannot withstand moisture. Even clothing of "good quality"—say, a pair of pants costing six marks—often falls literally to pieces at the first washing.

Queues outside the shops are forbidden, so housewives walk round and round the block in which the dealer has his shop, waiting for a chance of pushing their way in or catching him alone. Despite all prohibitions women still resort to bribery to obtain a little milk or a few vegetables for their children. Shortage of these essential foodstuffs has brought much ill-health. In Aachen 60% of the school children suffer from diseases of the stomach and intestines; in Cologne 81% of children have dental caries. Even before the war there was hardly one properly fed child in Germany.

On Wednesday housewives are told that there is only half a week's ration of potatoes but that, instead, there are tickets for substitute bread. Tickets only, be it noted: it is for the customer to hunt round for the bread. Often she has no time to go shopping.

Perhaps Thursday is one of the many "collecting-days" in her street. Anyone not at home on one of these days in suspected of being "unpatriotic". Moreover, the S. A. men or members of the "Hitler Youth" who come round collecting bones, metal, clothing, linen or shoes, often force their way into locked houses. The housewife prefers to be at home when her boxes are ransacked for "unnecessary luxuries". She wants to defend her husband's claim to two pairs of boots.

Buying clothes is in itself quite a business. A book was published lately in Berlin called "Punkt fuer Punkt" (Point for Point" by H. Eggebrecht, published by K. Curtius. It is a guide for housewives who want to buy clothes or linen. These articles are rationed. A clothes card allows each person one hundred "points" in the year. A pair of stockings is 4 points, a shirt 10, a jumper 25 and a costume 45 points. Since only 3 metres of material are allowed for each dress, tall or stout women have to wear very short skirts. A woman who receives news that her husband or son has been killed in action, must produce the death certificate before she can order mourning. But mourning is strongly discountenanced by the Party.

When the war began, nearly seven million German women were engaged in industrial or agricultural work. These women have only one free day in a fortnight "to look after their homes", but on the other hand, they are given household help on one day in the week. Under the heading of "neighbourly help", our housewife is ordered to work once a week—perhaps on Fridays—in the houses of women factory-workers. But even when there is good will, this leads to all kinds of trouble. The factory worker, for instance, may have forgotten to leave out her baby's birth certificate, without which the neighbour cannot procure the child's milk. Trouble and recriminations are sure to follow.

Mothers like to spend Saturdays and Sundays with their children, but a mother who attempts to discourage her child from attending Hitler Youth parades risks losing the guardianship of her child and may even go to gaol. So on Sunday she has to sit alone at home—while her boy attends a special "Hitler Youth march"—and occupy herself with "ersatz" needlework. She tries to conjure a new pair of slippers for her husband out of an old bicycle tyre and an old felt hat. Darning wool she gets by unpicking a sock, or unravelling an old garment thread by thread.

Monday's post may bring relief from household cares. The woman may be ordered to report for factory work in a far-off town. She ceases then to be a housewife with a husband and children to look after; she becomes a number in one of the many labour camps, where male and female slaves are not even allowed sufficient sleep to maintain their health and strength, and have to do exactly as they are told.

The occupation of Poland gave Germany neither bread nor potatoes; instead it gave her half a million cheap workers and many millions of hungry mouths.

Within the next few months Denmark's three million pigs will have to be slaughtered, for fodder for Danish livestock came from overseas, from South America and China. Danish margarine factories will be closing for lack of oil. Much land in Holland has been made useless for this year's harvest by flooding. Belgium is an industrial country which imported its food, and Germany has neither the money nor the ships to secure these imports. In the Balkan countries the male population is manning the frontiers, instead of sowing and reaping. The position may be eased temporarily for the German housewife by the occupation of so much of France, but the future for the population in all the occupied countries can hardly bear thinking about. Even food produced by Germany herself cannot be properly distributed, because the roads and railways are already in sore need of repair. Hitler promised German women the Kingdom of Heaven on earth; he promised a "living space" for all Germans. What he has provided is "dying space" for all, for Germans and non-Germans, for men as well as women.

"Only a Miracle Can Save Germany"

By WALTER TSCHUPPIK

(United Correspondents)
(B-14)

At a moment when Hitler has conquered France and made himself master of the whole continent of Europe, the title of this article may sound a queer paradox. Nevertheless, a spectre is raising its head over Europe, foreshadowing a catastrophe which probably no human efforts can avert. Famine threatens, on a scale exceeding anything known in European history. Public attention has recently been drawn to this impending disaster by the account of an American journalist, Mr. Henry Albert Phillips, published in "The American Mercury".

Mr. Phillips, after a tour of Central Europe and the Balkans, has come to the conclusion that Europe "faces famine". "Only a miracle can rescue the Third Reich from a repitition of the starvation of 1918." This view, based on visits to Turkey, Greece, Bulgaria, Jugoslavia, Hungary, Rumania, Poland and Germany, is confirmed by most reports received from the continent, which prophesy famine, more especially by reason of the very gloomy prospects for the 1940 harvest. An abnormally severe winter destroyed early sowings, and this was followed by serious floods in many of the main grain-producing districts of the Continent.

Moreover, Central Europe, even in good years, has always needed to import wheat, cattle foods and oil-cake. But in 1940 the harvest in the wheat-producing countries of Central and Southern Europe will barely suffice for their own requirements. The wheat crop is reckoned at 15-20% below the average, the barley and rye crop, in some parts, at 40% below average.

Thirty million men in Europe are now under arms and, assuming that it takes two workers to feed and equip each soldier, ninety millions are engaged in the destructive work of war. The Balkan neutrals have been fully mobilized for many months, and much of the land in Rumania, Jugoslavia, Hungary and Bulgaria is either poorly cultivated, or not cultivated at all. In Poland the war has wrought havoc and destruction. Thousands of peasants have been driven from their homes, there is a scarcity of seed, machinery, petrol and horses. Large and fertile areas in Holland were laid waste by the flooding resorted to as a defence against German invasion, while much of Belgium was trampled under foot in fierce fighting. Bread tickets were introduced in all continental countries as soon as the war began, in the expectation that grain reserves would have to be drawn on.

At the outbreak of war the German government announced that it had a grain reserve of 8,600,000 tons, a surplus sufficient for a short war in which Germany hoped to defeat Britain and obtain access to overseas supplies. For Germany's normal consumption is 25,000,000 tons a year and, even in good seasons, she is only 80% self-sufficient in foodstuffs. From Russia, whence Germany hoped to obtain cereals, comes news of an even graver shortage of bread; Rumania will only be able to supply next winter a small fraction of the cereals she normally sends to Germany. Hungary, Jugoslavia and Bulgaria will have to exert their utmost efforts to avert a famine. In the Protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia and in Slovakia a very bad harvest is expected. The severe winter and ensuing floods did special damage in the neighbourhood of the Danube. Nor are this year's prospects more favourable in the comparative fertile parts of South Germany.

Many European countries have introduced meatless days. 1941 will see breadless days as well. In Italy only 20% of the soil is cultivable. Many towns and villages in Spain are without milk and bread for days at a time. Even France was long ago compelled to introduce meatless days. Many countries are crowded with refugees, even countries like Rumania, Hungary and Jugoslavia, which are still spared the war. The Baltic states are obliged to feed the Russian armies which now occupy their soil. And everywhere transport difficulties are multiplying.

No brilliant victories, no superiority in monster tanks, in guns or in aircraft will save Germany in 1941 from the enemy who will bring her to her knees. That enemy is starvation.

Famine is threatening the whole continent and fear of hunger increases the danger that will one day fall upon Germany like an avalanche. All who can, are laying in stores despite every prohibition.

In the countries that Hitler has overrun, in rich countries like Denmark and Holland, the food supply is already breaking down. Denmark, where the standard of living was luxurious, is short of sugar, tea, coffee and margarine. And in 1941 there will be no bread to replace the scarcity of other foodstuffs.

Hitler's efforts to subdue England quickly are doubtless dictated by fear of losing this race with starvation. He knows perfectly well that no continental conquests are of any avail so long as the British blockade cuts off Germany's supplies from overseas. American wheat could alone save Germany.

Britain, on the other hand, protected by the Royal Navy, can obtain ample foodstuffs from all over the world. She is wholly independent of the continent in this respect and has no cause to fear starvation. Provided Britain holds out till the spring of 1941, Hitler is lost.

In addition to the fine addresses presented by Rev. W. H. Welsford Cliff and Rev. K. J. Beaton two outstanding guest speakers interesting reports given address form by committee conveners were given a place on the agenda for the day. Outstanding in this respect a paper presented by Rev. E. M. Cooke on the present labor situation in the Dominion. "While the government departments are to be commended for their efforts in the recent past on this important matter there was still much worthy of criticism," declared the speaker. The paper was given into the hands of the committee on Social Service and Evangelism for further study.

Well over a hundred ministers and laymen were present, and were guests at the splendid dinner provided by the ladies of Selby United Church.

Church Activities

The Empire day of prayer was observed in Stirling churches on Sunday last. Special interest was shown in the morning service at St. Paul's United Church when a special speaker, Dr. Charles Endicott, Acting Secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee, recognized as one of the church's foremost leaders, has by former visits to Stirling, created a large number of friends in the district and his visits and inspiring messages are looked forward to with great interest. Conducting service in the evening, Rev. A. M. Laverty selected as his subject: "Gone With the Wind," a timely subject that was presented in a manner for which Mr. Laverty is becoming well known. At St. John Anglican Church Communion service was conducted by the rector in conjunction with the special prayer service in the morning.

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Rev. MacDonald of Roslin Presbyterian Church ministered in the absence of Rev. W. H. V. Walker who conducted anniversary services at Roslin. In both churches the purpose of the Empire day of prayer was the paramount theme of inspiration and special music added greatly to the worship periods. Mrs. W. H. V. Walker assisted in the musical part of the services at Roslin with vocal solo contributions.

St. Paul's W.A.

The members of St. Paul's Women's Association gathered on Tuesday, Sept. 6, for their monthly meeting. Mrs. F. N. McKee presided over the entire program which began with the singing of the theme song and Lord's prayer. Mrs. Nora Wescott gave the secretary's report of the last meeting and also reported several communications received. Mrs. R. B. Duffin gave the financial report and Mrs. C. F. Linn, convenor of the parsonage committee, also gave a report of interest. Mrs. S. Williams, Mrs. A. Gordinier and Mrs. C. Macklin were appointed visiting committee for September. An invitation to attend the opening meeting of the Frankford W. A. was accepted. A brief devotional period at this time included the use of a hymn prayer by the president and scripture reading by Mrs. Duffin. A pleasing vocal duet featuring Mrs. J. J. Wilson and Mrs. H. Potter was very much enjoyed. Mrs. M. Pidgeon also contributed a musical number to the program in an instrumental solo. The guest speaker of the day was Rev. A. M. Laverty who spoke on the subject "The Church." The program climaxed with the singing of the National Anthem and luncheon was served. The gratitude of the ladies was expressed briefly by Mrs. C. F. Linn to the speaker and also the hostess, Mrs. F. N. McKee and the ladies of the committee in charge of the fine entertainment of the afternoon. The committee included Mrs. F. N. McKee, Mrs. W. Fitchett, Mrs. W. Hagerman, Mrs. R. B. Duffin, Mrs. Don Williams, Mrs. Harry Potter, Mrs. A. E. Good and Mrs. N. E. Eggleton.

FAMILIAR FIGURE IN ATHLETICS DIES IN NORANDA

Roland J. Rorke, Picton, Well Known in Business and Athletic Circles in Prince Edward County

FORMER COUNCILLOR

Picton, Ont., Sept. 10 (Special)—Announcement of the death of Roland J. Rorke, well-known Prince Edward County athlete and former councillor, in a Noranda, Quebec hospital early today was received by his family shortly after eight o'clock this morning. According to details, the deceased, who was in his late thirties, was in hospital but a short time prior to his demise. His wife, the former M. Delaney, Toronto, was enroute to his bedside, when she received the news of his death while stopping at Belleville.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. James Rorke, Picton merchant, the late "Roly" as he was familiarly known to his friends gained outstanding prominence on the baseball diamond and hockey rinks of Eastern and Northern Ontario. He was a player-coach of the Picton baseball nine that went through to the Ontario Intermediate "A" finals in 1933, when they lost out to the famous "Lefty" Goldsmith and his Southampton crew.

Outstanding Athlete

He was a familiar figure in athletic circles of this part of Ontario especially in Kingston, Belleville and Napanee. His ability as a player and later as a coach was recognized throughout the district and for a number of years he was in great demand. He coached the Bloomfield hockey squad to two consecutive county hockey championships. He was at one time a member of the Kapuskasing team and was regarded favorably by Northern Ontario Hockey Association officials.

Possessed of a pleasing personality "Roly" was a gentleman both on and off the diamond. His influence was marked upon his playing colleagues and his advice was often sought in the discussion of important problems. He was a prime favorite with the "fans" of not only his home county but with the entire surrounding district.

Former Councillor

For a year he sat on the council of his home town, where his opinions were regarded with respect by his colleagues. A few years ago he went to Noranda, Quebec, where he became associated with a summer hotel. He was a member of St. Gregory's Roman Catholic Church, here, and received his early education in St. John's School and later at Picton Collegiate Institute. TREBLE D.S.O.

The rare distinction of a second bar to the D.S.O. has been awarded, it was announced, to Wing-Commander Basil Edward Embry, leader of two raids on Stavanger.

It was reported last month that Wing-Commander Embry is now a prisoner of war.

The D.S.O. was awarded to him in 1938 for his work in Waziristan, and the first bar was awarded last May. The announcement praises his "high standard of leadership" and states that he "set an example to the other squadrons in his group".—London Exchange.

C. I. O. Voted In as Members Of Labor Congress

Toronto, Sept. 10—(CP)—Initial difficulties past the annual convention of the all-Canadian Congress of Labor moved into its second day today with approximately 30 resolutions submitted by various locals to be reported on by the Resolutions Committee before the convention ends Thursday.

At the opening yesterday, delegates protested against Canadian representatives of the congress of industrial organizations voting themselves the right to participate in the convention.

"This whole thing looks like a blitzkrieg to me," said T. H. Harrison, President of the London National Labor Council. "Here we have a group sitting in to cast votes for their acceptance into this organization."

A. R. Masher, President of the Congress, said the accusations were unfair, adding that "It has been said that C.I.O. delegates are interested in affiliation with the congress only because they were expelled by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada."

"If that were true, I myself would not be here," he added in explaining that the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway employees, of which he is president, had been "kicked out" by the Trades and Labor Congress.

After debate of two hours, the Credentials Committee report was accepted and the C.I.O. admitted to membership.

Little Benny's Note Book

Last night I was reading my new Paul Peppy book and pop was smoking and reading and ma was pushing crooked things straight and straight things crooked, saying, My, ten minutes to 9, in a few minutes it will be time to begin the nightly ordeal of trying to get Benny off to bed.

It's time he learned to march off to bed exclusively under his own steam at the stroke of 9, pop said. Do you think that would prove too big a load for your tender shoulders, Benny? he said, and I said, No sir, G, I bet I've got enough will power for that.

Good, we've all got more or less unpleasant duties to perform in this vail of tears, pop said. When that faithful old clock strikes 9, I expect to see you go off to bed like a man, or at least like a robot, he said.

And he got in back of his book and I looked at the clock and it was only 20 minutes to 9, me thinking, G, 20 minutes, that's more than half of a half an hour.

And I kept on reading Paul Peppy in Alaska and the next thing I knew the clock was striking 9, me thinking, Heck, darn the luck. And I looked at pop and he was still behind his book, and ma didn't say anything, and I said, I wonder what time it is in England now?

Nobody saying, and I said, No matter what time it is there, I'd rather be right here.

And I got up off the floor slow, and nobody said anything, and I sat down on the edge of the sofa, saying, If the sun never set then maybe nobody would ever go to bed unless they were actually sleepy, and maybe that would be the best way.

Are you a man or a jelly fish? pop said, and ma said, Talk is cheep, action is what counts.

Proving they still remembered, and I quick went to bed, proberly feeling better than if I hadn't even tried.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Polite Invitation to Your Son's Girl Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—My son is living in a distant city and wishes to bring a girl friend home with him to spend a week-end soon. I have never met this young woman. Will you please tell me if I should write her and invite her to come?

2.—If I should write her, how should I address her?

H. N.

1.—Yes, you should write this young woman, so that she may properly receive an invitation from the hostess of the home in which she is to be a guest. It is quite all right for your son to suggest the visit to her, as he did, but the direct invitation should come from you. Then you will know that you have done the right thing, and she will feel that she is welcome in your home and that it is convenient for you to have her come.

2.—You address her as Dear Miss Allen, or if you prefer, by the more informal Dear Miss Dorothy Allen.

What Not to Take

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one is invited to stay overnight at a friend's house, is it proper to take one's own washcloth, soap and towel?

Margaret

No. Your hostess will have at hand for you, either in the bath room connected with your room or on a special rack in the family bathroom, or perhaps in the room assigned to you, a washcloth, face-cloth, handtowel, and bathtowel and soap. The supplying of this equipment is taken for granted by a guest, and if the guest brought it with her, the hostess would know that the guest was not accustomed to visiting.

Correct Signatures

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

What is the correct form of signature for a lady to use in writing to her personal maid or to any other servant in her household? Should it be Mrs. Alfred Williams, or Mary Louise Williams, or simply Mrs. Williams?

T.

This kind of letter should be signed:

Very truly yours,
Mary Louise Williams
(Mrs. Alfred Williams)

Bouillon Cup Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Please tell me if it is good form to drink soup from a bouillon cup, and if so, should both hands be used?

2.—When dining with a gentleman, should he sit to my right or left?

Doubtful

1.—First we take a few sips of the soup, with the bouillon spoon or teaspoon, to test the heat of the soup, and then we drink the rest of the soup from the cup, as we would drink tea. And we take up the bouillon scup with the right hand, as we lift the tea cup.

2.—"The lady on the right of the gentleman" is the usual rule.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Do you know what a charming girl means to a man of the slow, quiet type, who is more or less a victim of the well-known inferiority complex? That's my story.

I never had a real girl before I met this one, who has become very dear to me. I took it for granted that she was what is known as a "nice" girl, that is, her reputation was above reproach. Certainly she never did anything in my company to lead me to believe she was anything else.

A relative of mine came to visit me and said that this young lady has a bad reputation. I know she has been perfect when with me and I don't know whether to disregard this gossip and keep on with the young lady, or believe it and drop her.

In Doubt

Dont' you think a girl who has always behaved in a self-respecting way since you've known her has some rights? Is she to be condemned, judged, dropped and her reputation blasted, perhaps, without having her "day in court"?

Ask her as tactfully as possible how long she has known this relative of yours and ask her why the relative is unfriendly. You do not tell me whether it is a man or woman.

One Night Off

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man with whom I've been going "steady" for almost a year now has been an acquaintance of mine for nearly ten years. He tells me that he thinks a great deal of me as a friend, but that he's in love with an ex-girl of his, who is now married and living in another city.

He gets off only one night a week and I let him say where we'll go, as he doesn't care to dance. His sister tells me not to let him make all the decisions, and that I should have something to say about our plans. But if I do, I'm afraid I'll spoil his one evening off.

Can you suggest some place we can go, as I'm tired of movies? How can I get him to change his feelings toward me?

Marge

As the young man has only one night a week off, I think you've very considerate in letting him decide what to do. It shows you are unselfish, and that's a most desirable quality. If you're tired of movies, why not go to a play, concerts, travel talk with pictures. One of my correspondents, whose boy friend doesn't have a car, writes me they enjoy taking long bus rides.

The young man must like you, or he wouldn't spend his one free night a week with you.

Has Practically Proposed To Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I don't like to give anyone the idea that I am a young man being pursued by a girl, but that's just about the size of it. I do like the girl I'm going with, because she's square, a good clean sport, doesn't drink or smoke or go in for petting. But she dwells on the subject of marriage, and has practically proposed to me a number of times. To tell you the truth, I'm scared to death.

Scared Young Man

Better watch your step, or the first thing you know the young lady will have you walking up the church aisle with her. You say you like her, and that she's a good clean sport, etc., so she might make you a very good wife. But if you're not in love, and have no inclination to marry at the present time, why not flee from danger?

Halloway, Ont., Sept. 6th., 1940.

On Tuesday evening, Sept. 3rd, a large number of neighbours and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ray to welcome their son Earle and his bride (nee Beatrice Jones) to their community.

Miss Doris Bunnett read the address and the couple was presented with a beautiful floor lamp.

The groom made a suitable reply and all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

Mary Martin of the Broadway musical comedy stage, well known for her "My Heart Belongs to Daddy number, plays a Hollywood belle now opposite Bing Crosby in "Rhythm On the River," at the Belle.

SOMETHING NEW in leather colors is a bright rosy rust tone. We saw it used for an alligator walking pump and for a large underarm bag and it is ever so smart.

OLD MISERY
Best Pal
Post's Bran Flakes

"I used to be an old misery to Sonny," says Mrs. Bell, "but my system was so sluggish it dragged on me like a ball and chain."

Many people feel that way, and quite often it's only caused by insufficient bulk in the diet.

Post's Bran Flakes help to prevent this trouble. They provide natural bulk in the form of bran to keep the food wastes moving promptly.

"Mum's a real pal nowadays," says Sonny. "She says we must both eat Post's Bran Flakes regularly and boy!... are they a treat!"

HELP keep your family free from the effects of faulty elimination by serving Post's Bran Flakes regularly. They are so appetizing, so wholesome and so convenient. If this does not readily relieve constipation due to insufficient bulk in the diet, consult a physician.

The Proper School Age

There is always some discussion about whether children are being started to school at the right age. Here in Ontario, and in most parts of Canada and the U.S., six is the age provided by law. I think it is a good time to start the child in the Three R's, although I feel he or she should have an acquaintance with the alphabet, handwriting and simple figures before that.

Six is a good time to start because it is the age when the average child ceases to be a baby and has a vast natural interest in and curiosity about the world and what is in it.

Of course, modern nursery schools and kindergartens take children a lot younger than six. I often have mothers write me and ask whether it is advisable to send children to them. I suspect most of them expect me, as a country doctor with rather old-fashioned ideas, to say nursery school theories are largely nonsense and that the child is as well, or better, off at home until he starts the formal school course.

Well, I surprise them, if that's what they expect, for I think the good nursery school idea is a great thing. I'll admit, if someone had asked me about them a few years ago, I'd have expressed skepticism. I was completely converted when I saw what was done for the Quintuplets. When they were a couple of years old, Dr. W. E. Blatz, head of the St. George's School of Child Training in Toronto, began to supervise their training in skills and appreciation. He did wonders for five poor little girls who were still struggling with handicaps that beset them at birth.

I know that the popular conception of a modern nursery school is that in it the child is allowed to do as he pleases, with the result he becomes more and more self-willed and obnoxious. True, in most nursery schools, the child is given a good deal of leeway in the matter of self-expression. This is because the basic idea is that the child shouldn't be squeezed into the rigid forms of some if our old fashioned education systems. But the children are not made anti-social non-conformists. Not by any means.

As I say, I saw what was done for the Quintuplets by a director of one of these outstanding nursery schools, and I was convinced. There should be more of them; they only operate in our larger cities and I think it's a pity every child couldn't have the benefit of the invaluable conditioning they provide for regular schools.

A DR. DAFOE HINT

A child cannot be at its best in school, if it is being improperly fed. See that it goes to bed at an hour which will permit it to get a full night's rest and make it disposed to rise early enough for a leisurely, well-balanced breakfast, then have time to get to school without hurrying.

U. S. Ambassador Calls for End Of 'Pretense and Hypocrisy' Extending Aid to Great Britain

Philadelphia, Sept. 10 —(AP)— William S. Culbertson, one-time United States ambassador to Chile, called today for an end of "pretense and hypocrisy" in extending aid to Britain and declared that:—

"Perhaps we should in a word of aggression and undeclared wars adopt an opportunist policy which would allow us to do anything that we wish to accomplish our objective."

But, he said in a speech prepared for delivery at the American Bar Association's annual convention, "I don't want it done under the fiction of a tortured law of neutrality . . . If one law or treaty can be explained away for a good cause, another law or treaty can be explained away for a bad cause."

In his discussion of International law, the Franklin County, Pa., attorney said he was "not presenting an argument against the barter of the 50 destroyers for the leases of British territory. I realize that this seems to be justified as a measure of self-defence. It is in line with our policy to strengthen the British buffer between us and the force-politic of Germany . . .

"I want to save the British Empire but I want to save law too . . .

"Therefore, let us not try to justify our unneutral acts by law. Let us either say frankly that we are not neutral; that we are not governed by the accepted rules of neutrality; that we are released from doing so by the violence and the illegatity of Germany and her associates and that we feel free to take such steps as are necessary to preserve our territory, our institutions and our way of life."

"This is the honest attitude to assume. . ."

Strict Rationing of Certain Foodstuffs in France Predicted

German Authorities State Shortage Due to Military Operations

REASONS GIVEN

(By Roy P. Porter Associated Press Staff Writer).

Paris, Sept. 6 (Via Berlin, delayed)—(AP)—A shortage of certain foodstuffs in occupied France which can be met only by strict rationing this winter was forecast today by officials of the agricultural section of the German military administration.

They said the prospective shortage resulted directly from military operations.

These authorities claimed German occupation forces were not sending large quantities of food from France into Germany. Wheat flour is being exported into the Reich from France, they asserted but only in return for rye flour from which German army bread is made.

The primary reason for the prospective shortage, German officials alleged, was the removal by the French government of between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 inhabitants from departments in northern France when the war started. Included in this number were between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 agricultural workers.

(It was authoritatively stated in Allied high command circles when the battle of France started that German Panzer divisions drove French refugees ahead of them to hamper movements of Allied troops seeking to counter-attack and that they machine-gunned them on the roads and in the fields from aircraft.)

This exodus, they said, had two effects. First, the crops which would have been planted in early May were forgotten after the first German offensive began May 10. Second, crops which, like the first cutting of hay, would have been harvested in the same period, were left standing in the fields.

The most urgent rationing needs concern meat and fat, German sources said. One reason given was that cattle herds in northern France were abandoned by fleeing populations, resulting in considerable losses of livestock.

Police Blotter

Jack Holley, 279B Front Street, complained to police today that three valuable homing pigeons had been stolen from his pens recently. A breeder of pure bred racing pigeons, Mr. Holley's chief concern was the loss of a male breeding bird, which was stolen. Police later ascertained that two youthful lads had been seen loitering in the vicinity of Mr. Holley's roosts and a checkup of such actions was promised.

George Maybec, 72 Highland Ave., reported the theft of his 1936 model Chevrolet coach last night. The vehicle, equipped with Ontario licence plate numbers 28-N-65, was parked on Boswell Street when stolen. No reports as to the recovery of the vehicle were made by police early today, although surrounding district police departments were immediately notified of the theft and a description of the vehicle provided in an effort of recovery.

There is a girl's bicycle reposing at the police station today, the bike having been found abandoned by the police over the week end. No city licence plate was attached, however.

PROMISE RENEWED

Berne, Sept. 10 (CP)—Authorities in this Swiss capital said today Britain had formally renewed a promise that Royal Air Force planes would refrain from flying over Swiss territory.

Air alarms have sounded recently in Switzerland on nights when the R.A.F. was known to have raided Northern Italy.

GERMAN CHILDREN BEING SENT TO FRANCE

New York, Sept. 10 —(CP)— German children have been sent to havens in France to be fed and to escape British bombings of Hamburg, the American Friends of Czecho-Slovakia said Monday in making public excerpts from letters written between July 28 and Aug. 14 by American social workers in France.

Rome Communique

Rome, Sept. 10—(AP)—The text of Tuesday's Italian high command communique:

"In the eastern Mediterranean our aviation is particularly active and has made violent bombing attacks on the port of Jaffa in Palestine and on the railroad between Alexandria and Mersa Matruh. During the first action, port equipment and important deposits were hit, starting vast fires. During the second, the railroad works were seriously damaged. A train was hit squarely and blew up

(No report on these raids has yet been issued by the British authorities).

"In the north, aviation sought out, scattered, bombed and machine-gunned enemy tent encampments and motor columns. The enemy suffered considerable losses, especially at Bir Scefezes.

"Enemy aviation made several raids on localities in Cirenaica, causing altogether the death of one person and injuries to four and unimportant damage.

"In East Africa, one of our air formations attacked the air base at Port Sudan, hitting various planes on the ground and causing fires. Although attacked by enemy pursuit planes, all our planes returned to their home bases after having shot down an enemy plane.

"In Kenya, enemy depots and barracks were bombed by our aviation at Bura, on the Tana River, with evident results and without any loss on our part.

"The enemy attempted raids on Massaua, Asmara and Destre, dropping bombs especially in open country causing altogether two deaths and injuries to three."

(Comment from British sources on any of the above enemy statements is not yet available).

PRINCE TORLONIA HELD BY POLICE

Suspected of "Anti-Fascist or Defeatist Tendencies" Friends Disclose

Rome, Sept. 10 (AP)—Prince Alexandro Torlonia, wealthy young nobleman, has been arrested in a round-up of Italians suspected of "anti-Fascist or Defeatist tendencies," friends disclosed today.

The 28-year-old Prince is a son-in-law of former King Alfonso of Spain. Friends said he was accused of "talking too much."

Another patrician reported under arrest is Prince Filippo Doria Pamphili, 54, member of one of Rome's oldest noble families and the owner of extensive property.

Doria-Pamphili married a Scottish nurse, Gesina Mary Dyckes of Newcastle, in 1921. His mother was Lady Emily Pelham-Clinton-Hope, daughter of the sixth Duke of Newcastle. He is reported to have been exiled from Rome to a mountain village.

Scores of Italians were reported reliably to have been arrested similarly in recent weeks.

BULLET FIRED FROM ARMY RIFLE SAYS FRANKISH

Provincial Medico-Legal Expert Testifies at Murder Trial of Pte. William Moulton

ACCUSED NOT DRUNK

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 10 (CP)—Dr. E. R. Frankish, Provincial medico-legal expert, testified at the murder trial of Pte. William Moulton, 32, of Stratford, here today that the bullet which caused the death of Pte. Arthur Phillips, 28, in a Niagara Falls army camp last July 14, was fired from the army rifle which, the Crown contends, was used in the shooting.

Moulton and Phillips were members of the Perth Regiment of the Canadian Active Service Force, which was in camp at Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, at the time of the shooting. At the opening of the Supreme Court Assizes here yesterday, the Grand Jury returned a true bill of murder against Moulton.

After testifying that Phillips' death resulted from a lacerated kidney and liver, caused by a bullet, Dr. Frankish identified a bullet produced by the Crown as one given him by Inspector Barnett of the Criminal Investigation Department Provincial Police.

"I fired a cartridge or bullet through the rifle on exhibition here, and I compared the rifling on the bullet with the rifling on the mortal bullet, and I was satisfied that this bullet had the same markings as the mortal and had been fired from the same gun," Dr. Frankish said.

Arrested by City Police

Sgt. Armand Byers of the Niagara Falls police force told of going to the camp early on the morning of July 14. After receiving information about the shooting he went to a tent where army authorities were guarding Moulton and placed him under arrest. Asked if he observed anything about Moulton's condition, Byers replied that there was "what smelled to me like a strong odor of wine."

Under cross-examination by C. R. Widdifield defence counsel, Sgt. Byers stated that Moulton did not act like an intoxicated person.

Dr. Harry A. Wrong of Niagara Falls who performed an autopsy on Phillips' body after the latter died in hospital on the afternoon of the shooting, which had taken place early in the morning, testified that the cause of death was hemorrhage primarily from the liver, shock and perforation of the bowel and kidney.

BURTON DOWDELL BURNED TO DEATH

Ernest Ritchie, Westport, Suffers Severe Burns but Escapes Blaze

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 10.—(CP)—Burton Dowdell, 40, was burned to death and Leland Mehan suffered severe burns in a fire which destroyed the home of Ernest Ritchie at Sherbrooke, near Westport, Ont., late yesterday. Five other residents of the house including three children, escaped from the burning buildings.

Dowdell and Mehan were sleeping in a room over the kitchen when fire broke out. Dowdell was trapped in the room and Mehan collapsed near the front door and was rescued from the flames by Milton Crosier, a neighbor.

Ritchie ran through the flames to reach the outdoors and then stood under a second-storey window while his wife handed their three children, aged 10, six and four down to him. Then Mrs. Ritchie descended.

Fisher Body Plant Suspends Operations

Flint, Mich., Sept. 10—(AP)—Fisher body plant No. 1, was closed today and several departments of the Buick division of General Motors suspended operations as a result of a labor dispute last night in the body plant.

Buick officials said that as a result of the interruption to body production most of Buick would be closed by nightfall. The two companies together employ about 20,000 workers.

George Patterson, manager of Fisher No. 1, sent 1,200 night shift employees home as a result, he said of fighting between members of rival unions.

Gen. De Gaulle Promises Real Trial Of Men Guilty of Misleading France

London, Sept. 10 (CP Cable) — Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the free French forces, said in a world broadcast Monday that those who are responsible for the French defeat are those who "lulled the army to sleep with outworn ideas, people who surrendered before having exhausted all means of fighting."

Speaking on the Riom war-guilt trial, which he called "this monstrous trial," he said that "one day there will without any doubt be a real trial of the guilty parties. But there is every reason to believe that many from the prosecution today will then be seated in the dock."

"In Vichy they are wracking their brains in trying to hit upon culprits who can conveniently be charged with responsibility for the recent disaster" said Gen. De Gaulle. "And indeed one can well understand that public opinion is crying out for punishment of the guilty. But the way in which matters have been deliberately engineered has vitiated the verdict in advance and sidetracked justice."

The proud commonsense of the French people is certainly under no illusion as to who is responsible for the disaster, he said.

"Those responsible are simply those whose duty it was to prepare for war and who were not prepared for it, ministers of state or those in high authority whose duty it was to give the country a modern military machine and who lulled the army to sleep with outworn ideas, people who surrendered before having exhausted all means of fighting.

"One day there will without any doubt be a real trial of the guilty parties. But there is every reason to believe that many from the prosecution today will then be seated in the dock."

CATARAQUI MAN KILLED BY CAR

William Macrow, Bridegroom of Six Weeks, Steps Directly Into Path of Vehicle

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 10 —(CP)— A bridegroom of six weeks, 30-year-old William Macrow of Cataraqui was killed instantly last evening when he walked in front of a car on No. 2 Highway a mile west of Cataraqui.

Macrow stepped from a car driven by E. D. Snook, Cataraqui garageman, and was crossing the highway to the home of Roscoe Gardiner, when he was struck by a machine allegedly driven by Clarence Lattion, 30, Kingston.

Macrow was married only six weeks ago to Janet Palmer of Marlbank. He is survived by his wife and parents, a brother Bert, and a sister, Florence.

JAPS WITHDRAW

Hong Kong, Sept. 10.—(CP)—One thousand Japanese troops who overstepped the Indo-China frontier at Dong Dang have withdrawn after an emphatic French protest, reports from Hanoi said today. The reports said the French still were firmly opposing Japanese attempts to gain a free hand in Indo-China—which would simplify their drive against the Chinese armies of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

National Defence Tax Must be Levied on Worker's Entire Salary

Ottawa, Sept. 10—(CP)—Monies collected from employees by employers across Canada to pay the National Defence Tax since July 1 is starting to come into the income tax offices here already, it was said today and by Sept. 16 all these collections to Sept. 1 must be in.

After Sept. 16 employers will make returns for their employees at the end of every month.

It will be some days after initial collections have been received before any figure on the total amount collected is available.

The National Defence Tax, imposed in the last budget, is not applicable to unmarried employees receiving a salary of $600 or less or to married employees receiving a salary of $1,200 or less. It is two per cent in the case of a married person if income exceeds $1,200 a year and in the case of a single person without dependents it is two per cent if income exceeds $600 a year and does not exceed $1,200 or three per cent if the income exceeds $1,200.

The tax applies to the entire income and revenue officials say the most frequent mistake found in the returns is where a firm has collected the tax only on the part of the salary in excess of $600 or $1,200 as the case may be.

Taxpayers have become so accustomed to paying income taxes only on the excess above the exemptions they often adopt the same procedure in the case of the Defence Tax. "The Defence Tax applies to the entire salary," a revenue official said, "from the first cent to the last cent."

Workers in City Carry on as Usual

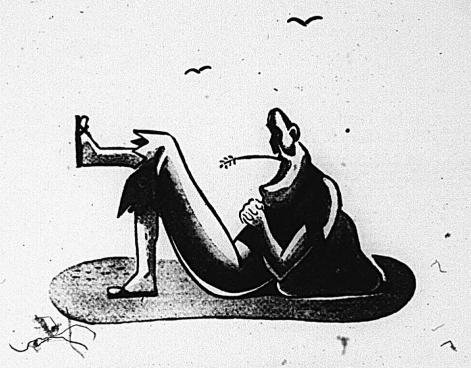
By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 10 (CP).—The City, that ancient area of winding lanes and headquarters of famous financial institutions, carried on as usual today although when workers came to business—many of them late—grimy, red-eyed firemen were still toiling on smouldering wreckage strewn over one area blasted by German bombs.

Stenographers and black-coated stock exchange clerks, who had to walk from central London due to lack of buses in the city, found one noted alley piled high with broken glass. Soldiers asked them to walk in the middle of the road away from the danger of falling masonry. Miles of fire hose snaked over the street. A high explosive bomb had crashed on the corner of a tall bank and brought masonry tumbling to block the street.

Life went on as usual at Canadian banks where a number of windows were shattered due to an explosion. None of the staff were working at that time, however, Canada House, Canadian Railways offices, and other Canadian rendezvous in the west end were all intact.



Excepting Hermits

Hermits are people who think two's a crowd.

They live in caves or huts, wear long gray beards and eat everything from berries to nuts. They don't, as a rule, buy anything.

Self-respecting hermits spend most of their time meditating, contemplating and talking to themselves. Their minds are hermit-ically sealed to anything going on in the world. In fact, what really puts hermits in a class by themselves is that they don't care a hang about the news.

But for everyone excepting hermits, news is a vital necessity of everyday life. Since the day Eve told Adam about the apple, news has been the leading topic of conversation all day long.

And today the craving for the news is stronger than ever before . . . because never before has the individual's welfare and happiness been so intimately affected by events at home and abroad.

That's why your daily newspapers draw a larger and more intensely interested audience . . . day after day . . . than any other medium. And that, in turn, is the fundamental reason why your advertising in newspapers inevitably hits harder, works faster and brings more immediate results.

Deloro "Smelters" Defeat "Combines" in First Game Of 'C' Playdowns by 11-6

Six Unearned Runs Prove Too Big a Handicap to Overcome

PLAY WEDNESDAY

'Nicky' Sero Performs Well at Short, Fielding Perfectly and Hitting Triple

Scoring a total of six unearned runs in the fourth and fifth innings, the Deloro "Smelters" won the first game of the round in the zone Intermediate O.B.A. "C" playdowns at Deloro on Monday afternoon as they went on to cuff the offering of three opposing hurlers to pound out a rather decisive 11-6 victory over the South Hastings League "Combines." The second game of the series will be played at the Belleville fair grounds on Wednesday afternoon and local fans will get their first opportunity this season to witness a baseball game; a game which locals must win or be eliminated from the O.B.A. playdowns.

For the first three innings of yesterday's ball game, "Doc" Empson's South Hastings League All-Stars, with the addition of several Belleville players, seemed well on their way towards victory. In the bottom half of the fourth however, after establishing a three run lead, a comedy of errors together with some not-too-good baseball on the part of the locals, saw the Smelters score six runs in the next two innings to literally coast home behind the steady hurling of Carl Casey, while three local hurlers went to the showers in a vain effort to cover up for the errors committed by the local's infield.

Error of Omission

Taking out an error of omission in the fourth when Kelleher elected to try for a double play instead of taking a sure out at first, and again in the fifth, when a wild throw by "Chuck" Barriage allowed three runs, the locals would have won the ball game. The six unearned runs in those two innings, however, proved too much to overcome and it yas only adding insult to injury when the homesters went on a scoring spree in the eighth to tally five times on three hits, a fielder's choice, a walk and an error.

Even in defeat however, the locals were not disgraced as it must be taken into consideration, that this was the first time that the boys, as a team had played together, and with a rearrangement in the lineup will make it more than interesting on Wednesday when the return game is played. There are two shining lights in yesterday's game which should give the team confidence. They were the superb playing of "Nicky" Sero at short and the fact that the locals outhit the winners eleven to ten. Sero was in on three double plays executed by the locals, which materially aided their pitcher in the pinch, while on the offensive they proved that Casey was not invincible as Empson connected for three singles, Kelleher for two one base blows for a perfect day at the plate, while Sero and Jarrell conked out triples.

Hitting Evenly Divided

The hitting was very evenly divided on both teams however, as every man on the local's lineup and all but one on the winner's connected safely. Knowles, playing at third for the homesters was the only Deloro player to get more than one safety, connecting for two singles, while Goodchild, Gazely and Callery hit doubles.

A double play by Deloro in the eighth, after Empson had singled, promptly shut off a local rally while in the last inning a two run scoring effort failed by five to match the winner's total.

Oswego Franchise Sold to Albany N. Y.

Oswego, N.Y., Sept. 10—(AP)—Sale of the franchise of the Oswego Nets in the Canadian-American Baseball League to William V. Connelly of Albany was announced here Monday by officials of the Oswego Club.

The announcement, which gave no price, said Connelly would petition the league to transfer the franchise to Pittsfield, Mass., for the 1941 season. With the franchise, the announcement said, went the playing contracts of 11 players on the Oswego rolls.

League officials said that a 10,000 drop in attendance and a poor season afield contributed to the decision to sell the franchise of Oswego, which was a charter member of the five-year-old circuit.

Don McNeill Wins Tennis Final From Champion R. Riggs

New York, Sept. 10—(AP)—Bobby Riggs was greater in defeat today than he ever was in victory.

The little fellow had just seen his most prized possession, the United States National Singles Tennis championship trophy, handed to Don McNeill of Oklahoma City.

All afternoon the gallery of 7,500 at Forest Hills had applauded wildly when Don came off with a fine shot and only mildly when Bobby did.

He hadn't been a popular champion and he knew it. So when the presentation ceremony was over and Don was surrounded with back slapping pals, Bobby walked through the gathering dusk away from the crowded Press marque, across the court on which he had been beaten to a dressing room under the stands—and for the first time he was the popular kid he should be.

McNeill should be a popular champion, for the forcing dashing style of game he played yesterday in knocking Bobby off his throne, by scores of 4-6, 6-8, 6-3, 7-5 is bound to be more popular than Riggs' purely defensive style.

Teamed with McNeill on the American tennis throne is another exponent of slam-bang tennis, blonde Alice Marble of Los Angeles. She shelled Helen Hull Jacobs off the centre court with a blazing 6-2, 6-3 beating.

SAM DRAGINAIS AND NICK PAVICH SAVE THE SHOW

Participants in Main Wrestling Bout at Hume Arena Give Customers a Thrill

REFEREE SCORES

Roy Doherty, Local Wrestler, Gives Tom George a Real Argument in Preliminary

It took Referee Cliff Faux of this city to not only cool off, but literally tame the pugnacious Nick Pavich in the main bout of last night's initial autumn professional wrestling bout at the Hume Arena. Pavich proved to be a self-styled villain, badman and pugnacious ring operator, who battled a fellow-countryman from Greece, Sam Draginais, to a draw in the feature bout of the night. Each had won a fall, when the full time limit bell sounded, but Pavich took exception to Draginais' retaliations of unorthodox procedure and early in the third round pushed Referee Faux a little too hard for the official's liking and Arbiter Faux promptly pinned Pavich to perhaps prove just who was the headman of the show.

After the final bell sounded, indicating the scrap had been a draw fight with each contestant getting a fall, Pavich attacked Referee Faux again, no doubt chagrinned over the official's prior ring decision. Faux did not falter, he promptly gained an arm-lock and hurled Pavich bodily from the ring and once outside of the squared circle the irritated fans took care of the pugnacious Greek and it remained to have his preliminary contemporaries rescue him from a rather precarious position. Where Pavich's opponent, Sam Draginais, had only gained one fall over Nick, Referee Faux obtained two decisions and a third from the appreciative public.

Unorthodox Tactics

Dubbed as "Blondie", Draginais was the people's favorite from the first gong, when Pavich attacked his lighter opponent in a most unmerciful manner employing every known unorthodox method to gain victory known in the modern art of grappling even going so far as to revert to the Joe Louis fistic attacks. After losing the first fall a victim of a rather pugnacious attack, Draginais employed the use of his fists to leave Pavich his victim and knot the count.

Pavich won the initial fall with a reverse figure four leglock, his pet hold, after 33 minutes of torrid exchanges of punishing holds in the initial round. Early in the second round Pavich tangled with Referee Faux and should have learned the folly of his ways when he was tossed for a five yard loss by the official following a conglomeration of human limbs as the three principals tangled in mid-ring. Draginais really got himself smart at this stage and employed some of Pavich's tactics, as the latter claimed he was hit low with a boxing punch. While Pavich was protesting Draginais floored him with a hard body slam and won with a press after 22 minutes of exciting ringmanship. Pavich also lost the after-show when he protested and Draginais floored him again with a well-timed punch to a vulnerable spot.

The boys were really mixing matters when the final 60 minute bell sounded and then Pavich lost all sense of reasoning as he attacked Referee Faux, the result is told in the opening paragraph.

Doherty All Alone

The less said about the semi-final bout the better. Sam Yankey did not seem to try any too hard after winning the first fall from Jack Pavlos, with the result that Pavlos won the next two falls without incident in a most uninteresting demonstration. Strangely enough all contestants in the ring, except Shannonville's Roy Doherty, were Greeks.

In the opening bout Roy Doherty, of local ring fame, substituted for Johnny Gyroffy, who fractured his hand last week. Roy was seen at his best in a local ring and stayed 17.31 minutes with Tom George, before exhaustion forced the Shannonville lad into submission. Much credit was given Doherty in his courageous stand as he willingly stepped into the breach and nobly carried out his ring efforts.

Collapsible Indians Lose Lead to Detroit Tigers by Dropping Game to Chicago

Yankees Move Into Cleveland for Two Game Series Today While Tigers Take on Boston

LEE IS WINNER

Single Game Played in National With Giants Taking Dodgers 7 to 4

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

A battle royal for the American League pennant brought the four foremost teams into a finish fight today, but the collapsible Cleveland Indians couldn't wait.

They folded their tent yesterday and abandoned the lead to Detroit by dropping a 2-1 decision to Chicago White Sox.

While all the other clubs in the circuit were idle the Indians undertook to gain an edge over their rivals by playing their "cousins", from whom they had won 16 out of 21 previous games. But Lefty Thornton Lee smothered them with four-pit pitching and triumphed more easily than the score would indicate.

This was the seventh setback in eight games and forced the Indians out of first place for the first time since Aug. 11.

This week's schedule calls for Cleveland to face the red hot Yankees in a two-game series today and tomorrow while Detroit Tigers defend their lair against the Red Sox. Then Thursday the world champions are down to start a three-game series in Detroit while Boston's still ambitious Sox open a similar series against the tribe.

Cleveland's loss to Chicago yesterday was a back-breaking blow in itself. On the record the Indians had a right to expect to win. But the White Sox got to young Harry Eisenstat in the fourth for three singles that loaded the bases and unsettled him so much he forced in a run with a walk. Then in the seventh Skeeter Webb doubled and Mike Kreevich singled for the other tally.

There was a single game in the National League, too, New York Giants battering Brooklyn Dodgers 7-4. Hal Schumacher was cuffed for three runs in the first inning by the Dodgers, but then he tightened up to pitch seven scoreless innings while his mates pounded three Brooklyn pitchers for 14 hits and a victory.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Sept. 10 (AP)—If Seattle's Bud Ward wins the United States amateur golf meet, he'll be the seventh fellow to do it twice running....Add tops baseball jobs. Rogers Hornsby, who took the seemingly hopeless Oklahoma City Indians and lifted them from the cellar to fourth place and a chance in the playoffs.

It's the life:

When Sammy Snead got married, his friends predicted it would be the best thing that could happen for his golf game....Since then, Sammy has won three out of four tournaments and was runner-up in the fourth.

Ernie Lombardi has been made an honorary member of the Cincinnati fire department and is coming around polishing his badge....Issy Klein, manager of Pete Lello is here negotiating for Garden bouts with Irving Eldridge and Lew Jenkins....Dixie Walker, who may bring Brooklyn its first National League batting championship since Lefty O'Doul checked out, is the only Major League player with a butler on his payroll....One of the clever Boston wags the other day referred to Connie Mack as the "Mr. Chips of baseball."

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Thornton Lee, White Sox: Held Indians to four hits for 2-1 triumph.

Hal Schumacher and Mel Ott, Giants: Former steadied after giving three runs in first inning to pitch victory over Dodgers with help of Ott, who led 14-hit offensive.

"OOPS, SLIPPED!!"

Rucker of the New York Giants was out the traditional mile sliding into second base on force play in first inning of second half of a double-header with the Boston Bees, but Rowell, of the Bees, juggled the ball and dropped it—as he is shown doing here. The umpire reversed the "out" decision and Rucker was safe. The Giants won this game, 4 to 1, after having won the opener, 8 to 7.

ROCHESTER WINGS CAN CLINCH FLAG IN GAME TONIGHT

Jersey City Loses Real Chance to Cinch Third Place by Splitting Twin Bill

ORIOLES FOURTH

Montreal Royals Have Opportunity to Finish in Fourth Playoff Spot

Rochester Red Wings can clinch the International League pennant tonight if all goes right, but after Jersey City Giants blew a chance to register an important gain it's a cinch the third-place struggle is going on right up to the finish of the season.

Rochester leads by only 4 1-2 games now, but the fact that both the Red Wings and Newark's Bears have had several games permanently wiped out make it possible for the race to reach the clinching point tonight. For if the Red Wings beat Montreal Royals in their final clash of the season and if Newark loses both games of a doubleheader to Baltimore's Orioles, the standing of the two pennant contenders will look like this:

Club	W.	L.	G.B.	T.P.
Rochester	94	58	—	6
Newark	90	66	6	4

Thus the Bears could finish even in the "won" column but would still finish behind if the Red Wings should lose their remaining games after today.

The Jersey City-Baltimore race will hinge upon their final five-game series which opens Thursday.

The Jerseys gave a ragged performance last night in dropping a 9-8 decision to Syracuse Chiefs, then followed it up with a fine one and won 2-1.

The Jerseys out-hit their rivals 13-11 in the opener but made four errors. In the nightcap Lefty Roy Henshaw gave only six hits as he outpitched Oadis Swigart. The Giants, held scoreless for six innings as Swigart turned in a neat seventh then won out in the eighth when Johnny Lockshot singled Mickey Vernon home from second.

"Dark Horse" Heads Qualifiers in First Round of Tourney

Manorek, N.Y., Sept. 10—(AP)—They said this was one amateur championship no "dark horse" would stick his nose into, because Winged Foot was too long and exacting a course for any except the Read star shooters. Yet Maurice McCarthy, Jr., of Cincinnati, is at the head of the procession as play resumes in the second qualifying round today.

McCarthy's 70 in yesterday's opening round caused a good deal of surprise. Maurice was a power a decade ago, but he made his last real bid in 1931, when he reached the semi-finals.

Right on McCarthy's slowing heels after the first skirmish, with 72's, were Dick Chapman of Winged Foot, John Cree of Buffalo, and Tom Whiteway of Cleveland. They were the only others to take any liberties with Winged Foot's par of 72. Most scores ran so high, in fact, that it seemed a brace of 77's would gain admission tonight to the select group of 64 who will qualify for match play.

Seven equalled par in their first tour of the course, including Marvin (Bud) Ward of Portland, Ore., who is the defending champion and a 6-to-1 favorite in the clubhouse book to repeat. In the second group at 8-to-1, incidentally, were Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, Willie Turnesa of White Plains and Wilford Wehrle of Niles, Ill. That was how the money-changer ranked them.

One of those who matched Ward's opening 72 was Ellis Knowles of nearby Rye, N.Y., who is 54 and twice a grandfather. He was the National Intercollegiate Champion in 1907 and he still was hitting them down the middle as late as yesterday afternoon.

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

DID YOU KNOW THAT—New York sport writers are calling the Cleveland player-cry babies—"half Vitts"?...... That Joe Cronin has purchased a $30,000 mansion in Boston, which would indicate he'll be around as Tom Yawkey's No. 1 man for the Red Sox for awhile yet ......Now that Jimmie Foxx has returned to his original post as catcher for the Red Sox, it is rumored he'll be seeking a salary increase next season...... And when making reference to the Red Sox hurling staff recently, Foxx said—"I'd much rather be hitting against them than catching 'em"..... Prexy Ken Edgecombe is the proud father of a bouncing baby boy. (Local softball mentors please note—"The father is doing as well as can be expected of a worried father)...... Efforts to continue Interscholastic sports will be made at the annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte group in the C.O.S.S.A., rather than limit these activities during times of war stress........ The Bay of Quinte versus Belleville Golf Club and annual match will be held Wednesday over the latter course.

Employing the same methodical cagriness and control that won him many a senior ball game for Belleville in the old days, Carl Casey scattered a lot of base knocks rapped out by "Doc" Empson's moundsmen for a bracket of base knocks, but actually the "Combines" outhit the homesters. However, the Combines were playing their initial game as a team and doubtless will be seen at a much better advantage at the Fair Grounds Wednesday afternoon when the season's first baseball game will be seen in Belleville. It is many years since Belleville sport fans have had to wait until September to witness a baseball game, but with the half-holiday still in effect no doubt a goodly crowd will turn out to see the former Belleville hurler, Carl Casey, try his hand in an attempt to turn the Combines back and push them into oblivion in successive games. "It was our first appearance as a team and I'm convinced we'll take the Smelters' measure here Wednesday," predicted "Speedy" St. Louis who caught for the South Hastings 'all-stars' yesterday. "Chuck" Barriage's bad toss to first in the 8th was the turning point.

The Southern nine welcomed Casey's slants in a most prolific manner scoring three in the first as they assumed an early game lead. However, the Smelter soon solved Joe Kelleher's fast one and drove the local hurler to cover, Ken Juby, the former Shannonville curve-ball artist taking over, but his mound sojourn wasn't any too lengthy as Orville May finished the piece for the visitors. However, from off the local mound Kelleher should go better, as a matter of fact from atop the raised Belleville mound May might really breeze 'em past the Smelters. We were in conversation with R. A. (Bob) Elliott of Deloro, last evening and he tells us the teams put up a splendid game of intermediate baseball. "I was agreeably surprised at the class of ball played and I'm coming to Belleville for the second game Wednesday afternoon," stated Mr. Elliott in a most convincing manner.

A goodly number of Greeks, namely five, moved into town last night and appeared at the Hume Arena on the night's wrestling card, but strangely enough there wasn't a new restaurant opened this morning, which counteracts the old saying—"When two Greeks meet they open an eating house." First and foremost it's hats off to Roy Doherty of Shannonville, who was substituted from the crowd in the preliminary bout and although he lost to Tom George (Yes, one of the above mentioned Greeks) Roy made a lot of friends in his courageous stand. In the semi-final bout we heard a fan (George H. Carver, our chief helper and contemporary) remark — "I thought it was the Arena where the bouts were held, not the aroma." And George was perfectly right: it smelled. However, in the main bout it was really a good show, despite the fact that Referee Cliff Faux gained more decisions than either of the performers. This boy, Nick Pavich, is not only a superb showman, but a good wrestler and in a return bout with Draginais an increased crowd should be assured next week.

When the Cleveland Indians left Philadelphia for Chicago last week, Hal Trosky was not aboard the train and a minor mystery developed after Manager Oscar Vitt said he had not given the first baseman permission to leave the team. However, it was learned that Trosky had taken a plane to Cleveland to visit his wife, who was not feeling well after the removal of a couple of impacted wisdom teeth. Hal said he had been unable to reach Vitt, but that Traveling Secretary Lew Mumaw had approved his departure. He flew to Chicago to rejoin his mates, August 30.

Remember Earl Cook, the Lemonville boy-wonder hurler of a decade ago or less, who had a season with the Cincinnati Reds? Well, our Ontario veteran hurler has been purchased by the Detroit Tigers from Buffalo, where he has been pitching winning ball this season.

Word was received in Picton today of the death of Roly Rorke at Noranda, Que. Roly Rorke was well known as a hockey and baseball player throughout Eastern Ontario, having played and managed clubs in Picton and Northern Ontario. He was a native of Picton and his sudden death will be regretted by all who knew him.

SPORT SPICE—Judge Landis will hold a world series meeting in Chicago on Friday with four teams from the American League and only two from the National being represented..... For years past the situation at this time of the year has usually been reversed...... As the White Sox handed the slumping Indians their third consecutive win yesterday, the Tigers moved into the lead spot in the American League ......The next six days will tell the tale in the junior circuit, as New York moves into Cleveland for a stand, while Boston is at Detroit; following these games Boston goes to Cleveland, while the Yankees move into Briggs' Stadium where the issue will doubtless be settled for the year. ......That was quite an impressive softball pitching record Cam Ecclestone of Toronto hung up in the world softball championships at Detroit over the week-end..... In the eliminations on Saturday he hurled and won a 24-inning game over Phoenix, Ariz., only to lose out in the semi-finals to South Bend, Ind., after a 14-inning struggle which is some softball pitching in any man's league.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Dr. Christian Meets the Women"

"Black Limelight"

One of the most successful mystery-melodramas ever staged has been converted in a thrill-packed film bearing the provocative title "Black Limelight." This splendid new screen entertainment stars the brilliant Toronto-born actor, Raymond Massey and offers us an extraordinary treat in the person of Joan Marion, a screen newcomer who gives one of the most moving and emotional performances ever witnessed in any picture, anywhere.

Now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, this picture will keep you in a state of suppressed excitement, even though you are reasonably sure of satisfactory solution to the problem the film presents, you will find yourself clutching the arms of your seat and holding your breath as the picture races along to its breath-taking climax. Joan Marion gives a performance that will have every woman in the theatre cheering her on and sympathising with her in her deepest moments of heart-stirring emotions.

Briefly the story tells of a man who is wanted for the murder of a girl, found dead in a seaside cottage. Despite the overwhelming evidence against him, his wife believes in him and stands by him even though she learns that he has been the lover of the slain woman. Had she been the revengeful type, an innocent man would have been condemned of murder....as it is, in a speech that is the most dramatic and most touching we have ever heard on any screen, she forgives him and promises to help him. We urge you to see "Black Limelight" for its exceptional entertainment quality and its powerful and extremely pleasing acting.

Jean Hersholt as "Dr. Christian" favorite of 18,000,000 radio fans and countless movie-goers in the third of the series brought to the screen, "Dr. Christian Meets the Women" is also now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and little need be mentioned in this column about this fine piece of motion picture entertainment, other than to recommend it as the best that has come to the screen in this popular series. Other radio and screen favorites in the cast of "Dr. Christian Meets the Women" with Jean Hersholt, include Dorothy Lovett, Edgar Kennedy, Rod LaRocque and Frank Albertson, who all turn in fine performances.

"Dionne Quintuplets"

AT THE BELLE

"Our Town"

With an impressive cast which includes William Holden, Martha Scott, Frank Craven, Fay Bainter, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Beulah Bondi and Stuart Erwin, Sol Lesser's screen production of Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer prize play, "Our Town," will be given a gala premiere at the Belle Theatre.

This new picture was staged by Sam Wood, who directed the great international success, "Goodbye Mr. Chips," and it is being released through United Artists.

As is well known, "Our Town" was presented without scenery or props on the stage. This, of course, was due to the fact that it was impossible to create the illusion of an entire town on a single stage. On the screen of course such an expedient was unnecessary, for the scope of the camera and the resources of a motion picture studio could easily materialize what was in the author's imagination.

The whole pictorial element, as a matter of fact, received heavy emphasis from Mr. Lesser. Before "Our Town" went into production, William Cameron Menzies, the production designer who had just finished "Gone With the Wind," figured out every camera angle and made 1200 sketches. Each scene was sketched from every possible angle, and Director Wood rehearsed not only the principals in the picture but the camera as well, before each scene.

Other interesting statistics concerned with the production of "Our Town" turn up the information that Frank Craven, who plays the narrator, walked eight miles in front of the camera. Craven only appeared in two shots with other players—one with Miss Scott and Holden, the other with a bit player. In the wedding scene, William Holden and Miss Scott were married 19 times. In this scene Miss Scott received her first screen kiss. The wedding dress she wore was the one her mother was married in. It was so fragile she was unable to sit down during filming.

The transposition from one period of time to another was handled exactly as it was on the stage. Frank Craven effected the flashbacks with the help of the versatile camera. When for instance, in his guise as the druggist, Craven was required to turn back the scene to twenty-five years before, he says: "At that time my drug store looked like this . . ." and proceeds to replace the shining chromium fittings with the older trimmings of a pharmacy.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Torrid Zone"

James Cagney, Ann Sheridan and Pat O'Brien are the triple-threat star trio heading the cast of the Capitol theatre's next attraction, "Torrid Zone," which is scheduled to open on Friday. Directed by William Keighley, "Torrid Zone" is an exciting comedy drama, set against the exotic tropical background of the South American banana country.

Cagney and O'Brien are cast as the hard-boiled plantation bosses for a big fruit company and Miss Sheridan as an American torch singer who goes to the "torrid zone" to cash in on her talents as a singer and card sharp. Also featured in the film are gravel-voiced Andy Devine, Helen Vinson, Jerome Cowan, George Tobias, and many others. "Torrid Zone" is an original screen play by Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald.

A select list of short subjects will complete the bill.

"The Golden Fleecing," Funny

"The Golden Fleecing," hilarious adventure of a timid clerk involved with a gang of racketeers, is announced as the companion feature attraction, with Lew Ayres and Rita Johnson teamed in its mirthful story.

It starts with Ayres accidentally selling a big insurance policy to a big time racketeer, who turns fugitive and is likely to be "bumped off" at any moment, at the immediate expense of the insurance company. To save his job Ayres sets out to track down the racketeer and becomes involved with the gang. His trials and tribulations from then on come fast and furious. Even when he becomes a hero to the public, he's a sad and worried young man within.

Virginia Grey turns "heavy" to play the "moll" of the racket overlord, enacted by Lloyd Nolan. Leon is hilariously funny as the xylophone-playing former vaudevillian, Uncle Waldo. Others in the cast include Nat Pendleton, George Lessey, Richard Carle, Ralph Byrd and Marc Lawrence.

PASTOR DOWN AND OUT IN AGONIZING DEFEAT

Bob Pastor seems to be in agony as he is counted out in the 13th round of his bout with Billy Conn, light heavyweight champ, in New York. A hook to the midriff followed by a left uppercut dumped Pastor on the canvas for the kayo. The crowd of 14,000 saw Conn score his first knockout over a major opponent in the non-title bout.

AS RED ROLFE WAS SPIKED WHILE TAGGING TRAVIS

This photograph was snapped at the actual instant the sharp spikes of Washington's Cecil Travis caught the Yankees' Red Rolfe in the face and opened a wide gash on his forehead. Red got the ball to tag Cecil as the latter came sliding into third trying to stretch his second-inning double in nightcap of double-header. The double didn't stretch. Umpire Ormsby called him "out." The Yankees won both games. First one by 2 to 1 score, this nightcap, 8 to 1.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Later in the hotel lobby Judith ran into Mary Hartwig.

"Come on upstairs and we'll have lunch sent up to my room. We haven't had a chance for a visit during the whole meet," Judith said.

Mary came with her. Upstairs, Judith put in their order, and Mary talked. Once the telephone rang, but Judith did not answer it. It might be Mrs. Dutton.

"I'm so glad Tex wasn't hurt last night," Mary said. Judith knew that eventually the talk must get around to the automobile accident, and she braced herself for the worst, knowing Mary.

"I think it's disgusting the way people gossip. I was furious this morning with some of the girls, the things they say. The trouble is that people are jealous of Tex. He's so successful!"

"Of course." Judith's lips were stiff.

The trouble with Sonny is that she loves publicity, any kind. She won't mind this, but Tex does."

Fortunately their luncheon came just then.

However, Mary was full of the subject. "I felt like shaking Sonny this morning," she went on. "She just laughed when she saw the papers! She's irresponsible! That's her trouble."

Judith nodded in agreement although she could think of some other things wrong with Sonia.

Mary went to the train with Judith. At the last minute, Judith met one of her husband's friends who told her Dudley would be on the train. The weather grounded nearly everything east of Chicago. Judith bought a drawing room on the train. She felt she just had to be alone, away from everybody who knew her . . . even Dudley.

Regardless of the new drawing room, Judith did not sleep much that night. Her thoughts were too troublesome. When the train pulled in early, she did not get up, but delayed in dressing so that she would miss any of her friends. She breakfasted in Grand Central, then went over to the Pennsylvania station to get the train for Newark.

Tex wouldn't be in Marvin's home town before late afternoon. He couldn't possibly return for at least three days from Oklahoma.

The apartment seemed empty and deserted. Judith viewed the day before her with trepidation. When she was in such a state of nerves, only one thing would help. She got into an apron and went to work.

She worked until dark and everything was spotless. But she had little heart for her lonely supper when she had prepared it. The apartment shone. It was a pleasant spot. Judith loved the room with its cool greens and yellows. It suited her. It was home. She loved it when Tex brought some of the gang home from the airport for late suppers.

She thought of going to a movie but hoped that Tex might telephone. So she waited. She wanted a report about his head, what the doctor tought. He did not call.

Next morning there was another day to face. She wrote letters, fussed about with her fall clothes. The hours seemed endless. In another twenty-four hours Tex should be back. Then everything would be all right. Tex did not call that night but Judith telephoned her mother in Detroit at 9:30.

As always her mother urged her to come west when she could. The family had been worried about Tex's accident. Now Judith was sorry she had not gone on to Detroit after the races. But she had been too disturbed to face family scrutiny.

Then Judith asked the operator if she could locate Mrs. Marvin Stone in the little Oklahoma town where Marvin had been laid to rest so recently. After an hour, Elsie's voice came over the wire. They talked for three minutes. He had gone on to Oklahoma City, Elsie said.

I can't stand another day like yesterday, Judith decided when she opened her eyes the next morning. She dressed carefully, went over to Manhattan and did some shopping. But she was back again at five. Still no word from Tex.

At six, Michael Dudley called. "Come on in to town and have dinner with me," he pleaded.

"I haven't heard from Tex," she protested. "Besides I just got back."

"That doesn't matter. We had a wire today, he'll be in in the morning. You've been staying too close to the house. I'll wait for you at the office. I won't take no for an answer."

Judith finally agreed because she so dreaded another evening alone. She put on the new hat she had bought that day and she had never looked prettier. Her smart suit was just right.

During the short trip to Manhattan, Judith was pleasantly excited. It was fun to be away from the silent apartment.

Dudley was waiting for her. "You're a good girl to keep an old man company."

"You're a life-saver. I was pretty low."

Dudley suggested they eat at a quiet restaurant somewhere in 56th street. And it was quiet, with perfect food even to the crepe suzettes.

"Want to go to a show?"

"No, thanks. Let's just talk."

"That suits me. What have you been doing with yourself?"

"Cleaning house."

"I must say you don't look it."

"It's a good way to occupy your time," she said.

Dudley laughed: "I must try it some time."

"How did Tex say he was feeling?" Judith tried to make the question sound casual.

"He didn't say. Of course our doctor will have to check him when he gets in. I'm afraid he won't feel like flying for a few days. He will have a little vacation. No matter what he says that was a nasty cut on the head."

"I don't know how he'll feel about it," Judith said carefully.

"You two might run down to Bermuda, or out west."

Dudley waited for her comment. There was none. Then he continued:

"Of course, I want to get Tex back on his Florida run as soon as possible. People like to ride with a cup winner. It's good for business, but he's had quite a shock over Marvin and then that auto accident," he explained.

"You're probably right."

They found it difficult to talk now. Old topics led to difficulties. Judith could not bear mention of the races. Dudley wished he had insisted on the theatre.

"Let's go to a club. We can dance maybe, or watch people. Everybody turns up sooner or later."

Judith gladly consented. In the noise and confusion of a nearby night club, talking would be less of a problem.

The headwaiter settled them at a table over by the wall where they could watch the passing scene. Several people spoke to Dudley. He began pointing out celebrities to Judith — Charley Knickerbocker, Bob Benchley, Damon Runyon, the two sparkling Dorothys—Thompson and Kilgallen.

Judith's blue eyes shone. She loved this Broadway — just for a little while, at least. Hugh Lanning came in with some friends, stopped to speak to her.

"What's the idea, Judith, turning me down for Dudley? I've called you three times since you got home and couldn't get an answer."

"I'm sorry, Hugh."

"How's Tex? Is he back from Oklahoma?"

"Not 'til tomorrow."

"Dudley, you've got to get Tex out of town again right away. Judith and I have a date."

There was more of such banter, and Hugh went on to his friends.

It must have been midnight when Sonia Winthrop came in the door. She was with three men, and the whole place was agog as the flying beauty, with her startling tanned face and blonde hair, walked between the tables.

The headwaiter bowed low. A whisper went around the room, "It's Sonny Winthrop!" And other comment: "Can you imagine a girl that pretty flying an airplane?"

Sonia did not see Judith and Dudley at first. She must have spotted them when she was seated, for shortly the waiter brought Dudley a note: Come over and join us. It was like a royal command. Dudley tossed the note to Judith with, "What shall we do?"

Judith knew only too well what they would do. They would go because there was nothing else for them to do. She suddenly hated Sonia with all her heart. For Judith was not dressed, while Sonia was radiant in sveldt dinner clothes.

"I'd better be leaving, Mr. Dudley. Take me to a cab and you can join them."

Dudley answered quietly: "I think you'd better not leave, Judith. Let's join them."

So they went over to the Winthrop table. Sonny greeted them both gaily, and pouted reproachfully at Dudley.

"I tried to reach you on the phone tonight. You had a half-date with me. I left word where I was coming in case you called later."

Sonia ordered brandy for Dudley, and Judith asked for coffee.

"Not drinking?" Sonny raised her eyebrows. "Too bad. How's Tex? When is he coming back?"

Judith's heart lifted. He hadn't communicated with Sonia then.

"Tomorrow, if he can make connections."

Before their drinks came, Sonia was called to the telephone.

When Sonny came back, she set out to be quite charming to all of them, including Judith. But she continued her proprietary attitude toward Dudley.

"What do you mean by deserting me tonight" she persisted.

Dudley smiled. "I had to chaperone Judith in the big city."

"Well, I like this town," stressed Sonia, "with or without a chaperone but I must go home this week-end."

Judith watched Sonny with a kind of cold fascination till the band started to play "Get Out of Town". It made Judith smile grimly.

Thank heaven, Sonny was not going to stay . . . beyond the week-end . . . maybe!

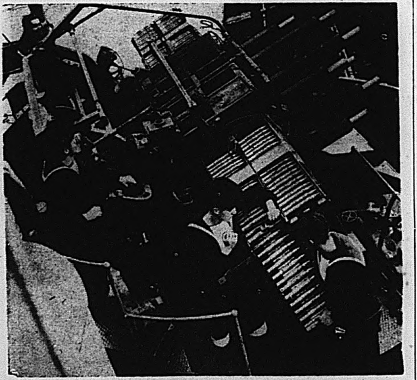
WELCOMES PROTEGE

Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy's boss, greets his 12-year-old protege, Thelma Jean Graham, on her arrival in Los Angeles from Nashville, Tenn. Thelma, a ward of the Nashville juvenile court, was "discovered" by Bergen in her home town. He had her transferred to Hollywood where she will enter school and receive advanced training in ventriloquism under his direction.

BITTER DOSE FOR DIVE BOMBERS



An unusual view of one of Britain's famed pom-pom guns, the anti-aircraft machine-gun with multi barrels that have proved of greatest value in dealing with dive bombers. Tars aboard a man'o'-war are loading the weapon here. Shells, weighing about a pound, are fired with the rapidity of a machine-gun. The gun is a dangerous hazard to the plane coming down head-on towards the target.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 10.—(AP)— A start toward regaining trading equilibrium was made in today's stock market as mild buying support appeared for selected Steels Motors and Aircrafts.

Best advances running to a point or so for favorites were posted shortly after the opening. These were chipped down or cancelled in some instances near the fourth hour. Dealings were slack throughout.

Stocks up at one time or another were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber Boeing, United Aircraft, N.Y. Central, Westinghouse and Woolworth A few of these eventually slipped.

Canadian issues were easy. Dome Mines and Lake Shore dipped fractions and, in the Bond Market, Canada 4s lost 3-8 point. Canadian Pacific and Distillers made small gains.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 10 —(CP)— But for a minor advance for the Golds, the Toronto Stock Market today was inclined to easiness in the early session. Industrials led the decline with a loss of .77. Trading was quiet and only 80,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Steel issues accounted for the main losses, National Steel Car weakened to 44, Dominion Bridge dropped 3-4 and Canada Wire B was off 2 points to 18. Fleet Aircraft weakened 3-8. Miscellaneous industrials, including General Steel Ware, Mercury Mills and Beatty Bros, were lower.

Nickel, Noranda and Waite-Amulet were soft spots in the Base Metal list. Changes in the Gold group were limited to a few cents.

Loss of 15 cents to 50 for Foothills was the widest change in the Western Oil group. Home Oil firmed 3 to 1.86 and Calgary-Edmonton firmed a cent to 1.46.

Prices for Butter Inclined to Sag

Toronto, Sept. 10.—Prices for undergrade butter were inclined to sag as dealers experienced difficulty in moving accumulated stocks during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. Otherwise the produce trend was steady in quiet dealings.

Buyers on the butter market appeared desirous of studying the all-Canada stock figures before taking on supplies and the light receipts of top grade Ontario solids moved slowly at previous price levels. The stock report is expected to be released from Ottawa late today. Reported heavy accumulation in undergrades tended to depress the market for this type of butter. Ontario 38 score held unchanged with the No. 1 grades, but 37 score dropped 1-4c to 1-2c per pound.

Supply and demand were about balanced on the egg market, which resulted in receipts clearing satisfactorily at Saturday's levels. Grades B and C in the retail section, however, eased one cent per dozen to 26c and 19c respectively.

The War Today

(By Guy Rhoades Canadian Press Staff Writer).

German night air raiders brought extensive damage to central London today, causing warehouse fires in the vicinity of famous St. Paul's Cathedral, the Mansion House and the Guildhall, while details of British reprisals on Germany were incomplete.

The number of civilian casualties in the Metropolis was expected to be around that of the last two days when a total of more than 500 were killed and about 2,700 badly injured. Two short daylight raids today appeared to have caused little damage.

The German raids, conducted in poor weather, appeared indiscriminate and belief was expressed they were designed mainly to affect public morale and hurt as many people as possible. The effect on public morale was good. People were tired and mad, but stubborn.

Actually the number of casualties and the extent of the damage have been far less than authorities expected.

Londoners were led to expect casualties of all kinds running as high as 100,000 during massed raids and fire authorities estimated they would have to deal with as many as 5,000 blazes in a single raid. They were prepared to cope with such hazards and the fact they have not had to do so is hardly likely to scare them.

The famous buildings in the path of last night's bombers escaped damage, although firemen were forced to battle continuously for eight hours to extinguish the flames. Some docks also were hit.

Lord Woolton, Minister of Food, said the damage, though "annoying" was important neither from the standpoint of feeding London nor the nation. Some dislocation of traffic occurred, but it is always possible to use other British ports to unload imports.

The long night raid was ended with a terrific outburst of anti-aircraft fire such as watchers had not seen before and speculation arose as to whether its occurrence might not have indicated an experiment in some new type of concentrated fire to drive the raiders.

The admiralty disclosed British and neutral merchant ship losses for the first year of the war amounted to 2,771,363 tons while German and Italian losses were 1,-236,000 tons. Britain, however, ended the first year of war with more tonnage than she possessed at the beginning the new construction and ships of formerly neutral nations seized or surrendered.

This was considered of the utmost importance to a nation which must fight from an island with goods imported or built largely from imported materials.

Britain during the coming winter with its bad, foggy weather which hampers accurate bombing, is expected to press forward its industrial effort and to be stronger next spring than now. The long-range strategy paces for ultimate attack on Germany in an effort to finish the war on enemy territory.

SUFFERING FROM DROUGHT

Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 10 (AP)—Australian wheat lands in New South Wales and Victoria are reported suffering the effects of drought and it is feared the Western Australian harvest will be subnormal unless favorable weather occurs during the rest of the season.

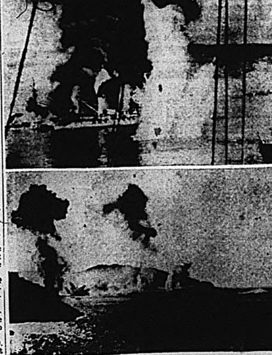
South Australia is in slightly better condition and with a reasonable amount of rain there will be good yields in most districts.

The drought also has affected the sheep and many lambs are in such poor condition it will be impossible to fatten them.

MORE PARISIANS RETURN HOME.

Paris, Sept. 7 (via Berlin, delayed) (AP)—More than 140,000 inhabitants of the Department of Seine (Greater Paris) returned to their homes in the week ending September 3, bringing the present population of the department to 3,007,806 persons, German officials announced today. (The population of Greater Paris was given as 4,933,855 in the last pre-war census.)

When British Beat Nazis to French Navy



For the first time, although it was fought two months ago, pictures come to light on the heroic battle of El Kebir, when a British naval squadron engaged the French African fleet in battle to prevent it from falling into German hands. The French fleet was given the choice of scuttling, internment in a neutral port, or battle. Upon receiving no reply to their ultimatum, the small British squadron steamed into action and scored a complete victory over the French fleet. The TOP picture shows a salvo of shot encircling the French battleship Bretagne, which was sunk. A general view of the battle is pictured BELOW.

GERMANS

The cathedral loomed somber and ghostlike through the red-stained smoke as dawn brought the all-clear wail from the sirens. Flames and sparks still shot upward.

Church Not Damaged

Another famous church, St. Mary-Le Bow—behind St. Paul's—was said to be out of danger after long hours of anxiety.

A member of the staff of St. Paul's cathedral said that the famous church was not damaged. "We have not had a window cracked," said the staff member. He added that bomb-started fires menaced the cathedral for a time, "but happily the wind was in a direction that blew the flames away."

Outlying sections and densely populated residential districts also were bombed heavily. The communique said no count of the dead and injured in the nine hours and two minute attack was possible immediately, but that 286 were killed and 1,400 injured seriously in the Sunday night attack.

Broken at Dawn

That brought the bombing toll for the first two days to 582 and approximately 2,700 badly hurt.

There were attacks, too, outside of London—in northwestern England and rural districts of the southwest in the Midlands, Wales and Scotland—but little damage was reported there.

The bombardment finally was broken off just before dawn by a tremendous surprise anti-aircraft barrage which beat back the last of the raiders.

There was no indication whether the fierce barrage in the flame-tinged sky over the central city was the answer to German night raiding which a high Royal Air Force authority said was being developed.

52 Nazis Brought Down

The din of anti-aircraft fire had echoed through the city all night, but it was not until the intensified shell-burst barrier just before dawn that the raiders were forced back entirely from the central city area.

"Following heavy losses inflicted on him by our fighters and the repulse of his attacks yesterday evening," the communique said, "the enemy has now thrown off all pretense of confining himself to military targets."

The 800 to 1,000 pound bombs ferried over by big four-motor German planes were dumped into the centre of the city, wrecking some mid-town office buildings and damaging centuries-old landmarks. Fifty-two enemy aircraft were destroyed.

Casualties in Maternity Hospital

One big building in the financial district was smashed. Four top stories were ripped off another large office building. One hundred and twenty persons were reported buried in the wreckage of 20 houses shattered in a single district. A number of casualties were reported at a maternity hospital.

A home for the aged, a London County Council housing estate, and numerous workmen's cottages in the east end were hit.

Although the attack at times reached the intensity of the raids the previous two nights, it appeared to lack the sustained punch which they maintained. The bombing was less steady and early indications were that fewer big fires were started and fewer bombs were dropped.

Long Artillery Duel

Even after the all clear signal brought weary Londoners out of their shelters, the battle of Britain went on with a thunderous cross-channel duel by long range guns resuming the shelling started the night before.

The heavy firing by British coastal cannon on the southeast coast chalk cliffs and German "little Berthas" on Cap Gris Nez near Calais, France, brought the threat of an attempted invasion back into sharper focus in the battle picture.

Observers here have often said the English coast still is the real front line.

The third of the big night raids on London followed the same pattern adopted by the Nazi attackers since they switched from daylight bombings and concentrated on the capital.

No Great Mass Attack

A few planes led the way, dropping incendiary bombs. The rest followed, their racks loaded with powerful explosives, guided through the darkness and smoke to their targets by the glare of the fires.

There was no great mass attack; instead they came in relays, sometimes singly, diving at the Thames side targets through the centre of London and circling over the outlying sections.

Once the raiders and defence planes mixed in a dogfight high over the Houses of Parliament and one huge four-motor German bomber crashed to the ground.

Five tremendous explosions were heard in the Fleet Street section, centre for London newspaper offices.

Children's Hospital Hit

A children's hospital was hit. One street car was hurled from the tracks, but there were no casualties. Experienced in all night bombing, most Londoners went directly to shelter at the first alarm, resigned to another night of wakeful waiting.

Fires broke out in the northwest. One roaring salvo of bombs hurled debris of South London buildings high into the air. Wharves and Warehouses along the Thames again bombed heavily.

Bombs dropped on sanctuaries for the aged. Two hospitals were hit in central London and one bomb shattered the roof and windows of a children's hospital and started a fire on the top floor. No patients were in the wing hit.

Patients Quickly Moved

Thirty mothers and 20 babies had a narrow escape when bombs fell around a maternity hospital. All the patients were moved from the building within 15 minutes after a call for help was sounded.

"Fathers who later came to the hospital as quickly as they could on receiving the news were in fact far more upset than the women," said a rescue worker.

Nurses and porters formed a bucket brigade at the children's hospital.

"Everybody was magnificent," a staff physician asserted.

The raiders started fire after fire, but the firemen worked without a letup to localize the flames. From a city roof-top the reflected glow of the flames could be seen in all directions. The crackle from the nearby fires mingled with the drone of bombers.

Subway Service Maintained

A.R.P. squads dug frantically into the ruins of a house hit by a high explosive bomb in the southeast London district after a number of persons were reported trapped.

Several persons were feared killed in a northeast district when high explosive reduced six or seven houses to debris.

A bomb tore through three floors to the terrace of a building in central London. At another point a bomb hit the roadway, killing a man and a woman.

Subway service was maintained on all lines except in a few sections. Bus, tram and trolley bus services were operating with a few curtailments and some diversions of routes.

Transportation delays caused light attendance at the stock exchange, with scarcely any business transacted but war loans remained steady at overnight closing levels.

ONE-THIRD LOAN

The importance of the small subscriber was also stressed by W. Rupert Davis, proprietor of the Kingston Whig-Standard and President of The Canadian Press.

"Vast numbers of individual subscriptions will give concrete evidence of Dominion-wide will to fight through," Mr. Davies said. "They will give emphasis to a nation-wide condemnation of the barbarism employed by our enemies; they will show that terrorism does not terrify but simply set ablaze a patriotic indignation and a determination to wipe this menace out forever."

Deliberae Barbarism

"What was happening at the moment in London was all the reason anyone need for urging other Canadians to do their utmost in this loan," Mr. Davies said.

"When we read of great incendiary fires in the heart of the capital of empire; when we read of civilians being slaughtered indiscriminately by bombs from German raiders; when we picture the ruthless destruction of humble homes and the deaths and woundings of women and children we can realize that what Hitler and Mussolini are turning loose is not war but deliberate, barbaric terrorism," he said.

The defence being offered in Britain by Britons, Canadians and men from the other overseas dominions was Canada's protection as well as Britain's.

The money Canadians were now being asked to loan their government would be used to buy airplanes, munitions and supplies for the men protecting the country, men who were offering their lives so the rest of the country could keep its freedom.

Loan headquarters last night reported $92,000,000 of the 12-year three per cent bond issue had been subscribed for in the first day, with no complete returns from some areas.

FIGHTER PLANES

lace who went to work today after a nine-hour raid last night.

Business buildings were demolished by the heaviest explosives. Fires were set in warehouses near St. Paul's Cathedral. Fleet Street, the fort of the city's newspaper enterprise, was shaken by the blasts, and air battles were fought over the Houses of Parliament.

The drone of many engines could be heard in the sky during the 25-minute alarm that came just after noon.

In a brief battle over the London area, fought so high observers could not see it, British fighter planes turned away the reconnaissance and bomber planes which had occasioned the alarm. But machine gun and cannon fire were heard in Central London.

Thousands of firemen, air raid wardens, and gunners—the front fighters of this war—rushed to their posts after a weary night during which, authoritative quarters said, 150 German bombers dropped some "very heavy" demolition bombs on the centre of the city.

The German night raiders smashed down one huge business building in the financial district and blew the top floors off another, set great conflagrations which endangered but did not damage St. Paul's Cathedral and the Guildhall, hit two hospitals, including a maternity hospital, shook Fleet Street, London's "newspaper row" with their tremendous blasts and battled with British fighters right over the Houses of Parliament—the "Mother of Parliaments."

Buses and Taxis Rerouted

In spite of the terrific blasting millions of weary workmen, clerks and business men struggled back to their daily tasks this morning through traffic jams created by necessary rerouting of buses and taxicabs.

London's great army of workers in the heart of the city paused sometimes to look at ruined buildings, then moved doggedly on.

The Germans also battered the coast near Dover last night and early today with long-range artillery from near Cap Gris Nez, in France, killing four persons, but drawing a reply from British naval rifles mounted ashore and British bombers.

In the city hundreds of firemen were engaged. They ignored the falling bombs and crashing debris as they battled for eight hours without a break to check the flames.

Crude Oil Incendiary Bombs

Incendiary bombs, some believed to be of the crude oil type, started fires in several localities around big-domed 250-year-old St. Paul's.

However, a member of the staff of the cathedral said the big-domed church escaped damage, with "not a window cracked." He reported the wind blew the flames the other way.

But all this warfare was not one-way, British emphasized. Authoritative Royal Air Force quarters said their bomber squadrons again had carried out operations over Germany and attacked targets in Berlin.

Lord Woolton, Minister of Food, described the amount of damage done to food supplies during the weekend German raids on London as "annoying but entirely unimportant," either in regard to Britain's or London's food supplies.

FLEET AIR ARM

"Our aircraft encountered intense opposition from enemy aircraft batteries and one skua is missing. This operation follows closely upon other offensive operations of the fleet air arm over the Norwegian coast, recent instances of which follow:

Left Supply Ships Sinking

"On Sept. 8 Skuas and Swordfish planes left two enemy supply ships sinking and abandoned by their crews. All our aircraft returned safely.

"On Aug. 18, Skuas set fire to oil tanks in the Bergen area and to a motor patrol vessel, and also scored direct hits on a 2,000-ton supply ship. All our aircraft returned safely.

On Aug. 8, Skuas set fire to the oil depot at Dolvik. All our aircraft returned safely.

"On Aug. 1 Skuas successfully bombed a wireless station and a supply ship of 4,000 tons. The latter was left in a sinking condition and abandoned by her crew. All our aircraft returned safely.

"Many offensive operations were carried out previously to this.

"These repeated offensive actions are adding considerably to the enemy's difficulties in an area where sea transport and oil supplies are vital."

Berlin Communique

Berlin, Sept. 10 (AP)—Tuesday's German High Command communique:—

"British planes last night again bombed places in Northern Germany which were far from any military targets. Scattered apartment houses were more or less severely damaged in the neighborhood of Berlin and other cities.

(No details of the R.A.F.'s bombing work last night have yet been made public by the British Air Ministry.)

"German battle and pursuit plane units continued rolling reprisal attacks against war-essential targets in the British capital. Port facilities, docks, gas works, electricity works, storehouses and oil tanks were bombarded with all calibres. Fires visible from a long distance lighted the way for the flying units. Air raids were directed against several port facilities on the English West Coast and Scottish East coast.

(A British statement said that following yesterday's heavy losses suffered by the Nazi Air Force "the enemy has now thrown off all pretense of confining himself to military targets."

"The foe's losses yesterday were 44 planes, of which two were downed by anti-aircraft, one by navy artillery and the rest in air fights. Twenty-one of our planes are missing.

(In air battles over Britain yesterday 47 German aircraft were shot down; 13 British planes were lost.)

"During hazy weather the night of Sept. 9-10, some light enemy vessels neared the French coast and aimlessly fired several salvos which hit the Hinterland without damage. The enemy was driven away by the fire of our naval artillery.

(This action has not yet been reported on by the British Admiralty.)

"A submarine commanded by Lt.-Capt. (Guenther) Prien, who on Sept. 8 reported sinking 33,400 tons during one operation, now reports that this operation resulted in the sinking of a total of six (defensively) armed enemy merchantmen totalling 40,250 tons. Additional steamers were damaged. Another submarine destroyed several armed enemy merchantmen totalling 15,500 tons. One German auxiliary cruiser took a neutral steamer as a prize in the region around England blockaded by Germany.

(These claims have not been confirmed by British sources.)

HUNGARY CHARGES

May Go To Portugal.

Lugano, Switzerland, Sept. 10 (AP) —Former King Carol's search for sanctuary appeared today to be directed toward Portugal as hope faded that the Vichy government would authorize him to reside on the French Riviera.

Members of Carol's suite said that if France refused to welcome the dethroned Rumanian monarch and his friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu, they probably would settle in a small town near Lisbon.

After telephone conversations of the last two days with Vichy his followers are convinced that nothing more than a transient permit could be expected.

Carol and Mme. Lupescu remained secluded in their apartments today. They have the companionship of a pair of Pekinese and two hunting dogs.

TOOTH CAUSE OF HEADACHE

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 10 (AP) —A horse is the reason Roger C. Harp had an earache from a piece of tooth in his nose. The earache took him to a physician. The doctor found the cause was the piece of tooth in Harp's nose. Then Harp recalled the tooth had broken off when a horse kicked him in the face 50 years ago.

LUNCHES WITH KING, QUEEN.

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill lunched with King George and Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace today.

Picton and District

Picton, Sept. 10 — (Special) — There were large congregations at church on Sunday when special prayers were said in keeping with the Empire day of prayer. Music was also in keeping with the occasion. The Baptist Church was filled when members of Picton Post Canadian Legion and the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary attended the service in a body, parading from the Legion hall.

The Second Battalion of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, N. P. A.M., is expected home from Petawawa camp early Monday. Several local people motored there on Sunday and found the men enjoying the life, though the nights were admittedly cool.

Lieut. Fletcher Webster, who recently received a commission with the Royal Canadian Volunteer Reserve, spent the week end with Mrs. Webster and family. Lieut. Webster served in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve in the last war.

There was a light rain in most parts of Prince Edward County on Sunday and it was very welcome but there was not sufficient to do much real good. A heavy downpour is needed. Tomatoes are suffering, the fruit ripening before it has attained size and it is too hard to plow with horses.

Plans Made for Fair

A meeting of Prince Edward Agricultural Society was held on Saturday night at the agricultural office to plan for the fair here Sept. 27 and 28. President Sam Dodds presided. Jack Welsh reported that some of the best horses in the province would be here for the races on the second day of the fair. Fred Campbell, assistant agricultural representative, stated that R. M. Holtby, field man, would assist with the black and white Holstein day in conjunction with the fair. Brian Dodds, in charge of concessions, stated that a large midway was coming and that a good deal of space had already been taken by merchants. Secretary Finlay MacArthur was asked to contact Denton Massey, M.P., at present with the R.C.A.F., Trenton, and ask him to officially open the fair and to try and get the R.C.A.F. band to attend one evening. Carman Burr was appointed to take charge of the model airplane show. Mrs. S. J. Collier and Miss Maizie Carson reported adding classes to the prize list, which would make for a display of various kinds of knitted articles which are being made for the Red Cross. Plans were made for a grand opening with county school children parading, with prizes awarded for best marching and decorated banners.

A meeting was held here Friday night to organize for the sale of war saving certificates and stamps. Judge McLean presided. Dr. S. H. Roblin was appointed chairman and Charles McGillivray, secretary for the drive. A meeting is to be held later to organize a campaign. Kingston speakers were present and explained the procedure taken in other places. Col. Fair, organizer of the three district counties, headed the visitors.

Appointed Principal

Marshall Brummell of Massassaga has been appointed principal of Warings' Corners School near Picton. This is one of the largest schools in Prince Edward. He succeeds Ford Rupert of Hillier, who has gone to be principal at a school at Hearst, Ont. Before leaving, Mr. Rupert was presented with a travelling case by friends at a gathering at the home of Miss Anne Waring and with a travelling bag at a community gathering at Orser Church. Rev. J. F. Reycraft acted as chairman for the program. Mr. Rupert has been especially prominent in the music festival held each year in Picton, teaching his own school. While at Cressy, he trained a number of pupils to play violins and other instruments and had a very fine orchestra.

The United Church Woman's Association was entertained last Friday afternoon by Mrs. Arnold Platt at her cottage at Flake's Cove.

Dr. and Mrs. T. S. Philp have returned from Toronto where they spent several days.

Prof. Iva E. Martin was in Ottawa a few days last week.

Mrs. J. E. Benson and daughter Gena returned to Windsor on Sunday after spending the summer at Wellington.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Thompson who were recently married, were tendered a shower at Cherry Valley hall Friday evening. There was a large crowd in attendance. The gifts were presented in baskets decorated in pink and white and the honored couple were seated in decorated chairs on a platform decorated in pink and white. A short program was given with Philip Dodds as chairman, including solos by Olga Balutansky, Arlie Beckwith, Mona Bell, Mrs. Jack Beaumont and F. E. Rice, a piano duet by Mrs. Ethel Foster and Miss Mary Wharmby, and two contests. Refreshments were served.

Ross and Fred Sprague, while fishing at Big Island, landed two fine lunge, these weighing 25 and 14 pounds. Howard Mallet landed one weighing 14 pounds. The lunge are biting especially well in that vicinity.

L. E. Wiseman of Brockville spent the week-end with his wife and family.

Rev. and Mrs. Cecil Winter of Cataraqui, formerly of Picton, spent a few days last week at their cottage at Salmon Point and called on friends.

Miss Nora Rorke who taught at the Separate School last year, plans to attend business college in Toronto this fall.

Sister Mary Clude of Alexandria and Sister Mary Carmaletta of Heathfield Novitiate, Kingston, visited the parish of St. Gregory the Great last week.

Mrs. Charles Mounce is spending a fortnight at Port Perry.

Mrs. J. R. Batten and children of Toronto have come to town to reside, taking one of the apartments in the new C. H. Burr apartment block.

Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kolb have returned to Baltimore, Md., after a month with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Morley Currie.

Several men were home from Camp Borden for the week-end and report training progressing and conditions satisfactory. They state it has been very cool for summer months.

Lieut. William G. McLean of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was one of the Canadian soldiers who arrived recently in England.

With followers of General Juan Andreu Almazan disgruntled by the announcement of the election of General Manuel Avila Comacho as president and threatening to make Almazan president anyway, the Mexican government, headed by President Lazaro Cardenas takes steps to prevent possible rebellion. Almazan followers named Sept. 10 "zero hour" for the staging of protest walk-outs in the railways, oil industry and power plants. On that date the official Mexican congress plans to declare Comacho president-elect. The last Mexican revolution, staged in 1929, was short-lived. During the recent election Almazan followers protested in vain against the use of the cathedral, ABOVE, in Mexico City as background for a campaign poster of the P. R. M. Action, Not Sportsmanship Needed.

The question of sportsmanship by R.A.F. pilots was raised recently by the Sunday Dispatch, which reproduced in a front-page editorial an Air Ministry news bulletin relating the story of the pilot of a British bomber who, during a patrol flight, spotted a German Heinkel resting on the sea near Borkum.

"The German would have been easy prey, but the British crew thought it unsporting to attack a 'sitting bird'," the bulletin said. The British plane dived twice on the Nazi, with headlights on, to invite it to come up and fight. The German did so, and was destroyed.

The Dispatch calls this "sitting-bird" tradition "sheer insanity in the sort of war we are fighting now."

The paper adds that the vast majority of Britain's 40,000,000 people have "not been to a public school and do not care a damn about the etiquette of pheasant-shooting." The people know only, the paper continues, of the bitter facts of the struggle for existence.

Fight On Grimly.

"About this war they know one thing — that we have to fight it grimly, relentlessly, and even unscrupulously.

Some have seen their homes blown to extinction. Some have seen their relatives and their friends left in form that numbs the heart and turns the stomach sick.

"Are they interested in the niceties of sport? Must they believe that some fatuous idiot at the Air Ministry considers that their safety comes second to playing the game and honoring the rule of school and club

"They are a kindly and generous and appreciative people. They would not criticize British gentlemen who are fighting for them. They would not ask the obvious question — whether the Air Ministry approves of British pilots inviting Nazi defences to shoot first before they are bombed, or warning Krupps to be on the alert because they are about to be attacked.

"They are humbly content to know that the Royal Air Force is fighting for them with a bravery excelling even their own.

'But they may wonder whether the people who issued this unctuous statement are conducting war or sport."

Well Camouflaged

"I feel and certainly the officers and men feel that we are able now to handle anything Hitler can land here," Gen. Auchinleck said. "Of course, I do not pretend our defences are perfect but they are pretty good and getting better daily. I think they are well camouflaged, too.

"One of the most important things resulting from this battle of Britain is the great measure of co-operation achieved among the three services. Nothing like it has ever been achieved in our history. Being an empire with our activities scattered all over the globe we have never been previously so closely thrown together as now where the sea, land and air forces meet at the highwater mark."

The command has a common operations room where the naval, army and air officers work together, read each other's reports and discuss each other's problems. The results have been "remarkable."

The G.O.C. made no attempt to disguise the fact that he regarded seriously the possibility of invasion from the air. "It is a possibility to which we have devoted the most serious thought and I think we have provided for all of its varying aspects," he said.

"I believe we now are able first to contain and finally to destroy any force landed by air. The Germans are prepared to lose a certain percentage of the men from pancaking troop-carriers but once the casualties exceed that, the adventure is doomed to failure."

DUKE CHEERS BRITISH FLIERS

The Duke of Kent is shown in Royal Air Force uniform during his visit to a military hospital in the south of England to cheer British fliers "winged" in the battle of Britain. The men to whom the Duke is talking here are the crew of a British bombing plane that carried out a successful attack on Germany's Ruhr district only to crash in landing on their home field after the raid.

A boy takes his younger brother's hand as they and other young survivors of the torpedoing of a liner by a German U-boat debark at an undisclosed British port. The torpedoed ship carried 320 evacuee children. All aboard were saved.

Hitler Fails to Gain Daylight Mastery Of Air—Churchill

Germany's Losses Compared to Britain Average Three to One In Machines and Six to One in Pilots

London, Sept. 11—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill broadcast a warning to this fortress nation today that Hitler's long projected attempt at invasion appears to be at hand and that the next week may be the most critical in Britain's history.

The Germans already are moving self-propelled barges and convoys of larger ships from northern ports to the whole French coast, he said, slipping along from port to port under the protection of German coastal batteries. The attack, he warned, may be made on England, Scotland or even Ireland, or on all three, with forces concentrated as far north as Norway.

But Britain is ready, he said, praising the Air Force, the Navy and the Army.

"This is the time for everyone to stand, to hold firm, as they are doing," Mr. Churchill said.

Then as he spoke of "these cruel, wanton, indiscriminate bombings of London", as a "part of Hitler's invasion plan," the Prime Minister continued:

Calls Hitler Wicked Man

"This wicked man, the embodiment of many forms of hatred, this monstrous product of former wrongs and shame, is now resolved to try to break our famous island race by a process of indiscriminate slaughter and destruction.

"What he has done is to kindle a fire in British hearts, here and all over the world, which will glow long after all trace of the conflagration he has caused in London have been removed.

"He has lighted a fire which will burn with a steady and consuming flame until the last vestiges of Nazi tyranny have been burnt out of Europe, and until the Old World and the New can join hands to rebuild the temples of man's freedom and man's honor upon foundations which will not soon or easily be overthrown".

Mr. Churchill compared Hitler's anticipated attack with the threats of Napoleon, the Spanish Armada and other historic adventures aimed against the British Isles.

"No one should blind himself to the fact that this German invasion is being planned with all the German craft and method characteristic of them," he declared.

The prime minister described to the empire Nazi air attacks and differentiated between attacks on military objectives and the "barbarous" assaults upon civilians.

"So far, they have failed conspicuously," he said of German attempts to obtain mastery of the air in daylight raids. The Royal Air Force, he said, is stronger than at the start while the Nazi force was being worn down by Hitler's attempts.

Why The Weather?

Calms! We are sometimes asked: "Are there places with no winds?" A quiet atmosphere means no winds and no up-and-down currents. To realize this there must be no differences in temperature, as that is the primary cause of wind. Absolute calm is seldom realized anywhere for long. There are, however, three zones which are called, "belts of calm". One is the equatorial belt of calms where there are frequent calms but also light, variable winds and even thunderstorms and squalls. The other two, called "horse latitudes", are located at 35 degrees north and 30 degrees south latitude. In these regions calms are also frequent but there are light variable winds a good deal of the time; and, in contrast to the equatorial belt, the skies are generally clear.

N. Z. Pilot Has Remarkable Escape From Death

Auckland, N.Z., Sept. 11 (CP)—One of the most remarkable flying incidents of the war has been revealed in a letter from Flt.-Lt. A. C. Deere, New Zealand ace with the Royal Air Force, in a letter to his parents. Deere has recently been awarded a Bar to his Distinguished Flying Cross.

"I was in a dogfight with some Messerschmitt 109's and had shot down one when another tried to get on my tail," the airman writes. "We both manoeuvred for position, finishing up by shooting at one another head-on.

"He wouldn't give way and neither would I, so we finished up by colliding. He went straight into the sea.

"I tried to bail out, but had to sit there, as my hood had been pushed in. My machine caught fire and I eventually crashed in a field, mowing down posts en route. I managed to batter by way out and escaped with bruises.

"I was up flying again next morning.

CONCENTRATIONS ON FRENCH COAST HEAVILY BOMBED

Focke-Wulf Airplane Factory and Docks at Bremen Attacked

London, Sept. 11—(CP)—Widespread bombinb attacks by British planes on concentrations of barges along the German-held French, Belgian and Netherlands coasts such as might be used for an invasion of Britain, were reported tonight by the Air Ministry.

The Ministry repeated a previous account that the Potsdam station, one of the main railway termini of Berlin, had been the target of direct hits followed by fires in last night's spectacular bombing of the German capital.

It also reported attacks on the Focke-Wulf airplane factory and docks at Bremen and new onslaughts on the German big gun emplacements at Cap Gris Nez, from which Dover has been shelled across the English channel.

Bodies Removed from Plane and Taken to Trenton Undertaking Parlors

Belleville, Sept. 11 (Special) — Royal Canadian Air Force ground crews delved deep into the muddy marsh north of Huff's Island, four miles south of this city today to extricate the Finch Trainer that carried Flight-Lieutenant Fred L. Sims, of London, Ont., and Flying Officer William R. Swanson, California, to their deaths late yesterday afternoon.

The bodies of the dead officers were taken from a muddy bog three feet below the wreckage of their machine by Ridley Wallbridge, Huff's Island farmer, an eyewitness to the crash, William Nightingale, Wilfred Motley, Clifford Barber, Clayton Moy and other Huff's Island farmers, a few minutes after the machine crashed.

British and French Airmen Destroy 177 Italian Planes

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 11 (AP)—British airmen and Frenchmen fighting with them have definitely destroyed 177 Italian aircraft and probably destroyed 90 more in near Eastern war operations in the three months since Italy entered the war, an authoritative British survey said today.

These successes were credited to fliers of the Royal Air Force, the Royal South African Air Force, the Rhodesian Squadron and their French Allies.

During the three months more than 600 ton of bombs were dropped on objectives in Italian territory and aircraft of the R.A.F. alone have flown more than 2,500,000 miles, the Survey said.

Island Fortress Ready for Nazis Able to Battle Their Way Ashore

By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 11 (CP Cable)—Speculation that Hitler is preparing to launch his threatened invasion brought the terse comment from a high British source today that "wherever they come this island fortress is ready for any Nazi able to battle their way ashore."

When the Fuehrer decided to take the big gamble it is generally agreed he will make his main push across the Channel and use Norway as a subsidiary base.

British airmen are keeping an intense watch over all areas from which the thrust might come.

Barge concentrations have been observed at Hamburg, Emden, Dunkerque, Ostend and Boulogne and dealt with accordingly. The fleet air arm has been carrying out offensive reconnaissances over the Norwegian coast.

"The fleet air arm is watching up there," one source comment, after the disclosure yesterday of widespread activity of Skuas—naval dive bombers—attacking oil stores and hutments in Norway.

Activity in Norway?

Some circles regard as a certain sign of German activity in Norway the great lengths the Nazis went to deny that British naval forces sank a troop transport in the Skagerrak Sept 2. The loss was reported from Sweden from which country came a report that Germans are offering a reward for recovery of equipment from the ship.

Invasion from Norway would depend upon Nazi control of the sea and that is where His Majesty's navy would have something to say. Compared with the short crossing of 20 miles in the Channel, it is about 250 miles from the nearest point of Norway to Scotland. The Nazis would need big ships to try a thrust from Norway but many observers believe they may have to take this chance if a channel foray failed—as all British officials are convinced it would.

There have been reports the Germans are massing barges with airplane engines along the Channel coast between Ostend and Dieppe. One source pointed out that a barge is a barge and is not likely to exceed 10 or 12 knots even if driven with the most powerful engines.

Some circles regard the Nazi air attack on London as a diversion to hide invasion preparations. Others view it as an effort to wear down the Royal Air Force fighter strength and to cripple communications—but still as a prelude to an attempt to land large forces.

Canada Needs Your Support, Buy War Loan Bonds NOW

OTTAWA, Sept. 11 (CP)—"Canada's second war loan, now being sold, is a direct, emphatic appeal to the people of this country for money to arm and equip our fighting forces," Finance Minister Ilsley said in a statement to The Canadian Press today.

"I hope there is no misunderstanding of the fact that support is needed from every man and woman who is able to subscribe.

"Here is an opportunity for the many to show how they feel about the few whose courage is winning the day for us all.

"Can any one of us forget for one moment of our waking hours what is taking place in England at this time; in London where millions count their waking hours almost as the sum of the 24? No contribution that we can offer will compare with the sacrifices being made by those in the line of fire, including our own Canadian airmen, soldiers and seamen. But they need and must have all the help we can give.

"Canada will want it to be said, not that this loan was moderately successful, not that it was subscribed by relatively few of our people, but that it went over the top because of the whole-hearted support of great numbers of Canadians.

"I address the many patriotic citizens who all along have intended to subscribe, but who for one reason or another have not carried intention into effect. Time has now become important. There is still a big job to be done. Buy your war loan bonds now!

"I urge all who are able to participate in this campaign to take their places without delay, and subscribe to the limit of their ability."

King and Queen Caught In Tour of Bombed Area Sheltered Under Station

By HAROLD FAIR

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 11 (CP).—Caught by alarm sirens in a street during a tour of a bombed area of London, the King and Queen today took shelter under a police station, a few yards away from a heap of rubble which was a court house before a Nazi airman dropped a bomb Saturday night.

In a bleak, poorly-lighted shelter there was one of the strangest assortments of humanity these class-levelling sirens ever brought together.

Their Majesties sat on bare wooden chairs in the centre of the room, the King in service dress of a field marshal, the Queen wearing a two-piece suit in almond beige. On forms around the walls were policemen, court officials, overalled air raid precautions workers fresh from the ruins next door, and white-smocked women from the police canteen.

Their Majesties, who spent the morning inspecting bomb damage in the outer suburbs of southeast London, were driven to the police station, led by cars which had been escorting them.

When they walked into the shelter about thirty people already there stared in astonishment, then clapped their hands. The King leaned back in his chair, crossed his legs comfortably and lit a cigarette. The Queen sat composedly, smiling, with a fox fur across her knees.

One canteen woman bustled about making tea. It was not quite ready when the sirens sounded again. The King who was the first to hear them remarked: "It's all clear but I am going to wait for some of this tea."

Find Tea Delicious

In a few moments they were drinking it from heavy china cups bearing the mark of the police canteen.

"This is delicious," said the Queen. "I should never have thought you could produce tea so soon." The smiling woman replied: "It's just a method we have.".

Tears were near the Queen's eyes often during the morning when their Majesties saw dozens of scenes of devastation and talked sympathetically with women who had lost loved ones or had homes shattered.

As they came from a bomb crater in the middle of a block of workers' flats, men and women pressed around, cheering, and began to sing: "There'll always be an England".

Dust gathered on the Queen's shoes and stockings as they climbed over great heaps of rubbish which once made up a dozen small homes.

Here an old women told her Majesty that her daughter and grandson had been killed while another women told the Queen that "Hitler can knock our houses down but he can't get us down."

The Queen told the people: "We think you are all wonderfully brave and we are very proud of you." One woman answered: "And we are proud of you!"

At another block of flats where a bomb had fallen a woman told the King: "Hitler has to have a bodyguard wherever he goes. You don't need a bodyguard when you come down here. God bless you and keep you both."

PLANE MAKING UNAFFECTED BY AIR OFFENSIVE

Damage to British Aircraft Plants of Little Consequence

London, Sept. 11 (CP).—It was learned on good authority today that the German air offensive has made practically no difference to the rate of plane production in Britain. It was admitted that there had been slight damage to plants in some places but none of great consequence. Spokesmen welcomed this news particularly because it is known that German aircraft production has suffered from operations of Royal Air Force raiders.

Norse Parliament Postpones Deposing Of King Haakon

Oslo, Norway, Sept. 11—(AP via Berlin) — The German-dominated Norwegian Parliament today declared King Haakon is no longer able to function, but decided to postpone until after the war the question of whether he will be allowed to return to his country. He is in London.

By the decision, the Norwegian Government in London, where King Haakon took refuge after his country was occupied by the German army, is considered here to have resigned and a new "government" is named.

The chief of the new "government" is Ingolf Elster Christensen, 68, as regent.

R. A. F. FIGHTERS QUICKLY BREAK-UP THIRD DAY RAID

Anti - Aircraft Barrage Breaks Nazis Up and Fighters Do the Rest

RAID 1 1-2 HOURS LONG

On Thames Estuary Another Battle Raged High in the Skies

London, Sept. 11—(CP)—London had its third air raid warning at 5.03 p.m. (12.03 p.m. EDT) today.

More than half an hour later anti-aircraft guns opened fire in the London area. High above the city the drone of airplane motors could be heard.

German planes could be seen flying over a target off to the southeast. Anti-aircraft batteries put up an unusually heavy barrage.

Attacks by British fighter planes appeared to break up a circular formation of German bombers.

The thud of bombs intermingled with the bark of anti-aircraft guns as the erman planes broke formation under a heavy attack and made off in groups of two and three, flying at about 15,000 feet.

Up to 30 large German bombers swept out of the southeast. British fighters attacked and for two minutes the air was filled with planes, the sun glinting on their wings, and their machine guns cracking.

One Plane Downed

One plane to the southeast went into a spin and fell.

As anti-aircraft fire ringed the battle area, the Germans scattered to all points of the compass, pursued by the British fighting planes.

The sound of heavy bomb explosions could be heard from the southwest and the southeast, interspersed with the barking of anti-aircraft batteries of a greater intensity than any yet heard.

Farther down the Thames estuary, another battle was raging high in the skies.

The all-clear signal sounded at 4.40 p.m. (11.40 a.m. EDT), one hour and 20 minutes after the warning.

Britain's Strength in Mediterranean Increased During the Past Ten Days

London, Sept. 11 (CP).—A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the London Rotary Club today "we are stronger in the Mediterranean than we were ten days ago."

He also made a reference to press reports of "mass concentrations by the enemy making his dispositions for entrance into this country" and declared:

"I can promise that if the enemy come across in surface craft they are going to get something to go on with.

"Quite apart from the use of the fleet in resisting invasion of this country, it is going to have a tremendous part to play in the forging of the main weapons of victory."

Their Majesties Not in Palace; No One Injured

Paintings and Other Art Objects Removed From Palace Some Time Ago

By SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 11 (CP Cable)—A small wing of Buckingham Palace which contained the royal swimming pool has been wrecked by a German time bomb but Their Majesties were not there at the time and no member of the household staff was injured.

The bomb buried itself in the palace grounds during Sunday night's dusk-to-dawn German raid and exploded Tuesday.

The fury of the explosion hurled one-ton blocks of masonry about the lawn and shot a jagged section of a stone pillar weighing a hundredweight over the broad roof of the palace into the courtyard. At least 100 windows were smashed.

No member of the Royal Family was in residence at the palace when the bomb fell or when it detonated.

The wing of the massive stone structure which was scarred by flying fragments lost all its windows. It contains no sleeping quarters so members of the royal staff and the household were not endangered by the blast.

Fell 10 Paces From Pool

The bomb fell 10 paces from the swimming pool. Eighty feet long, 40 feet wide and one storey high, the wing containing the pool juts from the palace's northwest corner.

Government Control Of Residential Rents Likely to Be Made

Ottawa, Sept. 11—(CP)—An announcement of the government control of residential rents, already a problem of several centres under wartime pressure for accommodation, will be made "shortly," it was learned from an authoritative source Tuesday.

Protests against high rents are being received in increasing volume from centres where the war has brought about a heavy concentration of families, it is reported, and these protests have been receiving the attention of various government agencies. It is expected the early announcement will be that of the appointment of rent controller.

It was expected some action would be taken at yesterday's cabinet council but the official report after the meeting was that the ministers were occupied with routine orders and some judicial appointments, details of which will be announced today.

Instances of sharp increases in house and apartment rentals are being reported daily in such centres as Ottawa, Halifax, Kingston and other cities to which the war activity has brought large numbers of new residents.

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has jurisdiction over material necessities of life such as food, clothing and fuel, but its scope does not extend to rentals. If any official action is to be taken by the board to restrict undue increases the government will extend its powers.

MODERN JEWISH CITY BOMBED

150 Persons Killed at Tel Aviv by Italian Bombing Raids

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 11.—(AP)—At least 150 persons were killed in a heavy Italian bombing raid on the moden Jewish city of Tel Aviv yesterday, late dispatches from British-mandated Palestine disclosed.

The British command in Cairo previously had reported at least 56 civilians killed, huge fires set and scores of homes destroyed along Tel Aviv's palm-lined avenues. The area attacked was far from any military objective.

An American citizen named Pears was among those killed. Five of the dead were children.

The raiding planes, besides dropping a large number of bombs, also showered leaflets printed in Arabic recounting alleged achievements of the Rome-Berlin Axis and urging the population to break with the British.

Tel Aviv, in the Dunes near the port of Jaffa, which also was bombed yesterday, is a city of more than 100,000 population, built largely through contributions of American Jewry, and is headquarters for Zionist organizations.

Among those killed in the raid was Theodore Fehr, 41, listed as a United States citizen, who arrived in Palestine in 1935. He was naturalized in 1928.

The officials listed only seven Arabs among the 112 recovered bodies. The others were Jews, many of whom, it was believed, formerly lived in the United States. The list included names like Goldman, Ginsberg, Bernstein and Telmann.

One Jewish mother, a wartime volunteer nurse, returned to her home to find it demolished and many neighbors killed and wounded but her own infant daughter unhurt. The child has lost only a shoe.

Prince Torlonia Has Been Released

Rome, Sept. 11—(AP)—An authoritative source said today that Prince Alessandro Torlonio, wealthy young Roman nobleman, had been released after detention for questioning.

Friends of the Prince, whose mother is the former Elsie Moore of New York, said yesterday he had been arrested in a roundup of Italians suspected of "anti-Fascist or defeatist tendencies."

The same authority said Prince Filippo Doria-Pamphili, 54, owner of extensive property, had been sent into "political confinement", but claimed there was no widespread roundup of Defeatists in Italy.

Prince Filippo, son of Lady Emily Pellam-Clinton-Hope and grandson of the Duke of Newcastle, and described as a known anti-Fascist, was accused of open expressions of "Defeatism and Anti-Fascism".

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

BELLEVILLE BOMBED WITH LOAN PAMPHLETS

Belleville was bombed from the air on Tuesday afternoon—bombed with thousands of fluttering pamphlets advertising Canada's second war loan. Just before four o'clock three huge R.C.A.F. bombers roared over the city and circled in formation. Descending until they seemed to just clear the trees, the flyers broke their formation and roared over the city streets tossing out the pamphlets which scattered to the ground like leaves on an autumn wind.

"Buy Bonds to Avoid Bombing" was the message on one side of the pamphlets while on the reverse side Canadians were urged to do their bit to help Canada's war effort. After scattering the leaflets, the bombers re-assembled into formation and roared away into the West.

NEW HOSE TRUCK IN FIRE DEPARTMENT

Adding considerably to the efficiency of the local fire-fighting apparatus, the new hose truck, purchased by the city last spring, was delivered to the Belleville Fire Department on Monday evening. The new truck, replacing one which had served for 21 years, was purchased without the body and was delivered to Aselstine's Garage where the body was built on the truck chassis and the completed job speaks well of the artistry of local craftmanship.

With approximately double the capacity of the truck it replaces, the new equipment carres 1,800 feet of hose, together with hand pumps and other fire-fighting equipment.

Peterborough was named as one of the training centres for the forthcoming compulsory military training periods as provided by the Department of National Defence, with Lieut.-Col. Keeler in charge.

Inspector Frank Gardner of the Provincial Police headquarters here, today revealed that no clues had been obtained in the police investigation looking into the $400.00 robbery at the Brighton Post Office on Monday night. Bomb Splinters
From Battle of Britain

By D. E. BURRITT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 11 (CP)—Ability of an observer to recognize a German bomber flying at 17,000 feet enabled him to report to a fighter command and have British planes sent into the air within a few minutes. In less than 40 minutes from the time the enemy plane was spotted the fighters had returned, another Junkers 88 to their credit.

In a forced landing, a British trainer plane ploughed up the garden of M. W. Batten but when the Government offered to pay for the damage the Devon farmer replied: "Please put the amount towards a new plane."

Heavy calibre bombs demolished the home of William Hurrell and left only a huge crater and one wall. Rescue workers found Hurrell at the bottom of the crater, suffering from only minor injuries. On the one wall was the fireplace—filled with potatoes blown from the garden.

A lone Anson reconnaissance craft with a crew in training warded off attack by a Messerschmitt fighter which dived 1,500 feet, guns wide open. The Anson gunner, according to the Air Ministry News Service, waited until the German was within 300 yards and then let go with his own gun. The German, surprised at the sudden resistance, banked sharply and flew back to rejoin his squadron in the distance.

One London departmental store tells its customers not to risk their lives by standing on the street to watch air battles. They have a special man for the job. So when customers enter the shelter they are informed as to what is going on in the sky, by a voice coming over a loudspeaker from an observer on the roof.

You can place your own interpretation on the following remark made by a 19-year-old German pilot who bailed out of a wrecked bomber:—

"This is the first time I have ever been in England, and I expect it will be my last."

Explosion of a delayed action bomb blew a soldier out of his house through a big hole in the wall. But he didn't have to leave his bed. It went with him—though slightly disarranged.

London buses which turn out all interior lights during air raid alarms have produced a new "soft floodlight." They are just to show boarding passengers where the platform is.

Peterboro Merchants May Observe Mid-Week Holiday During Year

In Peterboro a movement to continue the Wednesday afternoon mid-week half holidays for merchants and clerks for a period of ten months in the year was suggested recently. Already the butchers and grocery merchants of Peterboro have signified their intentions to continue the mid-week half holidays for all months of the year, except November and December. A petition will be placed before the October meeting of the Peterboro city council for ratification for a necessary bylaw.

Unfavorable Conditions Affect Tomato Crop

The tomato crop in Hastings and Prince Edward counties has been adversely affected by lack of rain, recent frosts and unfavourable weather with farmers estimating the present season's crop as being from 50 to 80 per cent. of normal. Farmers state that the fruit is not attaining full size before ripening and plants are withering as a result of the dry spell. The August frost ruined a number of fields.

This shortening of the crop has led to several factories in the Prince Edward area increasing the price per bushel to farmers from 35 cents as contracted, to forty cents. These factories include Colliver and Leavens and the W. H. Benson factories at Cherry Valley and the United Canners factories at Cressy and Wellington.

Though the yield per acre may be down this season, it is estimated that the acreage in Prince Edward is at least fifty per cent. greater than last year. In 1939, the contract price was 30c per bushel and the increase in price this year resulted in the greater acreage.

The five-cent increase in price will mean considerable to those farmers contracting with factories increasing the price and also to those with uncontracted acreage. Factories disposed of their previous years' packs last fall and this spring without difficulty.

Police Blotter

Belleville police today recovered several valuable homing pigeons, that had been stolen from two local pens during the past week. Jack Holley, 279B Front St., reported the theft of three prize homing pigeons over the weekend, while Jan Geneja, janitor at Albert College, reported the same trouble last week. However, one of Mr. Holley's "homers" returned home yesterday and later Detective Fred Isard found the remainder of the prize birds being kept in solitary confinement by two local juvenile lads. The birds were returned to their respective owners, while the two lads responsible were instructed to report to Chief Kidd after school hours this afternoon. "A little young to be prize pigeon fanciers," remarked Detective Isard as he recovered the birds.

Car Found Abandoned

Found abandoned west of Rossmore, a 1936 model Chevrolet coach was recovered by police yesterday. The vehicle was the property of George Maybee, of this city, and had been stolen from its parking position on Boswell St. the evening previous. Joy-riders are blamed for the theft. The vehicle was returned to Mr. Maybee less than 24 hours after it was reported stolen. With the exception of a depletion of gasoline, no noticeable property damage resulted.

Motorist Complains

W. R. Nesbit, Toronto motorist, complained to city police last night at midnight regarding his automobile having been forced off Highway No. 2 east of Belleville and into a hydro pole, resulting in considerable damage to the vehicle.

Mr. Nesbit stated a motor car swerved suddenly from out of a laneway onto the four-lane highway and directly in front of his car, forcing him to swerve sharply to the right and strike the hydro pole. The entire right side of the motor car was badly damaged. A description of the vehicle responsible for the accident was afforded police by Mr. Nesbit and investigations are proceeding.

OBITUARY

MRS. FRANCES MOUNTNEY
(Trenton)

Mrs. Frances Mountney, 37 Baptist Street, Trenton, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Wednesday morning, at the age of 65 years. She was a patient in the hospital since August 21st. last.

MRS. ANDREW HAY,
(Mount Pleasant)

Rawdon, (Special)—Mrs. Andrew Hay, formerly Mary Eliza Hubble, passed away at her home, Mount Pleasant, on Wednesday, August 28th, 1940, in her 84th year.

After marriage she spent several years at Cordova and following that the family moved back to Mount Pleasant. Mr. Hay predeceased her several years ago.

Mrs. Hay has been in fair health and in June of this year the Woman's Missionary Society tendered her a birthday party and quilted one of her quilts which, she had pieced herself. The party was held at a later date as she had been spending the winter months with relatives in Belleville.

Mrs. Hay was ill only a few weeks before her death and her passing brings to a close the life of another of our pioneers. She was a faithful member of Mount Pleasant United Church as long as health permitted.

She leaves to mourn two sons, John of Mount Pleasant, Arthur of Chatham, one daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Caverly, Marmora. Two sons, Clarence and Kenneth are pre-deceased. There are twenty-one grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren, also one brother, Mr. David Hubble and one sister, Mrs. Emily Tyler, both of Rednersville.

The funeral service was held on Friday afternoon, August 30th in Mount Pleasant United Church with her pastor, Rev. J. E. Beckel in charge, who brought a message of comfort based on Psalm 42.

By request the choir sang "Good Night Here and Good Morning Up There" and the hymns were "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Nearer My God to Thee." The interment was made in the adjoining cemetery beside her husband.

WILLIAM THOMPSON,
(Wellman's Corners)

Rawdon, (Special)—Mr. William Thompson of Wellman's Corners, son of Fanny Wilson Thompson and the late Mr. Albert Thompson, died very suddenly in his motor car near Harold, suffering from a heart attack early Saturday morning, in his sixty-fourth year.

Deceased was well known in Rawdon township, having lived in that vicinity most of his life.

He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Margaret Watson of Petherick's Corners and his second wife, Miss Emma Ketcheson, of Roslin. There were no children born to either union and both wives are predeceased.

He leaves to mourn his aged mother, Mrs. Albert Thompson, who has resided with him this summer since the death of his second wife in February, one sister, Susan, Mrs. Robert Maybee, Campbellford and one brother, Jeddy Thompson, Whitby.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watson sang "Will the Circle be Unbroken?" Beautiful floral tributes covered the casket. The interment was made beside his first wife in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

LATE WILLIAM P. CLARKE

The funeral of William Paul Clarke took place Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 10th, from his residence, 93 South Front Street. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. William T. Keough, assisted by the Rev. Roy Rickards of Colborne.

The bearers were Messrs. Benjamin Clarke, F. M. Clarke, E. M. Clarke, R. C. Clarke, A. Clazie and Dr. M. J. Clarke.

MRS. IDA G. WILLIAMS,
(Murray Township)

Frankford, Sept. 11—(Special)—Mrs. Ida Gertrude Williams, a former resident of Murray Township and Frankford, and for the past eleven years a resident of Kenmore, N.Y., passed away in the 6th concession of Murray Township, Northumberland County, on Friday, Sept. 6th. She arrived in this district a short time ago to visit friends and was taken ill a few days later. For the past year she was in failing health.

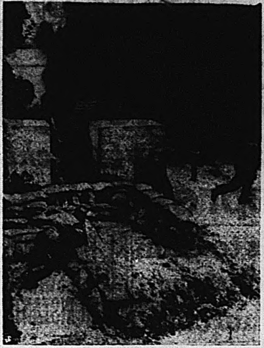
The late Mrs. Williams was born 53 years ago in Murray Township and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Christie Bates. In this district she was well known and in the regard of many friends she held a high place. She possessed many fine traits of character and her life was devoted to helping others. In religion she was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her is one sister, Miss Mae Bates, Reg. N., of Detroit, Mich.

The funeral took place from the residence of her cousin Mr. J. S. Powell on Monday, Sept. 9th. The service in the home and at the graveside in Stockdale Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Newman, pastor of Holloway Street United Church, Belleville, assisted by the Rev. J. F. Lane, pastor of the United Church in Frankford. A very comforting message was brought to the friends by the Rev. Royal E. Newman, a close friend of the deceased and of the family, from Mark, 14th chapter and 8th verse: "She hath done what she could." He brought out very forcefully the sterling worth and beauty of her character as she made every problem an opportunity for achievement. She poured out her life in service to humanity and many of those to whom she ministered "will rise up and call her blessed."

The bearers were cousins of the deceased and were as follows: Messrs. Clayton Powell, Jonathan Powell, Hugh Powell, Milton Bryant, Leland Bryant and Lyle Bryant.

REHEARSING "HOT W ELCOME" FOR NAZIS



Home guards, drilling constantly for the threatened Nazi invasion, rehearse a reception for Nazi tanks or armored cars which might approach their road barrier. The vehicle, hit by several gasoline grenades which, in the Finnish campaign, became known as "Molotov Cocktails," burst into flames and crashed out of control into one of the huge concrete blocks. The guardsmen are running into positions to pick off the crew.

REICHSTAG HIT

cautions workers prevented "numerous incendiary bombs from causing bigger damage," the communique went on.

Little Damage Claimed

The high command acknowledged bombs were dropped in northern France, Belgium and elsewhere in northern Germany, but insisted they "caused but little damage."

"Some enemy planes succeeded in penetrating Berlin, unloading bombs," said the communique. "At numerous places in residential and business sections fires started."

In the raid which began shortly after midnight, and lasted nearly two hours incendiary bombs pierced the roof of the Reichstag, presently unused but still regarded by Germans as a symbol of the Reich. Workmen were said to have extinguished the flames immediately.

Bombs also struck the Academy of Arts, next door to the United States Embassy, as well as a small hotel and two hospitals, and churned craters in Under Den Linden and other thoroughfares. The American Embassy was undamaged.

Peppered With Bombs

An air defence officer estimated that 10 to 20 British planes took part in the raid, attacking in four waves. The first wave released flares and succeeding formations dipped low to drop their bombs and turn their machine-guns on searchlight positions.

The Reichstag building, being reconstructed slowly since the 1933 fire which Communists were accused of starting and which marked a sensational incident in the rise of Nazis to power, is only a few streets from the Wilhelmstrasse.

A 500-pound bomb crashing into the smart Unter Den Linden district fell within 300 yards of the United States Embassy. This section was peppered with incendiary bombs.

Streets Closed Off

Incendiary missiles struck the Brandenburg Gate, familiar sight to Berlin visitors between the American and French Embassies. They hit the handsome six-arch monument to the left of the figure of the Goddess of Victory driving a four-horse chariot.

An explosive bomb near the Ministry of the Interior blew out building occupied by the Berlin the ground floor windows of a Bureau of International News Service, American News Agency. Members of its staff were unable to go to work for a time because of bomb damage in the vicinity.

Heavy calibre bombs exploded in the centre of the Avenue of Splendor—handsome street through the Tiergarten Park. A 12-foot hole was blasted in the pavement.

Police closed off other streets because of fear of the presence of duds and possible German-type delayed-action bombs.

GERMAN REFUGEES LEAVE

Bucharest, Sept. 11 (AP).—First trainloads of German refugees from Soviet-occupied Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, formerly parts of Rumania, rolled northward today toward the Reich from Galati.

MRS. I. M. STEVENS CONSECON, HURT

Sustains Two Broken Legs and Fractured Arm Being Hit by Car—Child Also Struck

Trenton, Sept. 11 (Special to the Ontario Intelligencer)—Two motor accidents of an identical nature resulted in two pedestrians being injured, one badly, and rushed to the Belleville hospital last night. The accidents were in different parts of the town and resulted when the victims walked into the paths of different automobiles and were struck to the roadway.

Mrs. Ida M. Stevens, 69, of Consecon, was struck by a motor car driven by Mrs. Lois McKee, Carrying Place, at the southern entrance to the town limits when the injured woman was in company with her husband and apparently endeavouring to solicit a ride towards Consecon. Mrs. Stevens sustained two broken legs and a fractured arm.

She was given first aid at the scene by Dr Jack Farley of Trenton, and then rushed to the Belleville hospital, where Dr. G. S. Cronk of that city, reduced the fractures. Today Mrs. Stevens was reported to be in a serious condition.

According to Trenton police Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were walking along the Carrying Place road at the town limits, seeking a ride to Consecon. Mrs. McKee told the police she observed a form cross the road and retarded the speed of her car. "Suddenly the person commenced to retrace their steps back across the road and stepped right into the path of my car," Mrs. McKee is reported to have told police here.

Seven-year-old Georgina Benn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Benn, 134 McGill Street, was also knocked down by a motor car driven by Leslie Warren of the R.C.A.F. near her home. Although the little girl was rushed to the Belleville hospital, no fractures were sustained and today her condition was reported favourable.

Child Playing

The little Benn girl was playing with two school girl chums and all three crossed the street. Mr. Warren told the police that as he drove along the street at a moderate rate of speed suddenly two of the girls turned about and retraced their steps, the little Benn girl running directly into the left front fender of the vehicle and knocked to the pavement. General bruises and shock were the most serious injuries sustained.

Police added no charges had been preferred in either case today.

TOURING IN CANADA

(Letter in New York Herald Tribune.)

Sir: Mrs. Kellogg and I have just returned from a 3,300-mile automobile trip, during which we entered Canada via Niagara Falls and came out at Calais, Me., with stops at all large cities and numerous small, out-of-the-way places. We were warmly welcomed everywhere, and the only regret expressed anywhere was that fewer Americans than usual are in Canada this summer.

With the possible exception of the hotels in Ottawa and Quebec, rates are the same as they have always been, and in the smaller communities—particularly in the Gaspe-New Brunswick country—they are very moderate. Uncle Sam's dollars are received for $1.10 everywhere, and that, too, is no little item on an extended trip.

I have travelled in Canada for 35 years, and never had less bother with customs and immigration authorities, either going or coming, than this time. In fact, the only question asked was as to birthplace, and no substantiating documents were required in connection therewith.

R. S. KELLOGG.

Persons Must Produce Registration Cards To Secure Markers

Registrars of motor vehicles throughout the province have received orders not to issue markers or drivers' permits to persons who cannot produce registration cards, thus providing a definite check on any possible delinquents.

This information was contained in a memorandum received on Monday by Mr. Edgar Vermilyea, local issuer of licences, from J. P. Bickell, registrar of motor licences.

Undoubtedly this regulation will work a hardship on many people but the leaders of the country have seen fit to put teeth in the law regarding the carrying of registration cards and the law will be strictly enforced. In other years it was the custom for one person from a distant village or from rural areas to come in and buy markers and operators' permits for 15 or 20 of his friends, thus saving the latter a trip to the city, but under the new ruling this will not be possible.

Canadians who spend the winter in Florida and who were in the habit of having markers mailed to them in Florida will also have to produce registration cards, either by mail or before they leave in order to get the markers.

The letter of instructions is brief and perfectly clear and it says in part: "Licences and permits are henceforth issued only to persons producing proper registration certificates in the name of the person to whom the licence or permit is issued."

Strides Made in Construction Of Aero-Engines Basis of Talk At Kiwanis Club Luncheon

Flying Officer Edward Herridge in Charge of Repair Depot at Trenton Air Station is Speaker

SERVED AT DUNKIRK

The remarkable strides made during the past fifteen years in the construction of the aero-engine, and the many improvements perfected, which are now standard equipment on all Britain's Air Force planes was the theme of a highly instructive address given yesterday to Belleville Kiwanians at their weekly Country Club luncheon, by Flying Officer Edward Herridge, officer in charge of Repair Depot No. 6 at the Trenton R. C. A. F. base.

The speaker's description of fuels and oils, materials, and such improvements as the Fuel-Air Ratio Analyser, carburetors, valves, aneroids, superchargers, boosters, automatic mixture controls, and starters, revealed a perfect knowledge of his theme. Flying Officer Herridge was a former member of the famous Rolls-Royce Motor Car Company in England — served in the now famous Battle of France and the historic retreat from Dunkirk, and recently arrived in Canada from England.

Largest Stride in Materials

The largest strides were made, he said, in materials, especially Stalite, a substance so hard it cannot be filed, and ground by special stones. It is used for facing of exhaust valves, because of the corrosive and pitting effects of high octane fuels, and of the hard wear on parts of high speed engines. A combination of nickle, chrome and manganese is used in valve rings. These and other materials have contributed to more hours of engine life which, after all, is the goal of the aero-engineer.

"Recovery of power from cooling and exhaust systems was another important step made," he said. "This is made by the ducting of heated air from the engine and by further exhausting, an aero-dynamic effect is secured. The Americans are using an exhaust-driven supercharger with good results.

The Rolls-Royce engines used in Spitfires and Battles are equipped with ejection exhaust manifolds. Instead of the exhaust shooting out of the ordinary ports, it is shot through an air-jacket and the resulting mixture causes a propulsion effect that gives more power.

"Britain", Flying Officer Herridge said, "is a long way from finality in engine and aero construction work".

Great Change in Carburetor

One of the greatest changes that has taken place is in the aerial carburetor, the speaker said. The minute a plane starts to rise atmospheric pressure causes a decrease in available oxygen. The actual mixture must be maintained, or engine revolutions will fall off. This was formerly done by hand but now is done automatically by a device called an Aneroid, that is controlled by atmospheric pressure and adjusts the mixture as the occasion demands.

Detonation, the main source of trouble in an aero engine has been eliminated by a device called a supercharger "Booster." Enriched mixture at high boost pressure and slow burning often resulted in cracked cylinders. The new device offsets this trouble by automatic regulation.

Another automatic control offsets damage done to engines by too much boost pressure. No matter how much mixture the pilot gives his engine, the new control retards the throttle and eliminates engine trouble. In the case of a fight however, when every available ounce of power is needed, the new control can be eliminated at will by a special lever. This is sealed while the pilot is in training.

Six stages of starters were gone through before the present modern electric device was invented. The first machines had the Huck starter. Others were crank, inertia, gas, cartridge.

Fuels and Oils Keep Pace
